Welcome to the eighth edition of the Rough Guide to Accessible Britain, brought to you in collaboration with Rough Guides and Motability Operations. Crammed with enticing reviews and essential access information for 200 attractions, including 25 new destinations, your options for exploring Britain just keep expanding!

Of course, great access is not only essential for people with disabilities, it also eases the pressure on carers. So, in this edition we’ve been working with the Carers Trust to highlight how attractions are meeting the needs of Britain’s seven million unpaid carers.

This means that this revised Guide doesn’t just focus on physical access but also on provisions for those with learning difficulties, sensory issues, autism and mental health issues – such as online virtual tours so visitors can see where they are going in advance, providing quiet spaces, specially trained staff, early opening sessions and small group tours.

Provisions, like free entry for carers, show how venues are becoming more and more thoughtful towards the carers who play an invaluable role in the lives of many people, enabling them to enjoy the day out as much as the person they are caring for.

Personally, it’s been over 20 years since I visited Scotland, and my children have never been there. So, I’m particularly excited about the new Scottish entries – the V&A in Dundee, Scottish Parliament Buildings and the Edinburgh Festival. They sound like a brilliant excuse to start planning a holiday up north, booking well in advance for the Edinburgh Festival of course!

Closer to home there’s Trebah Garden in Cornwall and Walks on Wheels in the Cotswolds – great opportunities to get out on an all-terrain Tramper with my family, including Topsy our Border Terrier.

Where will you go? Whether you are using the Guide for inspiration for a day trip or a grand tour of Britain – happy exploring!

Emma West is a counsellor, disability benefit tribunal member and author, specialising in writing about disability and health. She lives in Exeter with her husband, Mike, and their two teenagers, Ben [13] and Archie [15]. Like Emma, Archie is an expert mobility-scooter user. In her spare time, Emma likes baking, reading, planning and going on holidays – next stop Scotland – and exploring the countryside on her all-terrain Tramper with her Border Terrier, Topsy.
About this book

Designed to be good to read and easy to use, this updated and expanded eighth edition of The Rough Guide to Accessible Britain is filled with inspirational and practical advice to help you plan your day out. Our team of dedicated reviewers, all with personal experience of either physical or cognitive conditions, have visited each venue in the guide to provide even more inclusive information.

The introductory highlights section – celebrating some of the finest accessible attractions in Britain – is a good place to start. The ten colour-coded regional chapters that follow are packed with reviews of a wide range of sights to suit all interests and abilities. Each review includes details about facilities for disabled visitors, plus ideas for places to eat on site or nearby.

In each chapter (with the exception of London), we have included a beautiful scenic drive, complete with a colour route map and suggested stops along the way. We’ve also written a town review for each region, which looks at access both around the town and at some of its main attractions. The following symbols have been used to highlight these features:

- Assisted wheelchair access
- Non-assisted wheelchair access
- Facilities for mobility impaired people
- Rest seats for mobility impaired people
- Accessible toilets
- Accessible car parking
- Powered scooters available
- Induction loops
- BSL interpreters
- Facilities for blind and visually impaired people
- Assistance dogs allowed
- Café/refreshments on site
- Restaurant on site
- Free entry for carers

Our reviewers try to consider all the questions and concerns you may have, but it’s always a good idea to call ahead to check on current conditions at an attraction, especially if you have specific requirements. Many places can be enjoyed independently, but we have made it clear where some assistance will help you make the most of your visit.

At the end of the guide, you’ll find useful contacts to help you plan holidays and days out in Britain, from travel advice to finding accommodation.

If you have any thoughts on this guide, or would like to order an alternative version, such as Braille, please email accessibleguide@motabilityoperations.co.uk.
Our team of authors have been hard at work travelling around the country reviewing attractions, to give you a detailed and accurate account of 200 sights and days out in the UK. We asked them to choose a place that they especially enjoyed visiting or which particularly impressed them – here are some of their own personal favourites.

Sarah Alexander

“I particularly love Stanwick Lakes because of how versatile it is; whether I go with my young nephews and they spend the day playing in the multiple play areas or I take my dogs for a walk around the lake, it’s always a lovely day out and really enjoyable.”

Dean Chaffer

“Staging a diverse musical programme from classical concerts to rock and pop, the Sage Gateshead offers a fully accessible musical experience. With superb views of the River Tyne, it’s an excellent place to visit and enjoy live music.”

Mark Cooper

“The Scottish Parliament impressed me because it manages to be a working tourist attraction and a working legislature simultaneously. The building has accessibility very much in mind, with staff only too happy to assist you to make your visit as seamless as possible.”

Mark Davidson

“A visit to Armagh in Northern Ireland isn’t complete without seeing the Navan Centre and Fort. One of Ireland’s most important archaeological sites, it provides a valuable insight into how people lived in this area during that period, 3000 years ago. A far cry from normal life, I sat in a reconstruction of a traditional house and heard about life all those centuries ago. Listening to tales from that time painted a fantastic picture of life as an Iron Age settler, although the smoke billowing out from the real fire made my eyes water somewhat! A short distance away, there are the remnants of the real Iron Age fort and settlement.”

Lucinda Hallett

“I really loved visiting the National Maritime Museum in Falmouth. It’s perfect for any weather and is close to the town centre, which has lots of nice restaurants. The museum has a clear layout, making it easy to get around, with lots of interactive displays. Staff are lovely and well trained for access needs. My favourite parts of the museum are being able to watch shipwrights making boats using traditional techniques and tools and seeing the fish outside in the marina itself through the huge underwater windows!”

William Lawrence-Smyth and Alison Coussins

“There was so much to explore and relish at RHS Wisley – the scale of the garden is so impressive, as is the variety of plants and experiences to be enjoyed. It is a place where you can learn, have fun, shop or just walk around. Refreshments are good too!”

Jane MacNamee

“Few places can surpass the serenity and splendour of the Mawddach Estuary (on the Snowdonia Scenic Drive), which makes it a firm favourite. I’ve been visiting it and enjoying the Mawddach trail for the past 20 years in all seasons and all weathers. It’s a glorious (9.5mile/15km) trail for all abilities, following the course of the river from Dolgellau out to sea, surrounded by mountains and crossing the impressive bridge at the mouth of the estuary over to Barmouth. It’s popular and deservedly so, but there is always a sense of peace here in the company of wading birds and the magical light of the tides.”

Hed Maginnis

“I found the Giant’s Causeway on the northeast coast of Ireland rugged, wild, wide open and windswept. The stones and the sea make an incredible scene.”

Emma Muldoon

“I loved visiting the Royal Yacht Britannia in Edinburgh. I didn’t expect to enjoy it as much as I did, but it was such a fun experience exploring the Queen’s former floating home. The audio tour of the Yacht was fun and interesting and the views across the water from the Royal Deck Tea Room are lovely. What is great about this attraction is that you don’t have to be a fan of the Royal Family to enjoy it. Who would have thought a yacht would be accessible, but wheelchair access is amazing throughout the entire boat. Very impressive!”

Louise Neeson

“A particular highlight for us was Seamus Heaney HomePlace. We had never been before and really enjoyed being tourists at home. A beautiful building, accessible throughout and entertaining for all.”

Jim Rawlings

“Comprising colourful heathland next to an open beach, Dunwich Heath is a tranquil spot right next to the RSPB reserve of Minsmere.”

Gillian Scotford and Jane Carver

Co-founders of Accessible Derbyshire (www.accessiblederbyshire.org), Gillian and Jane added Carsington Water to the Peak District Scenic Drive for this edition. They say, “Carsington Water, surrounded by stunning scenery, is a wonderful full day out. Fishing, sailing, cycling or a gentle stroll, there is something for everyone!”

Viv Watton

“When you have a child with special needs, going out and about is rarely easy, but one thing that makes a huge difference is staff that are understanding and helpful and Legoland has always been great at this. However, the real standout is the Total Sensory Space that they introduced in 2018, which is so well-equipped it could almost be a destination in its own right! Knowing there is a haven to retreat to if everything is getting a bit too much really takes the stress away.”

George Weller

“I really enjoyed visiting Wellcome Collection. The way they mix science, art and history makes it a great place to visit with friends, as there’s something to capture everyone’s interest. I particularly love the library and reading room, which provide a quiet space to read or just take a break in what is otherwise a very loud part of London.”

Emma West

“It’s impossible not to come away from Brunel’s SS Great Britain full of fascinating stories and facts, as well as inspiration and admiration for what was endured and achieved in this ship’s lifetime. You get all of that together with a warm welcome at this attraction, which has made huge efforts in terms of access. It’s somewhere my whole family love to go back to again and again (which you easily can as tickets last a year!).”
FAMILY HIGHLIGHTS

Anderton Boat Lift (Northwest, p.158) A spectacular feat of Victorian engineering, the Boat Lift boasts fantastic access, at both the visitor centre and on the boat trips.

Folly Farm (Wales, p.225) An award-winning site combining a farm, play areas, a vintage funfair and zoo on a two-hundred-acre site near the Pembrokeshire Coast National Park.

Jorvik Viking Centre (Northeast and Yorkshire, p.175) Travel back in time to 10th-century York and take in the sights, sounds and smells of a Viking city.

The Warner Bros. Studio Tour – The Making of Harry Potter (Southeast, p.51) Wander around the fabulous sets from the Harry Potter films, including Diagon Alley and Hogwarts’ Great Hall.
Heritage Highlights

Abbotsford (Scotland, p.208) Attractive grounds, an ultra-modern accessible visitor centre and the atmospheric former home of Sir Walter Scott make Abbotsford a great place to visit.

Giant’s Causeway (N. Ireland, p.232) Take an accessible shuttle bus to see the 40,000 basalt columns that make up Northern Ireland’s only UNESCO World Heritage Site.

IWM Duxford (E. Midlands & E. Anglia, p.111) Britain’s finest museum of military aviation has masses to see, and access requirements have been carefully considered.

Royal Shakespeare Company (W. Midlands & West Country, p.134) After extensive renovations, access to one of Britain’s finest arts organisations is now better than ever.

St Paul’s Cathedral (London, p.25) Sir Christopher Wren’s iconic masterpiece has lift access to the crypt and excellent facilities for those with sensory impairments.
FREE HIGHLIGHTS

Scottish National Portrait Gallery

Portstewart Strand
National Galleries Scotland (Scotland, p.202) Both the art and the accessibility are world class at the Scottish National Gallery and the Scottish National Portrait Gallery.

Portstewart Strand (N. Ireland, p.233) Two miles of glorious golden sand on the Derry coast – free to pedestrians and only a few pounds to take your car onto the beach for an accessible seaside experience.

The Whitworth (Northwest, p.155) Manchester University’s Whitworth Gallery succeeds in making great art accessible to all, with paintings, sculptures and textiles imaginatively displayed.

Walks on Wheels (West Midlands and West Country, p.138) Breathe in the exquisite Cotswolds countryside on one of fourteen Walks on Wheels, a collection of beautiful accessible rambles.

Wellcome Collection (London, p.22) Henry Wellcome’s collection of medicinal curiosities forms the basis of a series of excellent science and art exhibitions.
ACTIVE HIGHLIGHTS

Celtic Quest Coasteering (Wales, p.222)
Experience a unique activity that uses the sea as a gym – enthusiasm and willingness to give it a try are more important than being able to swim.

Gliding with Walking on Air (Scotland, p.197)
This committed, passionate charity opens up the exhilarating sport of gliding to people with disabilities.

iFLY Indoor Skydiving (Northwest, p.153)
Staff are able to help individuals with a range of disabilities to experience the thrill of freefall, in the comfort of an indoor centre.

Sandcastle Waterpark (Northwest, p.149)
Flumes, slides, a wave machine and excellent accessibility make the UK’s largest indoor waterpark a thrilling place to let yourself go.

Lee Valley White Water Centre (Southeast, p.48)
Everyone can have a go at rafting the Hertfordshire rapids at this site that was the venue for the 2012 Olympic white-water events.

A former Victorian steam-engine shed, The Roundhouse hosts a dynamic programme of live theatre, music, dance, comedy and circus. It aims to reach out to teenagers and young adults, with its range of fantastic workshops, courses and other projects.

Following a £30-million redevelopment in the mid 2000s, it makes a highly accessible place to catch both household names and emerging talent, from the likes of Elton John and the Royal Shakespeare Company to award-winning choreographer and dancer Akram Khan. There’s also a year-round roster of creative projects for 11-to-25-year-olds in the Paul Hamlyn Roundhouse Studios: courses include street-circus skills, music production, band development and even an introduction to working in a TV crew, all at affordable prices. In addition, 13- to 25-year-old members can rent equipment, recording studios, production suites and rehearsal rooms at low rates.

Access is excellent. There are seven Blue Badge spaces (best reserved in advance) in the on-site car park, from where a ramp leads directly into Level 1 of the building. Alternatively, the main entrance on Chalk Farm Road offers level access through power-assisted doors into Level 0, where the reception desk, box office and cloakroom have low counters. You’ll find accessible toilets opposite the lift (too small for powered scooters) on all three levels of the building. There are dedicated wheelchair spaces in both the Sackler Space Theatre and Main Space, with the best views being from the Circle slots − so much so that you may face competition from press photographers. The balcony handrail has been lowered to offer a better view. In addition, there’s an infrared-assisted hearing system in both theatre spaces (headsets loaned for free) and an induction loop at the box office. Braille/tactile signs have been installed throughout the venue. There are also two wheelchairs available for use. Autism-friendly “relaxed” performances are held for some productions (check the website for details), with lower lighting and music and a chill-out space for those who may need to leave the performance. Visual stories on the website take visitors through all the Roundhouse’s different spaces to reduce anxiety ahead of visiting, while staff have been trained in autism awareness and the duty manager can organise queue-jumping and other help. Complimentary tickets are offered to personal assistants and support workers, and wheelchair positions and accessible seats come with one free ticket as standard.

FOOD & DRINK

The resident Roundhouse Bar & Café bar/restaurant (020 74248495) offers a stylish, accessible setting to grab a drink or light snack.

From cup finals to concerts, Wembley has hosted a star-studded roster of events over the years. The national stadium, Wembley is home to English football, providing the setting for various international football matches and FA Cup finals. It also stages rugby matches, music concerts and – more recently – American NFL games. Whether touring the stadium or seeing your favourite team in action, you’re never far from the making of sporting or musical history.

If you can’t attend a match here, taking a tour around the stadium is the next best thing – as well as exploring the pitch, you’ll be shown around otherwise restricted areas such as the royal boxes and the press room. Imagine the build-up to a big game as you look around the dressing rooms, then walk out through the players’ tunnel onto the famous turf. Back inside the stadium there’s a museum with interesting artefacts and football shirts worn by the greats of the beautiful game. Throughout, you’ll be made to feel enormously welcome by staff, who are justly proud of the stadium’s accessibility. Lifts and disabled toilets abound, turnstiles, food and merchandise counters are at the right level and the surface is car-showroom smooth. There are 310 wheelchair places, an equal number for personal assistants, and an “at seat” service for anyone who requires half-time refreshments. Induction loops are everywhere and, if you’re here for a match, you can listen to commentary delivered via headsets available from access points. A free app for Apple and Android devices gives useful stadium and travel information, and the stadium’s multi-media devices now include BSL, too.

Blue Badge parking is available in the stadium’s two car parks (first come, first served). If you’re arriving at Wembley Park tube station, there’s step-free access from the platform. The journey to the stadium is straightforward, and on event days there are specific entrances for those with mobility requirements, as well as specially trained staff to assist. In addition, a Staxi wheelchair pick-up and drop-off service takes guests from outside the stadium or selected car parks to their seats. While staff have done everything possible to make Wembley accessible, this is a major sporting venue, and adrenaline runs high. It can be tricky to find a calm area to take a break, and match days might be best avoided for those with sensory conditions.

FOOD & DRINK

On-site refreshments to suit every budget are readily available on match days and during concerts, but there’s no food inside the stadium on a tour day, so buy before you arrive!

003 Discover Children’s Story Centre

Address: 383–387 High Street, Stratford E15 4QZ
Web: www.discover.org.uk
Tel: 020 85365555

Hours: daily 10am–5pm

Once you discover Discover Children’s Story Centre, you’ll be torn between telling everyone about it and keeping it all to yourself. This place is a rare find: a simple but magical spot for storytelling and fun, which usually is blissfully uncrowded.

At Discover, children aged up to eleven can join Hootah – a baby space-monster – on a multi-sensory journey. There is the indoor Story World and an outdoor Story Garden where they can explore secret caves, an enchanted forest, a giant spacecraft and hidey-holes, or they can just sit quietly and create. Not everything at Discover is accessible for a child in a wheelchair, but when it is possible to cross a sparkly river, make squelches and giggles with noisy polka dots, dress up as a fairytale character, create a spoon-puppet, take off in the Lollipopter, and make music in the sensory garden, few children will feel like they are missing out on anything. Discover also puts on engaging story-building events and interactive exhibitions. On Saturday mornings Mighty Mega is a free club (booking essential) for children with special education needs, aged 5 to 11, and their siblings to take part in arts, crafts, stories and songs.

Access around the centre is excellent: there is a step-free entrance, a lift to all floors, a ramp into the Story Garden and accessible toilets on all floors, including one with a height-adjustable changing bench and hoist system. The staff are extremely welcoming and many have experience with the SEN community and have accredited qualifications in understanding autism. Some areas of the Story World have been designed to be quieter and less sensory, and ear defenders are available. There’s full access information online including details of the hearing loop, wheelchair access and information about the centre’s multi-sensory exhibits. In addition to offering a reduced-price ticket for visitors with disabilities, carers come in free (no documentation required). There are four disabled parking bays at the back of Discover, accessed via Bridge Road, that are usually free at weekends. The Stratford Centre car park is close by, but charges the full rate for disabled drivers. The nearest station is Stratford High Street on the DLR and is only a couple of minutes from Discover. Alternatively, Stratford station – on the DLR, Jubilee, Central and London Overground lines – is a five-minute walk away and provides a good public transport option as it is completely accessible.
The open café space, on the first floor, sells sandwiches, cakes and ice creams. If you bring a picnic, you can eat outside while you watch the children play and slide down a monster’s tongue – it is not often that happens!

004 V&A Museum of Childhood

Address: Cambridge Heath Road, London E2 9PA  Web: www.museumofchildhood.org.uk  Tel: 020 89835200  Hours: Daily 10am–5.45pm  Dates: closed 24–26 Dec  Entry: Free

In a large hall with two mezzanine floors, the V&A Museum of Childhood is an impressive space and great for children to explore. It offers a nostalgic look at childhood through the ages, with displays that families can enjoy together. Exhibits range from the UK’s largest collection of dolls, through games, models, paintings, teddy bears and clothes to children’s furniture, and look at the ways childhood has changed over the generations. The museum also hosts interesting exhibitions on subjects such as children’s authors, art and photography, with activities including craft workshops and story-telling held daily.

Access to the main entrance is up a gentle slope, which leads to a hallway where wheelchairs can be borrowed. The information desk has a hearing loop and can provide help for visitors with disabilities. The permanent displays on the two mezzanine levels are accessible by lift, and there’s also a ramp from the ground floor to the first mezzanine level. The exhibits are well spaced so there’s room to move around, though some of the text is quite small and the signage is not particularly clear: while there are some hands-on interactive areas, they are limited. The museum is open plan and can be noisy as the sounds from the café below circulate around the exhibits, which may be challenging for those on the autism spectrum. There is, however, a dedicated Quiet Room, complete with a bed, sink, microwave, spacious accessible toilet and access hoist – the latter requires a key (ask the staff) – and a small sensory area on the first mezzanine. The website has a helpful guide to prepare autistic children for their visit, and a backpack containing resources (ear defenders, toys, etc) can be borrowed on a first-come, first-served basis – there is only one, however, so it may not always be available. The disabled toilet in the basement is clean, and accessible by lift: ask staff for the RADAR key. For those travelling with a carer, free entry tickets are available for any paid-in exhibitions. The car park behind the museum is accessed via Victoria Park Square: phone in advance to book a disabled parking space, and staff will escort you into the building via the rear entrance.

FOOD & DRINK The ground-floor cafe serves a good range of basic lunches. There’s an extensive children’s menu, including packed lunches, and prices are reasonable at around £4–5 for a children’s hot meal and £7–8 for an adult hot meal.

London Zoo opened in 1828 but, aside from its listed buildings, there’s nothing old-fashioned about this much-loved animal kingdom. Well-designed enclosures and interactive, immersive experiences allow visitors to get a better understanding of some of the world’s most inspiring creatures – and have lots of fun while they’re at it.

At Penguin Beach, England’s biggest penguin pool, you can watch the zoo’s ninety Humboldt penguins as they waddle and dive, with viewing panels giving a fascinating look at their underwater agility. There’s a seating area, with designated wheelchair spaces for optimum appreciation of the ever-popular penguin feeding time. Other highlights include the Gorilla Kingdom, and perennial favourites such as the giraffes and the Tiger Territory. Several walk-through enclosures provide exciting opportunities for close-up encounters with various animals, such as Bolivian squirrel monkeys in Meet the Monkeys, tropical birds in the Blackburn Pavilion, and numerous inquisitive tamarins and red titi monkeys in Rainforest Life. The new Animal Adventure Playzone opened in 2019, where young visitors can meet animals including porcupines, mongooses and meerkats; daily talks in the area explore some of nature’s greatest journeys.

There are five disabled parking bays in a small car park opposite the zoo entrance, from where you’ll have to negotiate a kerb and cross a busy road; there’s also a disabled bay right outside the entrance. The zoo has done a great job of making itself accessible, considering how many listed buildings it has – ramps and slopes give wheelchair access to most areas, though some slopes are rather steep. In some enclosures the hanging strips of plastic and chains designed to prevent animals escaping can be awkward to push through: assistance may be required. Manual wheelchairs are available to borrow (book ahead). There are several accessible toilets around the site, and a permanent high dependency unit (HDU) is located in the Animal Adventure Playzone. The zoo is less busy early in the morning and last thing at night; book online for fast-track entrance. Carers are admitted for free, but must show paperwork as proof.

Regent’s Park is probably best known for its award-winning Open Air Theatre, established in 1932 and one of the largest theatres in London. Productions in the entirely uncovered stage and auditorium take place annually from May to September. Disabled patrons and their carers are eligible for discounts in the theatre (call the box office on 0333 4003562; openairtheatre.com), and wheelchair spaces are available. Assistance dogs are welcome and there’s a hearing loop system. The theatre also offers audio-described and captioned performances. Other attractions include a community Wildlife Garden, several playgrounds, a boating lake, tennis courts and The Hub sports centre, as well as beautiful planting and plenty of cafés. All of these make it a very pleasant place to spend a few hours. There are no steep inclines around the park and access is generally good for wheelchair users. There are Blue Badge parking bays at various points around the perimeter road and accessible toilets within each toilet block.

FOOD & DRINK The on-site, fully accessible Terrace Restaurant at ZSL London Zoo offers a range of hearty meals and sandwiches in a spacious environment; alternatively, find a nice spot for a picnic on one of the lawns outside.

006 Lord’s Cricket Ground

Address: Marrylebone Cricket Club, St John’s Wood Road, London NW8 8QN
Web: www.lords.org
Tel: ticket office 020 74321000; tours 020 76168595
Hours: tours hourly 9am–6pm; call for information
Lord’s Cricket Ground is the place where every batsman dreams of scoring a hundred runs, and where every cricket fan wants to see it happen. International matches often sell out months in advance, though there are 50–60 other days of cricket annually when it’s easier to get tickets, or you can access the venue on a behind-the-scenes tour (lasting 1hr 40min) where you’ll get to see many of the sport’s famous relics.

The tour starts in the MCC Museum where – as well as the famous Ashes Urn – a collection of paintings, photos and memorabilia celebrates four hundred years of cricketing history. You’ll also take in the Long Room, through which players make their way to and from the ground, and the dressing rooms, where the famous Honours Boards record the names of players who score a Lord’s century or take five wickets in an innings. Another highlight is the futuristic Media Centre, which offers an unrivalled view of the ground. Finally, like every modern tour, this one ends in the gift shop.

Most areas visited on the tour can be accessed without any problem, though the upper floor of the museum, which is home to the legendary Ashes Urn, is reached by stairs only – if you ask, someone will bring down a replica of the Ashes Urn and tell its story. For those attending a match, there are four wheelchair areas, two of which are covered, and audio commentary is provided via headsets available from stewards. There are six accessible toilets around the ground – ask a steward for a RADAR key – and a fully accessible Mobiloo toilet at international matches. The dedicated Accessibility Manager can be contacted on accessibility@mcc.org.uk. There’s no car park, but set-down and pick-up passes are available from Club Facilities (020 76168653) and the venue is served by wheelchair-accessible buses.

FOOD & DRINK Restaurants and bars throughout the ground cater to every palate and wallet. Food and drink are available from the Lord’s Tavern, where people on the tour can get a discount on food.

Dates: closed 24–26 Dec & 1 Jan; library also closed bank hols
Entry: free

Victorian pharmaceutical tycoon Henry Wellcome had a passion for the history of medicine, sending his collecting agents around the world with instructions to “leave no stone unturned” in the hunt for artefacts of medicinal interest. Wellcome Collection, an excellent museum and library, brings his fascination with health into the modern age.

From mind-expanding insights into scientific research to confrontational art that pushes you to question your understanding of disease, the exhibitions at Wellcome Collection have something to engage, challenge and inform everyone. There are several galleries to visit, including the permanent Medicine Man exhibition, which features weird and wonderful health-related objects from Wellcome’s vast collection, including Japanese sex aids and Napoleon’s toothbrush. The fantastically quirky library is probably one of the best workspaces in London for those who wish to avoid sensory distractions. It is usually silent and low-lit, and you can often find an empty desk between the bookstacks where there is little visual distraction. For an equally calm but less formal environment, visit the adjacent Reading Room, which has sofas, chairs and beanbags to relax on alongside further medical exhibits.

Blue Badge parking is available, but should be booked in advance by phone or email; the car park is located behind the Wellcome Collection, and you’ll need to use a car lift (see website for details). The entrance to the Wellcome is on Euston Road, which is extremely busy and loud. If you’re coming by public transport, minimise exposure by arriving at Euston Square Station (south exit) rather than Euston Station. Access inside the Collection is excellent and well considered. A wide, button-activated door facilitates entry, there’s step-free access to all floors and accessible toilets on every level, including a Changing Places facility on the ground floor. Wheelchairs can be borrowed, too – ask at the information point on the ground floor, or phone ahead to reserve one in advance. You can also borrow a magnifying sheet or glass, while all permanent exhibitions and some temporary exhibitions have large-print label guides. In Medicine Man, some objects have tactile reproductions and Braille labels located in special drawers. There are fixed induction loops at the information point, the café and shop, the library enquiry desk and the venue hire reception. The information desk can also lend you a portable induction loop. The Wellcome Collection hosts free BSL, audio-described and speech-to-text tours; staff can also provide tailored tours for people with additional access needs, in which a member of the team will be available to provide extra assistance. Some of the exhibitions contain human remains (including Medicine Man and the Reading Room) which visitors might find upsetting, but warning notices hang at the exhibit entrances.

FOOD & DRINK The café serves a good range of snacks and sandwiches; the restaurant has mains on offer too. Note that the café can be loud and busy; at these times, manoeuvrability can be difficult for those with impaired mobility, and off-putting for those with sensory conditions. The restaurant is much more accessible and tends to be far less congested.

008 Spitalfields Market

Address: Brushfield Street E1 6AA  Web: www.spitalfields.co.uk; www.oldspitalfieldsmarket.com  Tel: 020 73752963; Old Spitalfields Market 020 3771496  Hours: markets Mon–Sat 10am–5pm, Sun 9am–5pm; shops & restaurants open daily, times vary  Dates: closed 25 Dec  Entry: free

Spitalfields Market – which has been around in one form or another since the thirteenth century – sits under a glorious vaulted Victorian roof in London’s fashionable East End. You can come simply to soak up the atmosphere, but with so much to taste, try on and check out, few can resist the temptation to join in the bustling bargain-hunting for long.

The market building offers an appealing blend of historical charm and contemporary chic. There’s a changing rota of traders throughout the week: antiques and vintage goods on Thursdays; fashion, arts and crafts on Fridays; the Saturday Style market, selling original clothing and accessories, homewares and ethical goods; and on Sundays, a lively mixture of anything and everything, from textiles to gluten-free cakes and freshly harvested oysters. Based around the perimeter of the building, and open every day of the week, are funky art and design shops, some well-known chain restaurants and other independent or family-run cafés selling delicious international foods.

Blue Badge holders can pay and display on single and double yellow lines for an unlimited time throughout the borough of Tower Hamlets. The main market area has excellent level access throughout, and the only problems you might face are step-entry to some of the shops and cafés, and busy passages between stalls at peak times – Sundays in particular can get crammed, so arrive as early as you can to avoid the main throng. You’ll find the disabled toilets at the Wollstonecraft Gate; a RADAR key is required to access them, but ring the number displayed on the toilet door (020 73772883) and staff will bring it to you. An open seating area by the cafés has benches that are fixed, but at a good height for seating wheelchairs at either end.

FOOD & DRINK There are plenty of food stalls and sit-down restaurants to choose from in the market, serving everything from gourmet pies to Spanish tapas. Alternatively, try one of the excellent Indian restaurants on nearby Brick Lane: Preem Restaurant (020 72470397, www.preembricklane.co.uk), on the corner of Hanbury Street, is handy for the market, and has level access and delicious food.

Entry: [D]free [C]free [A]£20 [6–17s]£8.50 [Con]£17.50 [Fam] 1 adult & 2–3 children £34; 2 adults & 2–3 children £48.50; cheaper advance rates are available online

Sir Christopher Wren’s masterpiece, whose mighty dome is an iconic feature of the London skyline, is looking more impressive than ever, still benefitting from the mammoth fifteen-year, £40-million restoration project it concluded in 2011.

Wheelchair users should use the south entrance to the cathedral, which is accessed via a lift. Inside, the magnificent abundance of carvings, sculptures and mosaics is almost too much to take in, even with the aid of a multimedia guide that weaves you around the nave, dome area, quire (the seating area of the clergy and choir) and an assortment of aisles and chapels. All these areas have level access, except the North Quire Aisle, but the few steps can be bypassed via a lift. There’s also lift access down to the crypt, where you’ll find the tombs of various notable figures including Lord Nelson and Sir Christopher Wren. The lift marked with a wheelchair symbol serves only the cathedral floor and crypt, so moving upwards is harder: access to the three dome galleries is by stair only, with 257 steps to the famous Whispering Gallery and 528 to the topmost Golden Gallery. If you can’t manage the stairs, there is a virtual tour of the galleries on the multimedia guide.
For those with visual impairments, there are guided touch tours (book in advance) and audio-description guides can be provided. Braille and large-print Orders of Service are also available. Several members of staff are BSL-trained and there’s a touch-screen multimedia BSL-signed tour, as well as an induction loop in the cathedral. There are well-equipped disabled toilets in the crypt. The cathedral has no car park, but registered taxis can drop visitors very near the entrance. Finally, it’s worth noting that admission queues can be very long, although visitors with disabilities and accompanying carers go free.

FOOD & DRINK A small selection of light lunches (around £8) are available in the café in the crypt, which is fully accessible.

In a prime location on Covent Garden Piazza, London Transport Museum is a cleverly laid-out tribute to the creators of one of the world’s most sophisticated transport systems. It’s a fascinating, hands-on look at the capital’s transport, from horse-drawn buses through the world’s first underground railway and early red double-decker buses.

Much like the city itself, this highly recommended museum is crowded with vehicles and has an exciting story to tell. It is laid out over three floors and the visitor’s journey starts at the top with the introduction of horse-drawn carriages in the nineteenth century. The displays are crammed with historic vehicles that have adequate room around them so they can be explored up close, though only the Victorian-era tube carriage has an access ramp. You can climb into some of the carriages, buses and trams, all of which feature realistic mannequins and entertaining audio-visual descriptions. The first floor is dedicated to the building of the tube network – a highly dangerous undertaking, dramatically portrayed – and the age of steam, while the ground floor explores contemporary transport and offers a glimpse into what’s to come with its Future Engineers gallery.

Access to the museum is best by public transport, as Blue Badge parking is extremely limited. There are no bays in the piazza itself, with the nearest being in Henrietta Street; there’s also one in Tavistock Street and four in Bow Street, while the nearby Covent Garden NCP car park has two disabled bays. Dropped kerbs abound, though the piazza itself is largely cobbled. The museum’s main entrance has automatic doors, with level access throughout, and the reception counter has an angled slat to allow wheelchair users to see the cashier. Carers go free. There’s a spacious, well-equipped toilet on the ground floor, plus a nearby cloakroom with a loan wheelchair, and water for assistance animals. Further adapted facilities are available on the lower floor gallery and in the shop, by the Upper Deck Café and library. Lifts and long (but not steep) ramps, which are suitable for unaccompanied wheelchair users, provide access to all areas of the museum. The audio-visual guides are all subtitled or fitted with loops, and there are induction loops at the ticket desk, cloakroom, library and information desk. BSL interpreters can be arranged. “Early Explorers” sessions are held on certain days of the year, when the museum opens early with many of the sounds switched off, so that younger SEN visitors, including those on the autism spectrum, can look round at a quieter time and take part in interactive workshops and demonstrations. Advance booking is essential; check www.ltmuseum.co.uk/learning/schools/special-educational-needs for details.

FOOD & DRINK

The Upper Deck and Lower Deck café bars serve good-quality food and drink. Upstairs you can sit on Northern Line benches and sip a tube-themed cocktail or smoothie; downstairs is a small picnic area where you can eat your own lunches.

011 Royal Academy of Arts

Address: Burlington House, Piccadilly W1J 0BD
Web: www.royalacademy.org.uk
Tel: tickets 020 73008090, press option 4 for wheelchair and disabled parking booking; information and enquiries 020 73008000; access information 020 73005732
Hours: Sun–Thur 10am–6pm, Friday 10am–10pm; last entry 30min before closing
Dates: closed 24–26 Dec
Entry: free, but charge for temporary exhibitions (see website for details)

Located just off London’s busy Piccadilly, the Royal Academy of Arts is a historic gallery with regularly changing exhibitions featuring a stellar line up of national and international artists. Founded by George III, the RA has long had its vision steered by artists, or Royal Academicians – the current cohort includes painters David Hockney and Anthony Whishaw, architects Norman Foster and David Chipperfield and sculptors Antony Gormley and Anish Kapoor. Famous for its Summer Exhibition of some ten thousand works, to which any artist can submit a piece, it is one of Britain’s premier galleries.

Burlington House, home of the Royal Academy, is an elaborate piece of architecture that provides a striking setting. The Madejski rooms host the gallery’s permanent collection, including works by RA members, which can be appreciated on regular 30min tours (free); muse on pieces by Joshua Reynolds, John Constable, Tracey Emin and Grayson Perry. The Sackler gallery on the second floor hosts visiting exhibitions by renowned artists, both contemporary and historical. In 2018, the RA completed a transformative redevelopment, joining together Burlington House with Burlington Gardens, for its 250th anniversary. All of the spacious galleries have benches and stools available throughout for those who need to pause to rest. A visit to the RA isn’t all about art though; Burlington House is also home to the Geological and Astronomical societies, both of which hold public lectures; indeed, this is where Charles Darwin first presented his masterpiece, On the Origin of Species.

Call at least one week ahead to book one of the two disabled parking spaces outside. The main accessible entrance is ramped; the doors are a bit heavy, but staff are happy to assist. Burlington Gardens is also ramped, with an automatic door. Inside, the ticket desk and cloakroom are both low. Lift access reaches all the galleries, where exhibits are well displayed with information panels at a good height for standing or sitting (although the exhibits in display cases may be harder to view for wheelchair users). Signage is clear and visible throughout the RA, with large-print guides, audio guides, “handing” tours for partially sighted visitors and pre-arranged sessions for SEN visitors available. Other services include accessible toilets, wheelchair hire, access for guide and hearing dogs and hearing loops in the lecture theatre. Staff are well informed, helpful and all receive disability-awareness training.

FOOD & DRINK

The restaurant and café are well laid out for visitors with accessibility needs, but they’re pricey. The Poster Bar and Senate Room have opened at the RA since the redevelopment works, serving drinks and refreshments too, but if you have to splash out anyway, you may as well pop over the road to Fortnum & Mason’s (020 77348040, www.fortnumandmason.com) for a splendid cream tea, served from 3pm.

012 Tate Modern

Address: Bankside, SE1 9TG
Web: www.tate.org.uk
Tel: 020 78878888
Hours: Sun–Thur 10am–6pm, Fri–Sat 10am–10pm
Dates: closed 24–26 Dec
Entry: free; varying fees for special exhibitions, but carers go free and visitors with a disability pay a concessionary rate

Just across Millennium Bridge (better known as the wobbly bridge), on the south bank of the Thames, is the austere power station transformed by the Swiss duo Herzog & de Meuron into Tate Modern, where the Tate shows off its vast collection of international modern art. Opened in 2000 as the world’s largest modern art gallery, astonishingly it has since doubled in size and today welcomes nearly six million visitors each year – making it the UK’s most popular visitor attraction.
Collections range from 1900 to the present, including major works by Dali, Picasso, Matisse and Andy Warhol. The curators have eschewed the usual chronological approach and gone instead for hanging works according to themes and ideas, so you’ll find the likes of Brancusi, Lichtenstein, Riley and Hepworth alongside newer names as befits the particular exhibit. Themes cover still life to landscapes, nudes to history painting. As you wander around it becomes apparent that the artworks are designed to be thought-provoking, challenging established notions of what constitutes art. Many pieces are installations, which leave much to the imagination of the viewer. One of the most interesting exhibitions on display is called “Untitled 1993” by Rudolf Stingel, which allows people who are visually impaired to touch and mould the thick pile carpet on the wall. For many, though, the most impressive part of the Tate Modern is the Turbine Hall, an enormous expanse of space normally used to display one huge installation.

There is no dedicated public car park at Tate Modern, but there are twelve parking spaces for disabled visitors via Park Street (book in advance). The building is modern and well-designed for those with access needs, while careful consideration has gone into providing facilities and tours to ensure those with specific disabilities get the most out of a trip here. There are accessible toilets on every level of the building, which are connected by slopes, lifts and escalators. There’s an additional Changing Places toilet on Level 0; pick up RADAR keys from the cloakroom and ticket desks also on Level 0. The galleries are large and spacious, with plenty of room to manoeuvre, benches are located throughout the displays and concourses, and lightweight gallery stools can be carried around, too. Scooters are available to hire, but should be booked in advance. BSL guided tour events take place monthly, in which the guide is deaf and delivers the tour in BSL; selected talks are also BSL interpreted. Touch tours can be arranged by appointment, and ear defenders are available on request.

FOOD & DRINK

From fine dining in the Level 9 Restaurant to sandwiches and snacks in the café, the Tate caters for all tastes. However, there are also plenty of areas to sit down if you want to bring your own.

013 Hyde Park and Kensington Gardens

Address: Hyde Park, The Park Office, Rangers Lodge W2 2UH; Kensington Gardens Office, The Magazine Storeyard, Magazine Gate, Kensington Gardens W2 2UH  Web: www.royalparks.org.uk  Tel: Royal Parks 0300 0612000; Liberty Drives 07767 498096  Hours: Hyde Park daily 5am–midnight; Kensington Gardens daily 6am–dusk; Liberty Drives May–Oct Tues–Fri 10am–5pm  Dates: no closures  Entry: free

Known as the “lungs of London”, Hyde Park and its neighbour, Kensington Gardens, are the best places in the city centre to escape the crowds and breathe some fresh air. Once the private gardens of kings and queens, nowadays these green oases can be enjoyed by everyone; and with such a range of visitor attractions, from modern art exhibitions to adventure playgrounds, there’s lots more to them than perfect lawns and duck ponds.

With 760 acres to cover, wheelchair users will appreciate the wide, smooth paths and the half-hourly electric buggy service, run in the summer by Liberty Drives, which takes in the main attractions and is free to anyone with limited mobility. From the hubbub at Speakers’ Corner (come on a Sunday to hear a diversity of views and opinions), a tree-lined avenue takes you south towards the poignant, peaceful 7 July Memorial. Turn west by the Queen Elizabeth Gates and head to the park’s watery centrepiece, the Serpentine. In summer the Solar Shuttle can ferry you silently across the water (access is via a ramp, with assistance from the crew) or you can continue along the south bank, past the Hyde Park Lido – famous for its freezing cold Christmas Day swimming race – and café. If you fancy a dip, use one of the accessible toilets and changing rooms; there is a lift to the sun terrace and paddling pool area, and three ramps with handrails leading into the water. Or you can simply dip your feet in the flowing water at the nearby, hugely popular Diana, Princess of Wales Memorial Fountain.

From here, the main footpath continues under Serpentine Bridge and into Kensington Gardens, where children will be pleased to find both Peter Pan’s statue and the pirate-themed Diana Memorial Playground. Much of the playground is accessible, including a cleverly designed raised walkway giving access to several slides, so it’s a pity that the centrepiece, a huge wooden pirate ship, can only be boarded via tricky rope bridges. Heading back east via the Round Pond takes you past the gleaming Albert Memorial and the Albert Hall, and on to the Serpentine Gallery, which is free, all on one level and dedicated to showing modern and contemporary art (it also has eight medium-sized accessible toilets). The LookOut education centre has facilities for those with special and educational needs and runs a programme of activities; check www.royalparks.org.uk/learn/learn-in-hyde-park-and-kensington-gardens/special-needs for details.

Free local parking is available for Blue Badge holders for a maximum of four hours (although the Rangers’ Lodge at Hyde Park will consider requests for longer stays) and there are five car parks with disabled parking bays within the parks themselves.

FOOD & DRINK For a delicious afternoon tea, head to The Orangery in the grounds of Kensington Palace (see opposite). Here, you can treat yourself to dainty sandwiches and sumptuous cakes, washed down with fine teas and even champagne, if you wish. It’s wheelchair accessible with a ramped entrance.
Currently home to the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, Kensington Palace has been a royal residence ever since 1689, when William III and Mary II chose it for its country views and clean air (William suffered from asthma and central London pollution made his condition worse). Formerly the modest Nottingham House, it was transformed into a palace by Sir Christopher Wren and has since been home to many members of the Royal Family, including Diana, Princess of Wales.

Today the palace is divided in two – a private wing and a series of historic state apartments that are open to the public. There are several routes to explore over two floors: The Queen’s State Apartments; The King’s State Apartments, where you can see the wonderful paintings and stunning trompe l’oeil ceiling effects by William Kent who, to secure the business, undercut the King’s Painter by a substantial amount; and Victoria: A Royal Childhood, which provides an insight into Queen Victoria, who was born at the palace in 1819, and lived here with her mother until her accession. Outside, you can explore the beautiful gardens, where new planting in 2019 marked the 200th anniversary of the birth of Queen Victoria, evoking the colours and horticultural discoveries of the Victorian age.

Within the palace a lift accesses all areas, and there are also plenty of scarlet-coated Explainers dotted around to help; these enthusiastic guides can steer you in the right direction. For those who can access stairs, it’s worth noting that in the palace they are quite shallow and many of the doors are wide – both features were designed to make it easier for ladies wearing wide mantua skirts to get around. To protect the works of art, the lighting of the various galleries is subdued; many of the display cabinets are quite high for wheelchair users and the carpeting is thick. There is plenty of seating along the routes; take a window bench in the King’s Apartments and listen to the recordings of gossip from the court of George I. An Access Guide is available, as well as a tactile map of the palace, and a guide for parents of children or adults on the autism spectrum can be downloaded at www.hrp.org.uk/kensington-palace/visit/accessibility. Describer and BSL tours (1hr 30min–2hr) are also available: these can be arranged between 10am–3pm and must be booked two weeks in advance by phone (or via kensington@hrp.org.uk). There are two accessible toilets on the ground floor. Carers are admitted for free. The nearest step-free Underground stations are Earls Court (Piccadilly and District Lines) and Green Park (Jubilee, Piccadilly and Victoria lines), though note that they are still some distance (1 mile and 3.4 miles respectively) from the palace. However, there is also limited Blue Badge parking right next to the restaurant (reserve spaces on 020 31666199).

FOOD & DRINK As well as the separate restaurant that serves meals and afternoon teas (see p.30), the convenient ground-floor Palace Café sells reasonably priced snacks and hot drinks, and has a children’s menu. The two steps down from the gift shop are negotiable via a discrete but useful platform lift.
015 The View from The Shard

Address: Joiner Street, London SE1 9QU  Web: www.theviewfromtheshard.com  Tel: bookings 0844 4997111; customer service enquiries 0344 4997222  Hours: Mar–Oct Mon–Fri & Sun 10am–10pm, Sat 10am–9.15pm; Oct–Mar Mon–Wed 10am–7pm, Thur–Sat 10am–10pm, Sun 10am–7pm; last entry 1hr before closing  Dates and entry: visit the website for up-to-date opening hours and pricing. There is a range of different ticket options available.

London’s highest viewing platform, The View from The Shard sits at the top of the iconic Shard building with a far-reaching panorama over London through floor-to-ceiling windows. The views are extraordinary and make the dizzying journey in the super-fast lift well worth it. There are two levels: Level 69 is indoor, with brilliant interactive telescopes that show every detail of London stretched out before you – they focus on a particular area, tell you what you are seeing and show what London would have looked like in different periods of history. Level 72 is partially open-air and not for the faint-hearted – being exposed to the elements gives an even greater sense of how high it is.

Fifteen steep steps lead up to the booking hall, though there is also a public lift. Visitors are then guided through security to the first set of lifts up to Level 33, where there’s another lift to Level 69. It is all accessible for wheelchairs, although signage is limited. Note that the lifts are very fast, which may be disorientating for some, and both viewing platforms are small with minimal seating, so at busy times it could be difficult for wheelchair users and those on the autism spectrum. However, there are plenty of staff around, who can provide seating for people with limited mobility, and assist those who are visually impaired. Wheelchairs are available on request at the booking hall and the interactive telescopes can be adjusted to wheelchair height. People on the autism spectrum may find the low lighting in the lifts and the queues through the booking hall, security and lifts challenging, and there’s no procedure to skip the queue at busy times. There are well-kept accessible toilets in the booking hall and on Level 69, with wide doors and plenty of room. There are no BSL interpreters or hearing loops at the ticket desks. If there is no visibility, visitors are not allowed up to the viewing platform, but tickets can be used at the time they advise you to return. If visibility is poor from the platform, you can return for free.

FOOD & DRINK

The bars on both levels serve a range of hot and cold drinks (including champagne), a limited range of snacks and some decent cakes.

016 The Science Museum

Address: Exhibition Road, South Kensington, London SW7 2DD
Web: www.sciencemuseum.org.uk
Tel: 0333 2414000; minicom 020 79424000
Hours: daily 10am–6pm; school holidays 10am–7pm; last entrance is 45min before the museum closes
Dates: closed 24–26 Dec
Entry: The museum is free, but charges apply for the IMAX cinema, simulators and some exhibitions. IMAX [D]£9 [C]free [A]£11 [Con]£9
[Fam]3 people £24; 4 people £30

A buzzing, energetic place, the Science Museum in South Kensington dispels the myth that science is boring. With hands-on exhibits, interactive displays and lively demonstrations, exploring everything from space travel to genetics, even the most reluctant visitor will find something engaging. Most people come away enthralled and enriched.

A meander through the spacious groundfloor galleries takes you from huge steam-powered machines in the Energy Hall, through the history of rockets in Exploring Space, to iconic objects in Making the Modern World. The Wellcome Wing is home to the IMAX cinema and the Who Am I? gallery, which has wheelchair accessible computer terminals with interactive games. The second floor houses galleries on Mathematics and Information Age. While the museum is a grown-up institution, there is plenty here to keep children occupied, including The Garden (for 3- to 6-year-olds), Pattern Pod (5- to 8-year-olds) and the family-friendly interactive Wonderlab – all are appealing, with a mass of activities easily accessed by most children with limited mobility.

There are six Blue Badge parking bays on Exhibition Road. After 6pm you can use the Imperial College car park on Imperial College Road (charges apply). If you can manage public transport it’s easier: there’s a pedestrian subway (but no step-free access) from South Kensington tube station to the museum entrance. General museum access is excellent, with lots of manoeuvring space and low-level exhibits. The information desk has maps showing lifts, ramps and accessible toilets, or check the Accessibility section on the website. Manual wheelchairs are available to borrow, including new, lightweight models, which can be booked in advance over the phone. A selection of audio descriptions and large-print gallery books for some of the most popular exhibits are available on the website. Induction loops are fitted at the ticket desk, at the entrance to IMAX 3D cinema (where carers go free), at the theatre and at the information desk. The IMAX cinema has four dedicated wheelchair spaces, and an infrared system – headsets are available on request. Bear in mind that you may have a long wait to use the lifts at busy times, as you’ll be vying with parents and pushchairs. The themed Science Museum Lates, on the last Wednesday of each month, allow adults to visit after hours – no kids allowed!

FOOD & DRINK

All the cafés have movable seating. The Diner has waiter service and a selection of well-priced, restaurant-quality hot dishes, pizzas, salads and great meal deals for kids – including healthy options. There are also picnic areas.

Dates: open for worship only on Sun

Westminster Abbey, the Collegiate Church of St Peter, is one of the greatest examples of ecclesiastical architecture in the world. This shrine to the great and the good, where Britain’s rulers have been crowned and buried, was in the international spotlight in 2011 as the venue for the royal wedding of Prince William and Kate Middleton.

Founded by Edward the Confessor in 1065, the abbey has hosted all coronations since the time of William the Conqueror, with the Coronation Chair on display near the Great West Door. Indeed, a tour of the abbey is a great opportunity to learn about the unique pageant of British history. Scientists and statesmen are interred and honoured by monuments – you can see those of Charles Darwin and Sir Isaac Newton as well as the 1965 memorial to Sir Winston Churchill. Geoffrey Chaucer, the first literary figure to be buried at the abbey in Poets’ Corner, famously rests in the company of Tennyson, Browning and Dickens, while female rulers are represented by Elizabeth I, Mary I and Mary of Scots. Younger visitors can let off steam outdoors in the College Garden; situated just off the cloisters, it’s the oldest garden in England.

With its busy central London location, overlooking Parliament Square, it is not surprising that the abbey doesn’t have parking spaces, though it’s possible to request a drop-off point for Blue Badge holders in advance. Wheelchair users should enter via the North Door; the marshals are approachable and will facilitate access to tricky areas via alternative routes where possible. The Henry VII Chapel can only be reached by a steep flight of stairs. Free portable multimedia guides come in fourteen languages, plus BSL and family versions. Transcripts are available for deaf visitors and touch tours can be arranged, with accompanying material in large print or Braille; there is also an audio-described tour for blind and partially sighted visitors. Visitors with disabilities and their carers are granted free entry. Check out the full access guide online too, at www.westminster-abbey.org/visit-us/access-and-facilities.

FOOD & DRINK

Continuing the Benedictine tradition of providing hospitality, The Cellarium Café and Terrace, in the cloisters, is open for breakfast, lunch and afternoon tea.

018 Greenwich to Westminster River Trip

Address: Greenwich Pier, Greenwich Promenade, SE10 3QT Web: www.citycruises.com, www.thamesclippers.com Tel: City Cruises 020 77400400; Thames Clippers 020 70012200 Hours: see box, above Dates: year round, though timetables vary; City Cruises run a special service 25 Dec — check website for details; Thames Clippers closed 25–26 Dec Entry: Fares for City Cruises and Thames Clippers vary according to the route and whether you buy a single ticket or a hop-on/hop-off day pass; check online for the full range of fares. Thames Clippers accepts Oyster cards and contactless, and gives Freedom Pass holders and their carers 50 percent discount if they book online or ask at the ticket office. Passengers with a valid Disabled ID card are able to bring their carer aboard with them free of charge and receive a 50 percent discount when booking online.

Greenwich feels like a fitting place to start a boat trip along the Thames: it was the birthplace of King Henry VIII, whose famous royal barges carried him and his wives in such style along the river. Taking in docklands warehouses, churches, penthouses and pubs, and heading into the centre of the city, a river journey from Greenwich to Westminster offers a unique view of the Thames and its pivotal role in London life.

The trip is packed with many of London’s classic sights, offering spectacular views of Tower Bridge, the Tower of London, St Paul’s Cathedral, HMS Belfast, the London Eye and the Houses of Parliament. But you can also glimpse a hidden side of London as you drift by old cranes, disused wharves, dilapidated docks and warehouses converted into luxury apartments, which recall the years when London was the frantic, beating heart of an industrial empire. Arriving at Westminster, you can take a short walk to the Houses of Parliament and Westminster Abbey (see p.34).

At Greenwich, you can choose between a City Cruises boat or the cheaper and faster Thames Clippers boat to Westminster Pier. Both services offer easy wheel-on access to the boats, disabled toilets onboard and designated space for wheelchair users. The City Cruises option caters for tourists rather than commuters – so progress upriver is more leisurely, and you have time to enjoy the constantly changing surroundings as well as taking in an informative audio commentary. Aboard the Thames Clippers, you can access commentary via the In:Flow visitor app.

If you plan to do a lot of river travel, you can buy a Red Rover Ticket, which allows you to hop-on/hop-off at any stop along the City Cruises route, and is valid for the whole day. Similarly, the Thames Clippers’ River Roamer ticket allows hop-on/hop-off travel between eighteen piers. You can cut down the journey time by travelling back from Westminster by tube: Westminster, North Greenwich and Greenwich Pier stations have lift access between street level and the platforms. Customers on the autism spectrum should note that neither Thames Clippers nor City Cruises have any official quiet room or chill-out areas, and can be very busy as they are regular commuter boats. For the former, check www.thamesclippers.com/accessibility for further information on what to expect.

FOOD & DRINK

Both boat services offer hot and cold drinks and snacks, and the bar/snack areas are wheelchair accessible. A nice option is to bring a picnic to eat on board or, once you arrive at Westminster Pier, head south over Westminster Bridge to Belvedere Road, just behind the London Aquarium. There is a raised walkway, accessible from the Westminster Bridge Road end, with a number of cafés and restaurants. Troia Southbank (www.troia-restaurant.co.uk) is a good bet, serving a wide variety of food.

019 Cutty Sark

Address: King William Walk, Greenwich, London SE10 9HT
Web: www.rmg.co.uk/cuttysark
Tel: 020 8858 4422
Hours: daily 10am–5pm, last admission at 4.15pm; extended opening hours in summer and some holidays – see website for exact dates
Dates: closed 24–26 Dec, reduced hours on 31 Dec and 1 Jan.
Entry: online/on the day: [D]£13.50/£15 [C]free [A]£13.50/£15 [5–15s]£6.75/£7.50 [under 5s]free
[Con]£9/£10

With its magnificent architecture and glorious park, there are few places as imposing and picturesque as Greenwich (www.visitgreenwich.org.uk). Add museums that allow you to navigate through time, space and the seas, a thriving food and craft market, and... cafés galore, and you’d be hard pressed to find a more rewarding day out. It’s also home to the world’s last remaining tea clipper, Cutty Sark, which underwent a £50 million renovation (completed in 2012) after a serious fire. While Greenwich is packed with popular attractions, Cutty Sark is surely one of the best loved, embodying as it does the romance of the Golden Age of Sail.

Entering the lower hold you are immediately immersed in the history of the ship, whose sleek design enhanced Britain’s reputation as a trading nation. The three decks have been arranged so that visitors can explore much of the original vessel while experiencing the sights, sounds and smells of life on board through a series of interactive exhibits. The real genius of the Cutty Sark’s display, however, is that she has been raised nine feet off the ground so that visitors can walk beneath her gleaming copper-sheathed hull. The dry dock provides space for the café, audio-visual presentations and a collection of ship’s figureheads, among them the sea witch whose short shirt (“a cutty sark” in Scottish) gives the clipper her name. Enthusiastic and knowledgeable staff run family-friendly events including costumed tours and craft workshops.

Cutty Sark is a shining example of how informed, clever design can render something old, and seemingly inaccessible, open to all. There is lift access to all the decks: some areas such as the master’s saloon have steep steps but virtual tours are available. Only three wheelchair users at a time can enter (so pre-booking is recommended) and, due to the size of the lifts, mobility scooters are not allowed. Facilities for visitors with sensory impairment include guides and signage in Braille, plus tactile models and audio presentations (though there is no loop inside the ship). There’s free Blue Badge parking at the Cutty Sark Gardens car park.

FOOD & DRINK The Even Keel Café beneath the stern provides a spacious and impressive setting to enjoy homemade cakes, teas and light snacks, including children’s lunchboxes.
020 Old Royal Naval College

Dramatically sited on the bank of the Thames, the Old Royal Naval College is Greenwich’s architectural centrepiece, described by UNESCO as “the most outstanding group of Baroque buildings in Britain”. The grounds and the stunning Painted Hall (recently reopened after a major conservation project), beautiful neoclassical chapel and visitor centre are all open to visitors. Hands-on exhibits in the visitor centre and a multimedia guide in the Painted Hall explore the history of this evocative complex.

The entrance on King William Walk offers level access to the visitor centre, while a lift in the King William Undercroft allows wheelchair users to enter the Painted Hall. For the chapel, wheelchair users can access the nave with a Stairclimber (arrange in advance on 020 82694799). A map showing accessible routes around the grounds is available on the website. There are regular BSL, BSL-interpreted and audio-described tours – check the website for details – and guide and assistance dogs are welcome in all areas. The college is autism-friendly, with ear defenders available and a helpful online guide at www.ornc.org/accessibility. Accessible toilets are available in the visitor centre, below the chapel and the Painted Hall. Carers/companions have free entry to the Painted Hall. Parking on-site is limited, so for disabled parking you will need to book ahead.

021 National Maritime Museum and Royal Observatory

Address: Museum: Romney Road SE10 9NF; Observatory: Blackheath Avenue SE10 8XJ  Web: www.rmg.co.uk/national-maritime-museum  Email: access@nmm.ac.uk  Tel: tickets 020 83126608; access 020 83126746  Hours: daily 10am–5pm; last admission 30 mins before closing  Dates: closed 24–26 Dec  Entry: museum free; Royal Observatory online/on the day: [D]£14.40/£16 [C]free [A]£14.40/£16 [4–15s]£7.20/£8 [Con]£9.60/£10.70; planetarium show prices vary, check the website for details

Immediately south of the Old Royal Naval College stands the National Maritime Museum, whose Maritime Galleries celebrate five hundred years of British seafaring history. Naval battles, great explorers and sea traders are all covered, with exhibits ranging from maritime art and model ships to Nelson’s Trafalgar coat. The Sammy Ofer wing is full of technical wizardry, including an impressive audio-visual “wave” that tells the story of Britons and the sea. Outside, an uphill stroll through Greenwich Park brings you to the Royal Observatory – the home of Greenwich Mean Time.
and the Meridian Line. While you’re here, learn about the universe, longitude and the history of time-keeping in the Astronomy and Time Galleries, or catch one of the lively shows at the planetarium: they also put on special performances called “Morning Stars” for children on the autism spectrum, which explore the night sky.

All floors of the Maritime Galleries are accessible, as are the Astronomy Galleries and planetarium (with dedicated wheelchair seating) at the Royal Observatory. Wheelchair users can also access the Meridian Line and Time Galleries via an external lift in the Astronomer’s Garden. There are adapted toilets at both sites. The museum’s website has excellent access information, including audio and large-print guides. All Visitor Experience staff are trained in working with SEN audiences and they run Sensory Seas sessions for special schools: see www.rmg.co.uk/plan-your-visit/schools/sessions/sensory-seas-send for details. There are three disabled parking bays at the Observatory and spaces can be booked at the Maritime Galleries car park (020 83126608).

FOOD & DRINK Salads, sandwiches, light meals and home-baked cakes are on offer at the Parkside Café and Terrace in the National Maritime Museum, in a lovely setting with wonderful views over Greenwich Park. The Great Map Café, also in the National Maritime Museum, sits alongside a giant world atlas, and serves classic British sandwiches as well as a range of fresh cakes. Alternatively, try one of the many eating options at Greenwich Market, nearby. Although the centre of the market can be challenging for wheelchair users, with its crowds and cobbles, the edges, where many of the cafés are situated, are more easily navigated. Monsoon Café (020 88534495) has accessible alleyway seating and is a popular choice for coffee and cake.
022 Greenwich Park

Address: Greenwich Park Office, Blackheath Gate, Charlton Way SE10 8QY Web: www.royalparks.org.uk Tel: 0300 0612381 Hours: winter 6am–6pm, summer 6am–9.30pm (check website for exact closing times) Entry: free; pay-and-display parking, or free for up to 4 hours with Blue Badge

Greenwich Park, the site of the Royal Observatory, is London’s oldest royal park, and quite possibly its most beautiful. The views from the hilltop where the observatory stands are spectacular, taking in the Thames and much of London. The park is also celebrated for its rare and ancient trees, while further highlights include the Wilderness Deer Park and Flower Garden.

The greatest challenge for those with limited mobility is the steep hill in the centre of the park. Your best bet is to drive to the upper park: take the Blackheath Gate entrance on Charlton Way for the nine bays where Blue Badge holders can park free for up to four hours. There are a number of wheelchair accessible toilets around the park.

023 WWT London Wetland Centre

Occupying a 105-acre reserve by a meander of the Thames in southwest London, the Wildfowl and Wetlands Trust’s London Wetland Centre is a paragon of ornithological conservation, a mecca for birdwatchers and an international Site of Special Scientific Interest. A maze of accessible paths and boardwalks takes you around the marshes and over the lakes to view birdlife from Britain and migrants from around the world. Apart from the profusion of wild birds such as lapwings, gadwalls and kingfishers, you can also see a collection of exotic water birds from every corner of the globe. Six hides are scattered across the site, enabling you to watch the birds and other wildlife without being obtrusive. If mammals are more your style, don’t miss the opportunity to see the site’s Asian short-clawed otters, best appreciated at feeding time. Daily talks and monthly guided walks provide further insight into the centre’s history and its many inhabitants. In addition, an observatory with a glass wall provides a panoramic view across the lake, while the indoor interactive Discovery Centre and outdoor Explore play area cater handsomely for younger visitors.

There are several disabled parking spots in the car park, adjacent to the main visitor centre; if you’re using the pedestrian entrance, watch out for raised cracks in the tarmac, marked by yellow paint. The paths are mostly asphalt, with boardwalks and some compacted shingle, though in the World Wetlands area there are lots of wildlife gates to be opened and closed. There are several accessible toilets and all but two of the hides are single-storey with level entry, as is the Sand Martin Nest Bank. The nearby Peacock Tower hide has a lift allowing everyone access to the dramatic views across the water. Carers are admitted for free.

FOOD & DRINK  As well as neatly tended picnic areas, there’s the Kingfisher Café – eat on the terrace and observe the family of swans. The menu is clearly displayed on boards.

024 Kew Gardens

Address: Richmond TW9 3AE Web: www.kew.org/kew-gardens Tel: enquiries 020 83325655; mobility scooter pre-booking 020 83325121; BSL and sensory guided tours 020 83325643 Hours: opening hours vary throughout the year, see website for details Dates: closed 24–25 Dec Entry: [D]£16 [C]free [A]£18 [4–16s]£6 [under 4s]free [Seniors 60+]£16 [Students]£9 [Fam]£26–£42; discounts for booking online; local resident discount; free entry for registered blind and partially sighted; additional charges for some attractions; prices vary on event days

Home to more than 50,000 living plants from around the globe, the world’s largest Victorian glasshouse and even the oldest pot plant on earth, there is nowhere better to explore the beauty of nature than at the botanical gardens at Kew. Set over 300 acres, you need to pick and choose what to see in a single visit to Kew. And while there is much to choose from, nothing sums up the Kew experience like stepping inside the heady warmth of the iconic Palm House, where Tamarind, Henna and ylang-ylang trees steam up the beautiful Victorian iron and glass structure. The Temperate House is also a must, following its magnificent £14-million restoration. For those who prefer the open air, there are gardens and trees aplenty. Highlights vary throughout the year; the Great Broad Walk Borders zing with colour in summer, while the Arboretum is most spectacular with glowing autumn leaves. The new Children's Garden provides a delightful natural play area, but sadly children with limited mobility will find little to play on. The multi-sensory Hive installation offers a more immersive experience for all visitors and the Treetop Walkway provides a fun perspective up in the tree canopy.

There are eight disabled bays in the small Ferry Lane car park near Brentford Gate, three bays to the right of Elizabeth Gate and three on-street disabled bays on Lichfield Road, opposite Victoria Gate. If arriving on public transport, the eastbound platform at Kew Gardens station has level access, but Kew Bridge station is not wheelchair accessible. There is a sense of space immediately on entering the gardens. There are no closed gates, and entrances are level with easy access for wheelchair users. Ticket booth desks have hearing loops, but queues can get long – avoid the worst by purchasing tickets online. Access around Kew Gardens’ mostly level or gently undulating paths is a joy, with lots of rest seats if you tire – alternatively, hop on the Kew Explorer land train, which can fit one manual wheelchair on the back. Access to the glasshouses is mixed, with the newly renovated Temperate House offering by far the easiest access with gentle ramps, wide doorways and paths. The Palm House is trickier, with heavy, narrow doorways, and is not suitable for mobility scooters – it can also feel a little claustrophobic.
and humid with intermittent hissing noises. The upper walkways of both glasshouses are not accessible to wheelchair users. Access to The Hive is good, although the path to the upper level is a little steep. The Treetop Walkway was installed with a lift, but this is often out of order. Most other buildings at Kew – the Palace, Kitchens and Gardens – are accessible to manual wheelchairs. BSL walking tours, health walks, sensory tours for those with visual impairments and walks for visitors living with dementia can all be arranged. Kew is under a flight path, which could affect those with sensory issues. There are a number of accessible toilets throughout the site, marked on the visitor map, and a Changing Places facility with hoist near Brentford Gate (collect the key from the nearby entrance ticket desk).

FOOD & DRINK
If you’ve got children in tow then White Peaks is a pushchair- and wheelchair-friendly restaurant serving food a touch healthier than your average kids’ meal, with the likes of marinated chicken skewers and hidden veg mash.

025 Horniman Museum and Gardens

Address: 100 London Road, Forest Hill SE23 3PQ
Web: www.horniman.ac.uk
Tel: 020 86991872
Hours: museum daily 10am–5.30pm; gardens Mon–Sat 7.15am–sunset, Sun 8am–sunset
Dates: closed 24–26 Dec

Wealthy Victorian tea merchant Frederick John Horniman travelled the world for trade. Fascinated by natural and cultural history, he began selecting specimens and treasures to share with the public in his Forest Hill home. Over a hundred years later, his discoveries are on display in the accessible Horniman Museum and Gardens.

The museum and award-winning gardens sit on top of Forest Hill with glorious views over south London. The eclectic collections – with objects ranging from ancient Egyptian musical instruments to the enigmatic Horniman Merman – lie at the heart of the museum, but it’s the interactive developments and hands-on sessions that really bring the artefacts to life. You can try African drumming, discover the size of a shark’s jawbone, don a Balinese mask or watch busy bees in the beehive. The museum runs a varied programme of touch sessions, family workshops, short courses and events, many of them available for free; it pays to keep an eye on the website for listings.

The existing museum was completed in 1901 when the collection outgrew Horniman’s home, and a major centenary development has made this Victorian building easy to navigate. A good-sized lift allows access to every level, including the aquarium in the basement – home to a colony of jellyfish. Be aware, though, that heavy soundproof doors protect some of the galleries, and these can be difficult to open. In the surrounding gardens, visitors can explore the botanical display garden, the Butterfly House, bandstand, wildlife garden, meadow field, nature trail and animal walk. Limited on-site parking is available for visitors with accessibility needs; call 020 86991872 for details. Carers are entitled to free entry, and a series of videos can also be viewed online which give a visual introduction to the museum spaces, as well as a virtual journey from Forest Hill station and nearby bus stops; see www.horniman.ac.uk/visit/disability-and-access.

FOOD & DRINK  The museum café is airy and boasts an outside seating area that is a beautiful spot on sunny days. There’s a good range of family-friendly meal deals, as well as dishes reflecting the museum’s international heritage.

026 Eltham Palace

Surrounded by nineteen acres of landscaped gardens and a partial moat, Eltham Palace is most notable for its Art Deco style, although parts of the building date back to medieval times. It was owned by Stephen and Virginia Courtauld, part of a wealthy textile-owning family who were renowned for hosting lavish dinner parties here and kept a ring-tailed lemur as a pet. The palace is well worth a visit for its ornate Art Deco design and furnishings, impressive medieval hall and stunning landscaped gardens. Remains of the medieval foundations can be seen in the gardens, where you can also enjoy the waterfalls and feed the Koi carp, while the main part of the building is a fascinating throwback to the 1930s. There is generally good access for wheelchair users, and staff are on hand and ready to help.
The car park, with three disabled parking spaces, is next to the ticket office. From here, it’s about 100 metres to the palace entrance over a cobbled bridge, which may cause problems for wheelchair-users. At the entrance, you are given headsets (with subtitles for those with hearing difficulties) for an interactive tour, before entering the impressive circular reception hall. The tour starts up a flight of stairs, but there’s also lift access, and a wheelchair is available on the first floor if needed. The entrance to the medieval hall has a ramp, and visitors can also look down on the hall from a balcony (also accessible). There are fully accessible toilets in the palace and near the ticket office and café. While there are few specific facilities for those on the autism spectrum, the general noise level is low as visitors can walk around at their own pace, listening to their headsets, and the gardens are a calming environment to relax in with a number of benches. To get to the moat, you can either walk down steps or go via a bridge and grass ramp. There is also a picnic area and children’s playground near the shop and café, though wheelchair users may find the grass here slippery in wet conditions. Carers attending with a disabled visitor are given free entry; no proof of disability is required.

FOOD & DRINK The accessible and relatively inexpensive palace café caters for most tastes, with dishes ranging from homemade cottage pie and three-bean stew to a nice bowl of soup or afternoon tea.

By 1939 the looming threat of war had become a reality. British intelligence was looking for a safe base well away from central London and chose Bletchley Park with its solid road, rail and teleprinter links. Posing as a shooting party, British code breakers took over the estate and Bletchley became the nation’s best-kept secret.

This government intervention rescued Bletchley from demolition, so the elegant mansion and parklands survived, and have been open to the public since 1994. The grounds are a great place for families to relax, but it’s the exhibits at these wartime headquarters that really fascinate. The Block-B museum tells the story of the famous Enigma machines, and the Lorenz cipher system used by Hitler and German High Command. There are also exhibitions on Life at Bletchley Park, featuring the recollections of veterans, as well as a new immersive experience titled “D-Day: Interception, Intelligence, Invasion”, which presents Bletchley Park’s vital role in the planning of D-Day. An interactive visitor centre in Block C has exhibitions on codebreaking in World War I and modern cybersecurity, plus a café, shop and toilets: it’s wheelchair accessible with a hearing loop system. Visitors can collect an iPod Touch multimedia guide (included in the admission price) with which they can explore Bletchley Park and experience how it would have appeared during wartime. Huts 11 and 11A have been restored, with new audio-visual exhibitions about the invention of the Bombe machine and the vital contribution of Polish intelligence. It’s worth planning ahead to join one of the revealing guided tours (free) that give you an added insight into the house and its work. There are many objects and exhibitions to see on site, so a quick check on the website before visiting is recommended. Note that the replica of the Colossus – the world’s first computer – is now housed in The National Museum of Computing in Block H, which has a separate entry fee and is not included in the admission charge to Bletchley Park.

The museum has step-free access, with ramps installed where necessary; all the exhibitions are at ground floor level except Block B, which has a wheelchair lift. There are twelve disabled parking spaces at the back of the Porters’ Lodge and another five in the Block F car park. There is an accessible lift to the left of the six steps that lead up to the reception, and wheelchairs can be borrowed from the visitor centre for use indoors; powered scooters are permitted outdoors. There are three accessible toilets dotted around the park and guide dogs are welcome. BSL-interpreted guided tours take place throughout the year (check website for details). Sound enhancement systems are available for the midday and 2pm tours and there’s an audio tour of Block B (with built-in hearing loop), with information available at numbered points.

FOOD & DRINK Seasonal hot and cold food is on offer in the Hut 4 café, including vegan and vegetarian options. The café, located in a former codebreaking hut, is spacious, with movable seating and space to manoeuvre. There is outdoor seating for picnics, too.
Luton may not be the first place that springs to mind for a day out, but the Stockwood Discovery Centre – on the edge of town, just off the M1 – is a very good reason to visit.

The museum’s wide-ranging collection – concentrating chiefly on the Luton area – takes in social history, local crafts, archaeology and geology. Highlights include a hoard of Roman gold coins, a rare medieval bronze jug and the UK’s largest collection of horse-drawn carriages, all engagingly and accessibly presented. Outside, the large grounds – originally the estate of Stockwood House, a now-demolished eighteenth-century residence – house a series of inviting themed gardens, including the Sensory Garden, which has a tactile trail incorporating textured paving and plants to touch, a sound trail with wind chimes, and a fragrant zone, with plants such as lavender, roses and witch hazel. Look out, too, for the Improvement Garden, graced by six striking sculptures by the renowned artist Ian Hamilton Finlay – this is one of the few permanent displays of his work outside Scotland.

Accessibility is good throughout the site. The large car park has six disabled spaces, from where a broad asphalt path leads to the museum’s step-free entrance. Inside, all the displays are on the ground floor, with level access; manual wheelchairs and powered scooters can be borrowed at reception (best to phone ahead). The hand-held audio-visual guides include a BSL option, and the two videos screened in the galleries also feature BSL interpreters and subtitles. Most of the garden areas are wheelchair accessible, with alternative ways to reach anywhere that has steps, although there are a few tricky corners for wheelchairs and scooters in the Period Garden. Parts of the expansive lawn could be difficult for wheelchairs in wet weather. There are spacious accessible toilets in the Discovery Hall, Discovery Galleries and opposite the café. Those on the autism spectrum may want to visit during term time when it’s less busy, but should always be able to find a quiet spot within the 8.5-acre site; staff are on hand to assist with any special needs.

FOOD & DRINK The accessible on-site café, entered via automatic doors, serves hot and cold food and drink at reasonable prices, with a beautifully displayed cake table taking centre stage.
Parents of any child with a disability will recognise instantly the special opportunity offered by Thomley. From the moment you arrive and receive a friendly welcome, you’ll know that your children will have a fun day and that you’ll be able to relax.

This centre has been designed with the needs of all children in mind. First-time visitors are shown around the numerous activity rooms, which are located inside a series of attractive red-brick buildings, positioned around a courtyard. Here, children – regardless of any physical or learning disabilities – can create music, paint, read and engage in soft and messy play. Outdoors, in the safe, enclosed, seven-acre play space, children can spin on a wheelchair-accessible roundabout, pedal around the one-kilometre track, bash the outdoor chimes and gongs, fly down the basket-seated zipwire and swing to their heart’s content on the flat swings, bucket swings and bed swings. There’s a dedicated facility for teenagers (usually available for use by all children, 0–19, but call to check), which includes a mini-gym, vocational skills/hobby area and a den, with an Xbox and Wii.

The activity centre specially reserves some days for different groups, including toddlers, teenagers and schools, and also organises quiet days – so it is important to check the website to see when a visit would be most suitable, and book ahead. In general, on Saturdays and during school holidays, the centre is open to all children with disabilities and their friends and family. There is plenty of parking outside the centre – designated spaces for wheelchair users are on the left as you approach. There are a number of adapted toilets and a changing area, including a Changing Places facility in the teenagers’ area. Almost the whole site is wheelchair accessible, and members of the disability-aware team are swift to point out any obstacles and suggest possible alternative routes.

FOOD & DRINK Visitors can buy hot and cold food and drinks at The Pavilion Café, which has an accessible toilet and looks out onto the outside playing area.

Dates: check website
Entry: prices start at £50 per person for a half-day rafting session (minimum age 14)

Lee Valley White Water Centre is a state-of-the-art canoe and kayak slalom centre created for the Olympic Games back in 2012. Today, however, this world-class venue is open to the public for rafting and other white-water activities, including canoeing, kayaking and hydrospeeding.

Experience the thrill of tackling the waters as you paddle down the three-hundred-metre Grade IV rapids with a little help from your experienced raft guide. With thirteen thousand litres of water rushing down the course each second (that’s enough to fill an Olympic-sized swimming pool in approximately three minutes), you’ll need a certain amount of confidence in open water to take this on. Beyond this, no prior experience is necessary, and the centre welcomes people with disabilities, but ensure you check what is involved in the centre’s activity assessment before booking. All participants have to successfully complete this before being able to partake in their chosen activity.

On arrival, you’ll be kitted out with a wetsuit, boots, buoyancy aid and helmet. After the activity assessment, it’s time to hit the rapids! Your first run will be relatively calm – at the end, a conveyor will take the crew and raft back to the top, where you start all over again. Once everyone’s got their confidence, the fun and fear factor is upped with each run of the course, giving plenty of opportunities to get thoroughly drenched.

There are thirteen disabled parking bays near the main entrance, which is step-free, with automatic doors. Inside, there’s level access to the equipment area and changing rooms, which offer plenty of space for disabled visitors and have adapted men’s and women’s toilets and showers. Although being able to swim is not a prerequisite, there’s a definite risk of falling in; those with disabilities or poor swimming skills are given yellow helmets, so they can be identified quickly and given plenty of assistance. It’s a good idea to phone the centre in advance and discuss your requirements – with notice, staff can tailor conditions to match your capabilities. While the venue doesn’t currently offer discounts to carers for water-sports activities, the Summer Bounce & Sports Beach at the centre (May–Sept) does offer free entry for carers; bring any supporting documentation along with you.

FOOD & DRINK The Terrace Bar & Café serves tasty snacks and light meals, with an outdoor terrace overlooking the rapids. A lift from the ground floor provides step-free access, and it has movable seating and an accessible toilet.
031 St Albans, Hertfordshire

Spread over a hilltop, around twenty miles north of London, the ancient cathedral city of St Albans (www.enjoystalbans.com) boasts a wealth of historical attractions and one of England’s liveliest street markets. Every Wednesday and Saturday, St Peter’s Street is filled with the hustle, bustle and vibrant colours of more than 150 stalls, packed with everything from mounds of fresh fruit and vegetables to soap powder and fancy gifts. It’s all at street level, with most goods at a decent height for wheelchair users to have a browse.

If you’d rather go sightseeing, head for St Albans Cathedral (01727 890210, www.stalbanscathedral.org), just south of the high street. Home to the shrine of St Alban (Britain’s first saint), the building encompasses an exuberant blend of architectural styles, from a Norman tower and medieval chapels through to Victorian restorations and a twentieth-century Chapter House. Wheelchair access is via the West Doors or Sumpter Yard; inside, disabled provision is excellent, with ramps to inaccessible areas, a lift to the Shrine Chapel, Braille guides, induction loops and an adapted toilet.

Southwest of the cathedral, a pleasant walk through Verulamium Park – about a quarter of a mile on firm, level paths, with some rest benches along the way – takes you to the Verulamium Museum (01727 751810, www.stalbansmuseums.org.uk), which tells the story of the important Roman city that once stood on the site now occupied by St Albans. Stunning Roman mosaics, bronze figurines and other archaeological treasures are beautifully displayed alongside recreated Roman rooms and interactive exhibits. The museum galleries are all on one level, with disabled parking, a wheelchair available to borrow, subtitled videos and an accessible toilet reached via a lift. In addition, carers go free; see website for further accessibility information. Near the museum is a Roman hypocaust mosaic (www.stalbansmuseums.org.uk/hypocaust) and the remains of a Roman theatre (www.gorhamburyestate.co.uk/The-Roman-Theatre). Elsewhere, attractions include a medieval clock tower and the Grade II-listed Georgian Town Hall, home to the St Albans Museum + Gallery (01727 864511, www.stalbansmuseums.org.uk) since 2018. Inside, state-of-the-art gallery spaces showcase more than two thousand years of priceless heritage and contemporary artworks. Entrance is free and there's lift access to all floors, disabled toilets, large-print text, audio description available in the Timeline gallery and a wheelchair to borrow.

Disabled drivers can park for free for two to three hours in on-street pay-and-display spaces, and there are a number of car parks with Blue Badge bays around town, including the central Drovers Way car park, off Catherine Street. This is also home to St Albans Shopmobility (01727 819339), where you can hire wheelchairs and powered scooters. In general, getting around the compact town centre is straightforward, though some of the older streets are very narrow, and you should take care on the unusually high pavements on Fishpool Street – a relic of the days when passengers would alight from horse-drawn coaches.

032 Warner Bros. Studio Tour: The Making of Harry Potter, Hertfordshire

Address: Studio Tour Drive, Leavesden, WD25 7LR
Web: www.wbstudiotour.co.uk
Tel: Visitor Services 0845 0840900
Email: access@wbstudiotour.co.uk to book BSL-interpreted and audio-described tours
Hours: see website for details
Dates: closed 25–26 Dec
Entry: [D]£45 [C]free [A]£45 [5–15s]£37 [under 4s]free [Fam]£148; tickets must be purchased in advance; complete Studio Tour packages available

There are Gryffindor robes and Hufflepuff hoodies aplenty at the Warner Bros. Studio Tour, where fans young and old flock to explore sets from the hugely successful Harry Potter films. Anyone who loves film, art, design or storytelling can immerse themselves in the costumes, props, models and wizardry of the world of Harry Potter.

After a short film, doors open dramatically onto the set of the Great Hall, filled with familiar costumes and props. Visitors then wander free to view Dumbledore’s tower office, the Gryffindor dormitory and the potions classroom, with self-stirring pots, or step onto Platform 9¾ and peek through the windows of the original Hogwarts Express. Recent expansions and makeovers have introduced yet more immersive experiences: creep through the spooky spider-filled Forbidden Forest (there’s a shortcut available for anyone with an arachnid aversion) or steal treasure from the vaults of Gringotts – just beware of the dragon! Outside, the Backlot is home to a section of the Covered Bridge, Privet Drive and the Knight Bus, and you can also sample some frothy Butterbeer here. As well as an atmospheric reconstruction of Diagon Alley, the final section celebrates the creativity employed in the making of the films with displays of prosthetics, animatronics and stunning artwork, culminating in a magnificent 3D model of Hogwarts Castle.

Show your Blue Badge on arrival to park at the front of the car park, where there are ample disabled bays with easy level access to the outside ticket offices and entrance lobby. Staff are good at facilitating priority entrance for those with access needs, and foldable stools and manual wheelchairs are free to borrow from the information desk.
Visitors can also hire a Digital Audio Guide; this provides extra content for the Studio Tour rather than acting as an audio-descriptive guide, but could be helpful for those with visual impairment. Personal induction loops are available, too. There are disabled toilet facilities with grab rails throughout, and a new spacious Changing Places facility with bench and hoist in the entrance lobby.

There is good access throughout the studio tour – it is spacious and mostly on one level, with just a few slopes in the latter part of the tour which are well served with handrails. The hardest parts to navigate on wheels are Diagon Alley with its upward slope and cobbles, and the main shop, which can get crowded. The Forbidden Forest has low-level and strobe lighting but can be bypassed, and the realistic dragon effects in Gringotts could be scary for some. Though some original set pieces are not fully accessible, access needs have been given careful consideration. Those with sensory difficulties can borrow ear defenders for the cinema experience, and there is a small Sensory Room adjacent to the Backlot – ask staff to gain entry. Carers can visit for free by calling Visitor Services in advance (who can also help with access needs) and producing proof of DLA, PIP, a Freedom Pass, Blue Badge or doctor’s note at the ticket desk on arrival.

FOOD & DRINK

The large Food Hall serves up hearty meals such as pie and mash or soup and sandwiches, in a delightful refectory space reminiscent of Hogwarts’ Great Hall with plenty of room for wheelchairs.

033 Stanley Spencer Gallery, Berkshire

Address: The King’s Hall, High Street, Cookham, Berkshire, SL6 9SJ
Web: www.stanleyspencer.org.uk
Tel: 01628 471885

Hours: Apr–Oct Tues–Sun 10.30am–5.30pm; Nov–Mar Thur–Sun 11am–4.30pm

Dates: closed 24 & 25 Dec

The Stanley Spencer Gallery celebrates the life and works of one of Britain’s most iconic painters, in his hometown of Cookham in Berkshire. It’s an inviting and friendly gallery where art lovers can enjoy Sir Stanley Spencer’s work and hear audio accounts by his fellow artists and friends giving their personal and professional perspectives of him. Along with his beautiful paintings and drawings, personal effects such as the artist’s knighthood and glasses are on display, making the visit feel intimate and personal. Housed in a former Wesleyan chapel which Spencer frequented as a boy, the gallery is small, but uncluttered, with natural light entering though large church windows. On the upper mezzanine, visitors can watch a twenty-minute film about the artist’s life.

On Cookham High Street, the gallery is easy to find with a large sign displayed on the building. Entry is via a wheelchair-accessible glass door with a low admissions desk to the left-hand side. The gallery is about the size of two standard living rooms, with an upper-mezzanine level which is accessible from the ground floor via stairs or a lift. The lighting is good for visitors on the autism spectrum and the flooring is wooden without being excessively noisy. The mezzanine level is quiet with a few chairs, so works well as a relaxed area. There are disabled parking spaces in a small public car park behind the gallery, with reasonably level access to the gallery; at busier times, it fills quickly, but there is also ample parking adjacent to the gallery along Cookham High Street. The gallery has no bathroom, but there are accessible public toilets in the car-park grounds to the side. Large-print materials are available for visually impaired visitors, and exclusive-use sessions can be booked online for those on the autism spectrum. The website has further information for visitors with cognitive and physical conditions.

FOOD & DRINK There’s nowhere to eat in the gallery itself, but there are plenty of pubs, restaurants and cafés a stone’s throw away on Cookham High Street, including the up-market Indian Spice Merchant restaurant (www.spicemerchantgroup.com).

034 River and Rowing Museum, Oxfordshire

Set in a picturesque water meadow beside the Thames at Henley, the River and Rowing Museum gives visitors a glimpse into the historic relationships between the town of Henley, the River Thames and the sport of rowing, for which it is renowned. Designed by the award-winning British architect David Chipperfield, this bright, modern, airy museum is a very welcoming place for visitors with access needs.
The permanent displays introduce the Thames from source to estuary and review the sport of rowing through the ages. There is a look at adaptive rowing and a celebration of the GB Paralympic arms-only-rowing gold medallists. Visitors can take a virtual tour around the town and then travel through its history, via artefacts, models, boats, video displays and interactive exhibits. The museum hosts a varied programme of special exhibitions and a busy schedule of talks and workshops for children as well as adults. It also houses The Wind in the Willows Gallery – a permanent exhibition of delightful dioramas with an audio guide (headphones or loop antenna), which brings Kenneth Grahame’s classic story to life. Visiting this part of the museum should be a great experience for visitors with sensory disabilities – there are many sounds and smells to take in, and even an atmospheric chill in the wild wood.

The museum is a flat and easy ten-minute walk from Henley station and has a free car park at the rear. An enjoyable alternative means of getting here is on the combined river and museum trip from Reading to the museum’s jetty; there’s a wheelchair accessible boat which operates on this service. At the museum itself, ramps run up front and rear to the main foyer, shop and café, with access to a broad sun deck with benches and tables. There’s also an accessible toilet on this lower level. There is plenty of room for wheelchairs through most of the site and staff are happy to assist. The exhibits are on two floors, with a drive-through lift which takes a chair and a couple of helpers, and most displays are at low level with easy-to-reach buttons. The gallery doors are wide but manual and one-way, though quite easy to open. Much work has been done with local disability groups, and touch tours for local groups can be organised in advance. There are currently no specific autism facilities, but the museum is looking into ways of improving its provision.

FOOD & DRINK

The pleasant Café at the River & Rowing Museum has seating indoors and outside, plus the picnic benches have seating suitable for wheelchair users. You can grab cold snacks and a small selection of great quality hot meals.

Steeped in more than 900 years of royal history, Windsor Castle is home to Queen Elizabeth II and is a popular tourist attraction for both local and international visitors. Its attractions include the State Apartments, which can be visited along two routes: the historic route, featuring rooms built for Charles II and Catherine of Braganza, and the ceremonial route, which takes in spaces used by the Queen and other members of the Royal Family for official visits, investitures and award ceremonies. For part of the year you can also visit the Semi-State Rooms, which were severely damaged in the fire of 1992 but later comprehensively restored to their nineteenth-century appearance. You can marvel at fascinating displays of military arms and some of the finest paintings and furniture from the Royal Collection. Check out, too, the calm and tranquil St George’s Chapel, resting place of ten British monarchs, including Henry VIII and Charles I, and venue for the wedding between Prince Harry and Meghan Markle in 2018.

Accessible parking is available in marked bays on the high street, meaning a short walk uphill to the castle. Ticket queues outside the castle are long, but if you pre-book online you can bypass them; free carer passes can only be booked by phone and the usual phone supplement of £2 is waived for disabled guests. Those who find crowds challenging should visit after lunch when the castle is less busy. All visitors have to go through an airport-style security check prior to entering the grounds; those who may be distressed by the beeping metal detector should avoid wearing belts or other metal items. The flooring on arrival at the castle is stone with some rugs on stairs, and there are also carpeted areas throughout (the website has detailed images of flooring and access to each room). There are three small steps at the entrance to St George’s Chapel, but if you press the buzzer staff can take you to an alternative entrance. Clear signs are given to all the rooms, though you’ll have to queue to enter the Dolls’ House and State Apartments. There’s a Changing Places facility next to the Engine Court gift shop. Wheelchairs can be borrowed on request from the ticket office, and a BSL video tour is available and included in the ticket price from the admission centre. There’s detailed autism support and accessibility information on the website, including clear colour photos of the castle interior for those wishing to familiarise themselves with the layout prior to visiting.

FOOD & DRINK

Windsor Castle’s first permanent café recently opened in the medieval undercroft. One of the few remaining parts of Edward III’s major renovations in the 1360s, the undercroft is among the oldest surviving parts of the castle and during the fourteenth century served as the principal cellar and larder.

036 Legoland Windsor, Berkshire

Address: Winkfield Road, Windsor SL4 4AY
Web: www.legoland.co.uk
Tel: 0871 2222001
Hours: hours vary throughout the year, see website for details
Dates: closed Oct–Feb except select Christmas dates
Entry: online/at gate [D]£31/£52 [C]free [A]£31/£52 [3–15s]£31/£52 [Fam]£99 (online only); annual passes, all inclusive, group and VIP tickets all available online

When the building bricks of a theme park are a much-loved toy, it’s going to have instant appeal. Add fairy-tale characters, pirates, dragons and Lego favourites Ninjago and Star Wars and it’s a winning formula. What really makes Legoland special, though, is the care that goes into making it a fun and engaging place for all children, whatever their ability and mobility.

The 72-acre park is divided into different “lands”, each with their own theme. Small children will love the gentle rides of Duploland, while those seeking more thrills will find them in the Land of the Vikings, Knights Kingdom or in the crazy upside-down world of the new Haunted House Monster Party. Some rides can accommodate children who can’t leave their wheelchairs, including Atlantis Submarine Voyage, which uses a hoist, and the Aero Nomad big wheel with a wheelchair-accessible gondola.
There is also a lot to marvel at, including a pirate stunt show in Heartlake City, a 4D cinema and Miniland – the showcase Lego recreation of famous world landmarks – as well as a chance to get hands-on in the Imagination Centre. The resort now has two Lego-themed hotels, both with accessible rooms. Staying on-site gives visitors a second day free in the park and early ride access on selected rides.

The enormous car park has ample disabled parking, from where it’s a short walk to the entrance with music and Lego models building the excitement. Queues can be long, but booking online means you can pass through quickly. Legoland also operates a smart-phone based Ride Access Pass system for those who find queuing difficult due to a disability; it allows one disabled visitor and three guests to queue “virtually” rather than waiting in line (the criterion is quite tight: you’ll need to supply a doctor’s letter or proof of enhanced-rate PIP or higher-rate DLA). There are dedicated Ride Access Pass desks, but ironically the queue is often long. A portable hearing-loop system is available at all ticket windows and Guest Services.

Most of the site is fairly level, with a few steeper gradients and one fairly steep hill on entering/leaving the park; the Hill Train provides an alternative to the zig-zag path and can accommodate manual wheelchairs. Legoland is a busy theme park, with crowds, lots of bright colours and activity that can be overwhelming. While the rides are mostly outdoors, some have low-level lighting and could feel claustrophobic or scary; others use flashing lights (effects are detailed online and at ride entrances). There is a “quiet hour” in Star Wars Miniland between 2 and 3pm every day, and the Total Sensory Space that opened in 2018 is a large and fantastic refuge with an impressive array of sensory equipment. In addition, staff are helpful and well-versed in accommodating children with additional needs, ready to stop or slow rides down to aid transition. There are wheelchair-accessible toilets with grab rails throughout the park, some accessed via RADAR key, plus a large Changing Places facility in Heartlake City. The website has a comprehensive Accessibility Guide. Carers go free but should bring documentation and must be at least fourteen years old.
FOOD & DRINK

City Walk in Heartlake City offers all-you-can-eat pizza, pasta and salad in a spacious restaurant where it is possible to find a quiet corner – or sit out front and take in a show on the lake.

037 Aerobility, Surrey

Address: Blackbushe Airport, Camberley, GU17 9LQ
Web: www.aerobility.com
Email: frontdesk@aerobility.com
Tel: 0303 3031230
Hours: daily 9am–6pm
Dates: no scheduled closures but weather-dependent
Entry: flight experience in light aircraft £66 (2hrs, approx 30min in the air) [C]free

Flying a plane is something you might dream about but never expect to do. One visit to Aerobility, formerly the British Disabled Flying Association, will have you questioning your preconceptions and realising just how easily the barriers can be broken down.

The Aerobility charity enables people with disabilities to experience flying light aircraft. If you want, you can go on to gain the necessary flying hours and get your pilot’s licence. The charity has the use of six light planes at Blackbushe, its main base, with other centres at Tatenhill, Staffordshire and elsewhere on a temporary basis throughout the year. The flights are heavily subsidised, offered at around half the going rate, but have to be booked in advance. The planes have either two or four seats with easy access to the cockpit and full dual controls in the front seats. Once airborne, you’re encouraged to take the controls to get a feel for how the plane handles: the qualified instructors, some of them disabled themselves, are always in full control. It’s a thrilling, potentially life-changing experience, and even on your first flight, with the reassurance and simple explanations from your instructor about the dials and gauges, you’ll get enough of an insight to want to go up again.

When you call or email to book your flight, your instructor will tell you where to find them on the airfield. Disabled parking is adjacent to the new clubhouse, which has a large accessible toilet. A wheelchair accessible golf buggy can take you to the aircraft. Two types of plane offer options for cockpit entry for those with reduced mobility. The aircraft wings are low enough to step or transfer onto easily, followed by a few steps or a shuffle into the cockpit. For those with less movement, an electric hoist can safely lift flyers into the aircraft as required at Blackbushe and Tatenhill. Those with sight, hearing, cognitive or learning disabilities and mental-health issues can also participate: Aerobility say they’ve never turned anyone away. While carers go free, a suggested donation of £10 is appreciated towards costs.

FOOD & DRINK
The Bushe Café sells drinks and snacks – a great place for a flight debrief.

038 RHS Garden Wisley, Surrey

Address: Wisley, Woking GU23 6Q8
Web: www.rhs.org.uk/wisley
Tel: 01483 224234
Hours: Mon–Fri 10am–6pm, Sat–Sun and bank hols 9am–6pm (until 4.30pm mid-Oct–mid-Mar)
Dates: closed 25 Dec
Situated just off the A3, Wisley is home to the flagship gardens of the Royal Horticultural Society (RHS), an oasis of tranquillity. Its sixty acres include superb permanent and temporary gardens and displays of native and non-native plants. With more than one hundred years of horticultural expertise to draw on, areas range from the herbaceous border to the rose garden and the spectacular exotic garden; a real highlight is the historic glasshouse, with banana plants and other vibrant giants of the plant world. As well as a riot of flora, the grounds include a series of pavilions and many seating areas where you can enjoy a picnic; three walks lead around the site, including a riverside walk that meanders through the woods.

Designated disabled parking is located close to the main entrance in car parks 1 and 2, with 2 nearest the entrance. The site has been redeveloped over the last few years, and is now fully accessible, with very few steps and paths that consist mostly of grass or gravel. Where steps do feature, a wheelchair-accessible alternative is provided, and benches are thoughtfully located at regular intervals. Motorised scooters and wheelchairs are available to borrow; inside the gardens, open-sided group mobility vehicles drop people off at the main attractions around the site throughout the day. Signage is clear and large, and while some plants are off limits, others can be touched, and many provide a rich sensory experience. The site can get busy at weekends, but weekdays are quieter. Given the size of the grounds and the number of different gardens and displays, be sure to make use of the site map (with an accessible route marked). There are accessible toilets around the site, with grab rails and wide entrance doors.

FOOD & DRINK

The struggle at Wisley is deciding which of the five restaurants and cafés to refuel at. Prices are reasonable and access is good at all of them, with several indoor and outdoor options.

039 The Home of Charles Darwin (Down House), Kent

Address: Down House, Luxted Road, Downe BR6 7JT
Web: www.english-heritage.org.uk
Tel: 01689 859119
Hours: Apr–Sept daily 10am–6pm; Oct daily 10am–5pm; Nov to mid-Feb Sat & Sun 10am–4pm; mid-Feb to Mar Wed–Sun 10am–4pm
Dates: closed 24 & 25 Dec

In 1842, when the young Charles Darwin needed a bigger house to accommodate his growing family, this is where he moved to: Down House, a sturdy Georgian home in a pretty Kent village. Darwin was to live, study and work here until his death, forty years later. Preserved as a museum by English Heritage, it offers a fascinating glimpse into the life and work of this remarkable British scientist.

Many of the ground-floor rooms have been meticulously restored to their 1870s appearance, based on photographs and family accounts; the drawing room and billiard room, in particular, retain the look and feel of a family home. Best of all is the study, crammed with books, scientific instruments and specimens, as well as the chair and writing board on which Darwin wrote On the Origin of Species. Upstairs is a series of interactive exhibits, including a recreation of Darwin's cabin on HMS Beagle. Outside you can explore the estate grounds where Darwin conducted many of his experiments.

There’s a car park with two disabled bays about fifty yards from the house. The main entrance to the house involves a few steps; wheelchair access is via the shop. Inside, the rooms are cosy, especially the study which is the smallest of all the ground-floor rooms. All will fit a wheelchair, but there’s no room to turn a wheelchair in the study so assistance may be required. Most ground-floor rooms have level access, and there’s a good-sized lift up to the first floor. Audio guides, Braille guides and large-print guides are available, and all video displays have subtitles. Outside, most areas of the garden are accessible, though the greenhouses are a bit narrow for wheelchairs and the Sandwalk (Darwin’s “thinking path”) has an uneven surface; wheelchair users may need assistance here. A wheelchair is available to borrow at Down House (ring ahead to reserve). There’s an accessible toilet outside, next to the tearoom. Down House has many quiet areas and staff can advise on less busy times to visit; all staff have disability-awareness training and there are three staff members on the autism spectrum.

FOOD & DRINK The accessible ground-floor tearoom is attractive and inexpensive; offerings include soup and homemade cakes. On warm days you can eat outside on the spacious patio. Alternatively, picnics are allowed in the designated picnic area in the 1881 garden extension – ask staff to direct you if necessary.

040 Canterbury, Kent

An Aladdin’s cave of ancient buildings, quirky shops and a small but lively arts scene, Canterbury is nearly 2000 years old, although much of the city’s architecture dates from the Middle Ages. It’s best known for its cathedral, which became a major destination for pilgrims following the murder of Archbishop Thomas Becket on its altar in 1170.

The city’s pilgrim heritage was the inspiration behind Geoffrey Chaucer’s The Canterbury Tales and is explored at The Canterbury Tales, St Margaret’s Street (01227 696002, www.canterburytales.org.uk), which takes visitors back in time on a pilgrimage with audio tours (hearing loops available) and actors playing some of Chaucer’s most colourful characters – the flickering lights, atmospheric smells and sudden noises may be overwhelming for those with sensory disabilities, however. There’s room for one wheelchair, though there are a few steps in the first room with no grab rails. Rest benches are provided throughout, and those with visual impairments can experience the displays through touch and feel. The city’s medieval centre, with its cobbledstones and half-timbered buildings, is a stone’s throw from Canterbury Cathedral (11 The Precincts, 01227 762862, www.canterbury-cathedral.org). Dating from 597, it’s one of England’s oldest cathedrals so parts of it aren’t wheelchair accessible: uneven surfaces and worn stairs can be an issue, and some interior steps don’t have grab rails. Other attractions worth visiting include the nearby King’s Mile (01227 785699, www.thekingsmile.org.uk) with its array of boutique and gift shops, patisseries and cafés; the Beaney House of Art and Knowledge art gallery and museum (18 High St, 01227 862162, www.canterbury-museums.co.uk); and the fully accessible St Augustine’s Abbey (Longport, 01227 767345, www.english-heritage.org.uk/visit/places/st-augustines-abbey). For a novel way to see the city, book a boat trip with the Canterbury Punting Company (www.canterbury-punting.co.uk). They offer group and individual punting trips through the waterways of Canterbury with commentary and a chauffeur; a transfer board helps wheelchair users onto the boat, and there’s a loop system too. Try to call ahead – the team will do what they can to accommodate visitors of all abilities.
Driving into central Canterbury can be tricky, with on-street parking hard to come by: Orange Street is the only disabled car park, with eighteen dedicated parking bays (though it’s unsigned and hard to find). See www.canterbury.gov.uk/parking-travel-roads/where-to-park/canterbury-parking for details of other accessible parking in Canterbury. However, it’s better to use the Park and Ride, which is served by three accessible bus routes. By their very nature, the most interesting parts of Canterbury can be hard for disabled visitors to navigate due to the cobblestones, although some roads have drop-down kerbs and smoother paved areas. The partially pedestrianised King’s Mile is level and accessible, though many of its historic shops are small and narrow, with medieval and Tudor buildings overhanging the pavements. Whitefriars shopping centre has the usual high-street chain stores, and the city’s Shopmobility store (01227 459889, www.cshopmobility.org.uk), on the second floor of Whitefriars multi-storey car park; here you can hire scooters and electric or manual wheelchairs (£7/day scooters and electric wheelchairs, £4/day manual wheelchairs; advance booking recommended). Most of the city’s public toilets require a RADAR key, though the visitor centre (01227 862162, www.canterbury.co.uk), in Beaney House, has several clean, spacious, accessible toilets.

041 Leeds Castle, Kent

Address: Leeds Castle, Maidstone, Kent, ME17 1PL
Web: www.leeds-castle.com
Tel: 01622 765400

Hours: Daily: Apr–Sept 10am–4.30pm; gates close 6pm; Shop 10am–6pm; grounds & gardens 10am–5pm; playgrounds, maze, grotto and birds of prey centre 10am–5pm; train 10am–5.15pm; Oct–Mar 10am–3pm; gates close 5pm; shop 10am–4pm; grounds & gardens 10am–5pm; playgrounds, maze, grotto and birds of prey centre 10am–4pm; train 10am–4.30pm

Dates: castle closed on Nov fireworks weekend & 25 Dec

So much more than just a historic building, the extensive grounds in and around Leeds Castle play host to a range of family-friendly activities, from a ferry trip on the lake, through a birds of prey centre, formal gardens and a maze, to the downright bizarre dog-collar museum. There’s also a fully accessible Adventure Golf course themed around the castle and its key attractions.

The castle itself is the focal attraction and with good reason. Its rich architectural history spans nearly one thousand years: from Norman beginnings, it served as a royal palace for several medieval and Tudor queens, before becoming the private residence in the 1920s of Lady Baillie, who restored much of the castle to its former glory. A visit round the castle starts at the Norman keep, continuing through a series of magnificently furnished royal apartments complete with tapestries, ornate carvings and a spiral staircase, before finishing up in 1920s-style apartments. Garden lovers will enjoy the formal and Mediterranean-inspired gardens, maze and grotto, while there are play areas for children and acres of woodland and extensive grounds to explore.

There are disabled parking bays near the entrance, though these fill up quickly. Book online to avoid long queues at the ticket kiosks in summer. There are spacious accessible toilets throughout the attraction, including at the entrance, the Fairfax Courtyard and the Knight’s Realm Playground. From the entrance, it’s a fifteen-minute walk through woodland gardens to the castle; alternatively, you can borrow a manual wheelchair from the ticket kiosks (book in advance at busy times). Alternatively, a minibus and a little train run from the kiosks to the castle entrance, though unfortunately the train cannot cater to wheelchair users.

The drawbridge at the castle entrance has several yards of cobblestones, but is relatively even ground on the other side. There's alternative access into the castle via a ramp at the main door for those who can't manage the initial steps into the wine cellar. Wheelchair users are taken on an accessible route around the ground floor of the castle, against the flow of visitors. A wheelchair lift is available between the first corridor and the Heraldry Room, with staff on hand to assist, though the upper floor is inaccessible for wheelchair users. There are several rest seats throughout and audio guides are available with, on request, an induction loop. The castle corridors get very congested in summer, so those who find crowds overwhelming may want to visit in the last hour before closing when it tends to be quieter. There are plenty of tranquil places in the large grounds and gardens, where visitors of all ages can find some peace and quiet.

The maze and grotto are not suitable for wheelchair users, though the falconry display and dog-collar museum have level access, and the ferry boat has space for up to three wheelchairs. The formal gardens, although on different levels, are accessible via slopes and ramps. The Culpeper Garden and the Mediterranean-style garden, in particular, have several rest seats and tend to be the quietest areas.

FOOD & DRINK Food and drink options include the level-access Fairfax Restaurant (£10 for mains), with toilets accessed via a wheelchair lift, plus food kiosks and cafés (sandwiches from £4), though the kiosks, particularly around the courtyard, have a step and limited space for wheelchairs. Or, you can enjoy a picnic in the five-hundred-acre grounds.

042 Samphire Hoe, Kent

Address: signposted south off the A20, 2km west of Dover CT17 9FL (not recognised by all satnavs); contact address: White Cliffs Countryside Partnership, c/o Dover District Council, White Cliffs Business Park, Dover, CT16 3PJ

Web: www.samphirehoe.com

Hours: daily 7am–dusk

Dates: no closures

Entry: free; pay-and-display car park (free to Blue Badge holders)
The 6.4 million cubic yards of chalk marl that came out of the Channel Tunnel had to go somewhere: it was piled in the sea below the White Cliffs at Dover and the result is a unique, isolated stretch of chalk meadowland – now a nature reserve – called Samphire Hoe. It’s a haven for wildlife and human visitors alike.

This new piece of Kent is a magical and ever-changing place: tucked in under the cliffs, it can be a peaceful sun trap and picnic spot on a hot day, but in rough weather the waves can come crashing in. The Hoe is landscaped with small lakes and sown with local wildflowers – look out for granny’s toenails (also known as bird’s-foot trefoil) – and is home to the rare early spider orchid, which you can see in April and May. Many species of insects and birds have rapidly colonised the area, and if you’re quiet, and very lucky, you might see an adder. If you like sea-fishing, then bring your tackle along and try your luck along the sea wall. And be sure to check out the sound sculptures, which evoke the history and beauty of the nature reserve. These installations have been created by local artists, who have combined pictures, sculpture and sound recordings to tell the stories of the people who used to live here under the cliffs, and to evoke the haunting natural sounds and beauty of the Hoe. An indoor shelter (open year-round) houses six changing exhibitions of indoor and outdoor activities; call for details.

Next to the car park – which has four designated disabled bays – there is a tea kiosk with a RADAR key-accessible toilet. The kiosk has free maps of the Hoe that show all the paths, the many benches and the wheelchair-accessible route. The full circuit is just over a mile of asphalt and gravel path, changing to concrete back along the sea wall, with an average gradient of 1:15, but sometimes steeper. The other paths are quite challenging: the small shingle beach is accessed by steps and on rough days the sea wall may be closed, indicated by a red warning beacon and signs. For those who find noise challenging, the quietest time to visit is between 7am and 10am.

FOOD & DRINK Samphire Hoe is a great place for picnics; there’s also a kiosk in the car park selling reasonably priced hot and cold drinks, snacks, filled rolls and cakes.

043 Kent and East Sussex Scenic Drive

Driving distance: 62 miles
Approx driving time without stops: 2 hours 15 minutes

You’ll be treated to plenty of variety on this rewarding drive through Kent and East Sussex, on a route of many contrasts.

Starting at the ancient seaport of Hythe – which boasts a long, accessible promenade overlooking the English Channel – drive south and you’ll soon find yourself in the flat, bleak landscape of Romney Marsh, a vast expanse of drained marshland populated by grazing sheep and the occasional hamlet. It’s very atmospheric, especially if you weave through the small interior roads, via Lympne (with great views from its churchyard), Burmarsh and St Mary in the Marsh.

The coast road (A259) is faster, but less interesting – even the sea remains hidden behind the giant sea wall lining the road. If you want a sea view, stop off at Dungeness, on the southern tip of the headland. Set on a long shingle promontory, home to two nuclear power stations, a lonely railway station (terminus of the Romney, Hythe and Dymchurch railway; 01797 362353, www.rhdr.org.uk) and a couple of lighthouses, it can’t be said to be pretty, but it’s oddly compelling. There is also a clutch of fishermen’s shacks dotted around the promontory; the windswept garden of Prospect Cottage, designed by former owner, film director and artist Derek Jarman, is a fittingly understated local attraction. An accessible boardwalk takes you over the shingle to the water’s edge, and there’s an accessible café and accessible toilet in the station (open Easter–Sept).

Back in the car, head inland to Lydd – on the way, you’ll pass a signed turning on the left to the RSPB Dungeness nature reserve (01797 320588, www.rspb.org.uk), where you can admire abundant birdlife from six wheelchair-accessible hides. From Lydd, it’s a twenty-minute drive to Rye, a picturesque medieval town. The old centre, perched on a hill, isn’t ideal for wheelchair users, with its steep inclines and cobbled streets, but the attractive harbourside area below is pretty level and has a few disabled parking spaces and a RADAR key-accessible public toilet.

Turning inland from Rye on the B2082, you’ll exchange the desolate lowland of Romney Marsh for rolling Kent downland, with orchards, hop fields and vineyards on every side. It’s a startling transformation, and very pretty. Good stopping-off points include Iden and Wittersham, a pair of quaint little villages with old churches, and the bustling market town of Tenterden, with an appealing array of shops, tearooms and pubs. To finish off, take the A262 to Goudhurst, a beautiful, red-roofed village dramatically sited on the top of a hill, offering lovely views over the Kent Weald.

FOOD & DRINK >> In Rye, good seafood and steak are on offer at Carey’s (01797 224783) at the harbourside; it has ramped access but no accessible toilet (there’s a public one opposite). In Tenterden, the White Lion Hotel (01580 765077) has level entry, an accessible toilet, splendid food and a selection of award-winning ales.
044 Arundel Castle, West Sussex

Address: Arundel Castle, Arundel, West Sussex, BN18 9AB
Web: www.arundelcastle.org
Tel: 01903 882173
Hours: Apr–Nov Tues–Sun plus Mon in Aug & bank hols 10am–5pm; restaurant, café & keep close at 4.30pm (last admission to castle 4pm)
Dates: closed Nov–Apr
Entry: Prices vary depending on which type of ticket you buy and which parts of the castle you visit; check website for details.

One of England’s largest inhabited castles, Arundel Castle was founded in the eleventh century by Roger de Montgomery, Earl of Arundel, and today is the family home of the eighteenth Duke of Norfolk. The castle has commanded spectacular views over the striking landscape of the South Downs for nearly ten centuries. Its tall turrets, imposing defences, landscaped gardens and Norman motte and keep make it seem almost enchanted from afar, while the finely preserved interior includes the Baron’s Hall (accessible via a platform lift), the fourteenth-century Catholic Fitzalan Chapel and Victorian bedrooms (both inaccessible to wheelchairs), and a Regency library. In the library are paintings by Van Dyck, Gainsborough and Holbein.

A ramped entrance and lift provide access to the castle. Inside, about one-third of the castle is inaccessible for wheelchair users (and may be tricky for visitors with physical disabilities) due to the ancient architecture – the spiral staircases and narrow corridors of the keep, for example, as well as the several flights of steps leading to the bedrooms. Lift access is provided to most of the floors, but the Victorian lift that takes visitors to the ground and first floor has a width restriction (24ins) due to its age. If your wheelchair is too wide to fit, collapsible wheelchairs are available to borrow. Wooden floors inside the castle can be noisy, though there are some quiet areas too. Well-kept accessible toilets are found on site and castle staff receive disability training. Outside, there are footpaths throughout the landscaped castle gardens and ramps wherever there are steps, though there are some slopes and gravel paths.

Blue Badge parking is found in the car park near the ticket office. The incline from the ticket office to the castle entrance is steep, but a motorised buggy ferries people up and down the hill (arrange at the ticket office). Concession tickets (including those for visitors with disabilities) should be purchased at the ticket office on the day of your visit, rather than online (bring proof such as a DID card). Carers accompanying a disabled adult receive free entry to the castle. If the carer is accompanying a child, meanwhile, the child gains free entry and the carer pays the adult ticket price.

FOOD & DRINK

The castle coffee shop and restaurant are both wheelchair accessible and serve reasonably priced light lunches and snacks. Alternatively, there are plenty of cafés and tea rooms in Arundel, including the sixteenth-century Belinda’s in Tarrant Street, which serves homemade cakes.

045 Drusillas Park, East Sussex

Address: Alfriston BN26 5QS  Web: www.drusillas.co.uk  Tel: 01323 874100  Hours: summer (BST) daily 10am–6pm, winter daily 10am–5pm; last entry one hour before closing  Dates: closed 24–26 Dec

Entry: peak prices shown; savings available off peak [D]£16 [C]free (PIP or DLA letter required) [A]£16 [2–16s]£16 [Con]£15 [Fam]£31–77.50 depending on family size

“No Ordinary Zoo!” claim Drusillas on their promotional material, and therein lies the appeal of this attraction: while most children love looking at animals, it’s all too easy to get a bit fur-fatigued. The joy of Drusillas is that it is a zoo and play park rolled into one, and the compact nature of the site means you can happily hop between the two.

There are no lions, tigers or bears here, but instead, plenty of cute and cuddly creatures, not least in the walk-through Lemurland, home to friendly ring-tailed and black lemurs. It is possible to pop up in a glass dome in the middle of the meerkat enclosure too. The pengineer feeding session is delightful. The zoo is peppered with fun “finding-out facts”; kids can stamp their animal-spotter guides; and activity points around the park – the Zoolympics Challenges – test human skills against animals. Can your children hold their breath as long as a penguin? They can also monkey around in the outdoor animal-themed and soft indoor play areas. Younger children will enjoy the Hello Kitty Secret Garden, with themed rides and a house and parlour where children can meet Hello Kitty on a number of dates throughout the year: face-painting, hair-braiding and stick-on tattoos are also available on various dates. A three-ride attraction called “Go Safari!” includes the Safari Express train, The Hippopotobus and the Flying Cheetah ride, while the new Drusillas Rainforest Carousel allows young ones to climb aboard their favourite animal.

The whole park is wheelchair accessible, with induction loops at all four entrances. Paving is concrete or tarmac, with no steps, and there are places to rest. All enclosures have low-level viewing for wheelchair users. Wheelchairs are available, with a £20 refundable deposit: book in advance on 01323 874100. How much of the play equipment is accessible depends on a child’s individual mobility, but the trampoline in the Go Bananas area is flush to the ground, and there are two round team swings and some boat-style swings that a smaller child could lie in. There are a number of accessible toilets around the park: the most spacious are next to Amazon Adventure. Key staff have disability training, and disabled visitors can apply to the visitor services centre at the park entrance for an Access Pass, which allows priority access to rides and events. Carers go free (bring evidence of PIP or DLA payments within the last two years to be eligible).

FOOD & DRINK

The Explorer’s Café serves decent, reasonably priced meals such as pasta and sausages. There’s also a picnic area with several wheelchair-accessible benches.

046 Brighton Royal Pavillion and Museum

Address: The Royal Pavilion, 4–5 Pavilion Buildings, Brighton BN1 1EE; Museum and Art Gallery, Royal Pavilion Gardens, Brighton BN1 1EE
Web: www.brightonmuseums.org.uk
Tel: 0300 0290900
Hours: pavilion: Apr–Sept daily 9.30am–5.45pm, Oct–Mar daily 10am–5.15pm, last admission 45 minutes before closing; museum: Tues–Sun 10am–5pm
Dates: pavilion closed at 2.30pm 24 Dec, all day 25–26 Dec; museum closed Mon (except bank hols), 1 Jan & 24–26 Dec
Built to impress by the Prince Regent, later George IV, the Royal Pavilion in Brighton is a unique combination of eccentric architecture and sumptuous interior design. From outside, with its Palladian symmetry and meringue-like topping of onion-shaped domes, the Pavilion looks like a cross between Buckingham Palace and the Taj Mahal.

Inside, the Chinese styling is as extravagant as George IV’s lifestyle was scandalous. And while it may not be to your taste, you can’t fail to be impressed by the opulence of the decoration – known as Chinoiserie – the quality of the craftsmanship and the ambition of the design. Probably the most impressive example is the Banqueting Room. Here, suspended from the domed ceiling, a red-tongued silver dragon clutches a thirty-foot chandelier, weighing more than a tonne, from which extend six more fire-breathing dragons. The grandeur persists as you move through the ground-floor rooms and culminates when you arrive at the Music Room with its breathtaking domed ceiling, lined with 26,000 individually made hand-gilded scallop shells.

There aren’t many places to sit and rest on the way round, but manual wheelchairs are available to borrow, and the staff are helpful and happy to lend a hand. Unfortunately, the first floor is only accessible by a flight of thirty shallow stairs with a handrail. If you can manage the stairs, you can visit the bedrooms used by George IV’s brothers and Queen Victoria’s bedroom. But if you can’t, rest assured the highlights are downstairs.

Just across the beautiful Pavilion Gardens – about one hundred yards away – you’ll find the Brighton Museum and Art Gallery. The museum is free and small enough to be a perfect addition to your visit. Inside you will find collections of world art, fashion and style, local Willett’s pottery, and a fascinating collection of photos of old Brighton. The most eye-catching exhibits are in the museum’s diverse twentieth-century collection, home to pieces from the early Art Deco period to contemporary works. There is a pair of giant lips that is actually a sofa, ceramic art by Turner Prize winner Grayson Perry, and beautiful domestic objects that your granny might have owned. The museum has level access, some seating, an accessible toilet and a lift between floors.

Neither the pavilion nor the museum have any dedicated parking, but drop-offs and pick-ups can be arranged in advance. On-street parking in Brighton is free all day for Blue Badge holders in disabled bays and pay-and-display bays, as well as in car parks (responsible parking on single and double yellow lines is also free for up to three hours).

FOOD & DRINK

Royal Pavilion Tearoom is on the first floor of the building, so out of reach for some visitors, but there’s an accessible tea shop, Pavilion Tea Company, on the ground floor next to the shop. At the museum, excellent homemade cakes, drinks and light lunches are served in the accessible tearoom overlooking the main exhibition area. The tea hut in the Pavilion Gardens sells drinks and snacks and is a great place to sit on a sunny day.

047 Around Chichester Harbour: Solar Heritage Boat Trips and West Wittering Beach, West Sussex

Boat trips: Address: The Harbour Office, The Street, Itchenor PO20 7AW Web: www.conservancy.co.uk Tel: 01243 513275 Hours: departures from Emsworth most days in the summer hols; scheduled
An abundance of wildlife, sandy beaches and views towards the Isle of Wight and South Downs make Chichester Harbour an attractive place to live, work and visit. Indeed, people have been settling here since Roman times, so visitors get to soak up not only all of the above, but the fascinating history of the area too.

The Solar Heritage is a solar-powered boat that glides almost silently through this Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty (AONB). The knowledgeable crew are excellent at drawing attention to points of historical interest and wildlife – you’ll pass historic settlements, a rich variety of coastal habitats and see evidence of Victorian-era attempts to reclaim land from the sea. Binoculars are provided free of charge and come in particularly handy for children keeping their eyes peeled for seals. After the boat trip, visit beautiful West Wittering beach for an afternoon of sandcastle building and games, or take a stroll around the sand dunes at East Head – this area can be approached from the far west end of the car park, and is also the starting point for the eleven-mile Salterns Way cycle and wheelchair-accessible path to Chichester.

The Solar Heritage sails from Itchenor and Emsworth: check the website for the full seasonal schedule. At Itchenor, it is possible to be dropped off on the slipway, or park in the street – a Blue Badge space is available around two hundred yards from the Harbour Office, where there is a wheelchair-accessible toilet. The road is quite uneven and slopes down towards the slipway. There is a short ramp with a lip to reach the pontoon, which has a handrail and is around one hundred yards from the boat. Although the staff have not had specialist training, they will assist with access to the boat. For wheelchair users, this is via a lift that has a maximum weight limit of 364 kilograms (about 57 stone). At Emsworth, you can park for free either in the village 250 yards from the pontoon, or on the quay 150 yards away. The accessible toilet is in the village car park. The toilet on the boat is not wheelchair accessible. On cold days, blankets can be requested during the journey.

FOOD & DRINK The popular Ship Inn in Itchenor (www.theshipinnitchenor.co.uk) is 150 yards from the Harbour Office, serving real ales and good snacks and meals. It is accessible by a ramp, but there’s no accessible toilet. At West Wittering, the Beach Café (01243 514143) offers limited food, though visiting vans augment the fare.

Soaring proudly above Portsmouth’s harbour to a height of 557 feet, Emirates Spinnaker Tower offers breathtaking panoramas from three viewing platforms. Completed in 2005, the gleaming white, gold and blue tower is an impressive sight, its graceful outline cleverly evoking the shape of a billowing sail. The views from inside, however, are what it’s all about: in clear weather you can see up to 23 miles, as far as the Isle of Wight, the South Downs and the New Forest. A high-speed lift whisks visitors up to View Deck 1 (328ft above sea level), where floor-to-ceiling glass walls surround you on three sides, allowing uninterrupted views across the city, harbour and far beyond. When you’ve had your fill of the views, test your nerves on the glass-floor sky walk before taking the lift up to View Deck 2 (344ft), where you can reward yourself with coffee and cake at The Clouds café. The open-air Sky Garden (360ft), on the top level, is unfortunately not accessible by lift, and involves a climb of thirty steps.

There are plenty of Blue Badge bays in the Gunwharf Quays underground car park, which is around two hundred yards (step-free) from the tower. Once there, the entrance lobby offers easy wheelchair access, accessible toilets, a hearing loop and helpful staff. Only one wheelchair user is allowed up the tower at a time (to comply with emergency evacuation procedures), so if this applies to you, be sure to book ahead. Large-print and audio guides are available at reception, to describe the view at specified, numbered vantage spots. There’s also a tactile model of the tower, to help visually impaired visitors get a sense of its structure. On View Deck 1 there is a handrail around the edge of the glass and the floor surface is level on both View Deck 1 and 2.

FOOD & DRINK The Waterside Café at the base of the tower serves a selection of hot and cold meals, sandwiches, teas, coffees and ice creams, using ingredients sourced from local suppliers. The Clouds café on View Deck 2 serves hot drinks and cake, or you can try their High Tea, which must be booked in advance.
When you board Brunel’s SS Great Britain, sitting tight in the Bristol dry dock where she was built, you enter the era of Victorian ingenuity and self-confidence. The first ocean liner and biggest passenger ship of its era, this rescued vessel has undergone a loving restoration to give visitors a real sense of adventure. Opened in 2018, the attached Being Brunel museum explores the life and legacy of Isambard Kingdom Brunel, the acclaimed engineer behind the ship, who crammed so much into his 53 years that it’s impossible not to come away inspired.

Stories of the ship’s lifetime, voyages and passengers – including many animals – are brought to life through engaging, interactive exhibits. There are flaps to lift and clothes to dress up in; visitors can even steer the ship, move its propeller and pick out a boarding pass. The on-board class divide is brought home by the stark contrast between the elegant First Class cabins and the cramped, noisy and smelly steerage-passenger quarters. In the Being Brunel museum there’s a huge, colourful timeline and informative display about how Brunel’s bridges, tunnels, railways and ships pushed the boundaries of engineering. It’s worth making use of the helpful volunteers around the site – their knowledge and enthusiasm are boundless.
There are four disabled parking bays in the nearby car park. This is a Victorian ship and dockyard, so inevitably there are sloped, uneven areas and tight corners – but great effort has gone into making the site wheelchair accessible with ramps, wide doorways and lifts to all levels. It is worth noting, however, that space in the lift is quite tight (there’s room for one small mobility scooter) and there are several doors to open. Because of this, wheelchair users might find the site easier to navigate with a companion to help. The doors in the new Being Brunel museum are all touch-button operated, so they won’t pose a problem. In wet weather, the wooden deck can be slippery, and in some of the areas below deck the planking is uneven. You’ll find wheelchair-accessible toilets on the ship itself, by the shop, in the Being Brunel museum and in the Harbourside Kitchen. The museum can get busy at peak times, but Sunday mornings and weekday afternoons are good bets for a calmer experience. Early Doors Events are held four times a year for visitors with neurodiversity, with sensitive adjustments to the environment including the removal of audio-visual elements and some of the mannequins. All videos are subtitled (except for the film in the cinema) and there are large-print exhibit labels in the museum. Assistance dogs are welcome, and there’s a tactile model of the SS Great Britain for blind and visually impaired visitors. Tailored tours can be organised, too. There’s detailed access information online and carers are admitted free of charge.

FOOD & DRINK

The Dockyard and Harbourside Kitchen both serve reasonably priced hot food, sandwiches and delicious cakes and pastries, including cream teas in the Dockyard. There are movable tables and seating inside and out, with lovely views over the water.

050 M Shed, Bristol

Address: Princes Wharf, Wapping Road BS1 4RN Web: www.bristolmuseums.org.uk/m-shed Tel: 0117 3526600 Hours: Tues–Sun 10am–5pm; open Mon in school hols and on bank hols Dates: closed 25–26 Dec & early closing (2pm) on 24 Dec Entry: free; charge for some temporary exhibitions

You don’t have to be a Bristician to enjoy M Shed, a stellar museum and art gallery bringing the fascinating history of “Brizzle” to life. Its three main galleries – Bristol People, Bristol Places and Bristol Life – are packed with compelling displays and interactive exhibits telling the personal stories of its residents, past and present. On the historic quayside outside, you can explore M Shed’s “Working Exhibits” by taking a ride on one of the museum’s iconic cranes, trains or boats (specific trip dates, check website for details).

Inside, the people who have shaped the city are celebrated on a wall of fame, while displays cover a range of topics – the transatlantic slave trade, wartime Bristol, Bristol’s neighbourhoods and its importance as a port, to name a few – that delve into Bristol’s history. However, it’s the personal narratives that really stick in the mind. Inspirational stories depict residents fighting for social change: learn about how disabled people demanded access for all at the local gallery and how racial discrimination against black bus employees was only challenged as recently as 1963. Recollections range from the absurd – how students stole Alfred, a taxidermy adult gorilla, from the city museum as a RAG week stunt – to the macabre, including a book of notes on the 1821 trial of convicted murderer John Hornwood, bound in his own skin. Excellent temporary exhibitions complete the picture; past topics have included Bristol street art, Wallace and Gromit, and urban sport, while the popular annual Wildlife Photographer of the Year exhibition is held here, too. Look out for special events, tours and talks, including rides on the trains, boats and cranes of the Working Exhibits on the quayside and the wonderful accessible “Behind the Scenes” tours run by enthusiastic, knowledgeable volunteers.

Although there's no parking at M Shed itself, nearby Wapping Wharf car park has three accessible bays. Alternatively, there's space to drop off/pick up passengers in front of the museum on Museum Street. There are three entrances into the building, all accessible, with wide, automatic doors. The reception desk has a section at wheelchair-user height and a hearing loop, and two adult-sized wheelchairs and folding stools can be borrowed from here. “Little bags of calm” can also be picked up, invaluable for visitors with sensory conditions; each pack contains ear defenders, a fidget toy and visual prompts. Nevertheless, the museum can get noisy – not to mention the heavy machinery of the Working Exhibits outside – if it all gets too much, staff can provide a quiet space. A virtual tour is also available online, so visitors can garner what to expect. There are tactile maps in Bristol Places, as well as various handling objects. Access around the whole attraction is easy and spacious, with level access to all galleries. There are two accessible toilets, one with a free-standing adult changing bench with a hoist. Although there is a charge for some temporary exhibitions, concession tickets are available and carers go free.

FOOD & DRINK The light, modern M Café serves hot and cold dishes (mains under £10). There’s a display of yummy teatime treats, pleasing harbour views and outdoor seating for warm weather.
051 Coate Water Park, Wiltshire

Address: Marlborough Road, Swindon, Wiltshire SN3 6AA
Web: www.swindon.gov.uk/info/20077/parks_and_open_spaces/487/coate_water_park
Tel: 01793 490150
Hours: no closures

Coate Water Park is a well-kept local secret, and the residents of Swindon have embraced this seventy-acre reservoir and countryside surrounding it. On arrival, the first thing you’ll notice is a striking Art Deco diving board – constructed in 1936, it stands more than thirty feet above the reservoir’s water. From here, several level and surfaced paths lead in and around the park. A route, slightly shorter than two miles, leads around the lake and provides a chance to see plenty of wildlife – from squirrels to fifteen different species of damselfly. There’s no shortage of water birds too, including majestic kingfishers and herons. Indeed, for keen spotters, there are two accessible bird hides around the waterway. Many of the angling pegs are accessible to wheelchair users, and the reservoir provides great opportunities for catching big fish – 40-pound carp are not unusual (fishing season is open 16 June–14 Mar). At the north end of the reservoir, there is a children’s play area and miniature railway. The park has golf activities too: an eighteen-hole pitch and putt (Apr–Oct), mini golf and a nine-hole putting green. A Tramper (all-terrain mobility scooter) is available that can access pretty much anywhere in the park; you must book it in advance and collect it from the ranger’s station near the car park. It is possible to undertake the routes in a manual wheelchair, but in cold and wet conditions, it makes sense to use the Tramper instead. The accessible bird hides are locked – you can pick up a key and a day or annual permit from the ranger’s office too. At a gentle pace it will take around 45 minutes to circle the lake. Unfortunately, the mini golf has tricky access for wheelchair users. Steps are in place for level changes – these can be avoided, but only by using grassy slopes, so an assistant may need to be on hand.

FOOD & DRINK  The Sun Inn (www.suninn-swindon.co.uk; 01793 523292), on the A4259 Marlborough Road just before the entrance to the park, serves fantastic food. It has a disabled toilet and great access, is spacious and family friendly, with a good beer garden and play area. There is also a café on site at the park.

In the centre of the beautiful city of Bath, this is one of the best examples of a Roman bathhouse in Northern Europe. It’s famous for its naturally hot spring water, packed with 43 “curative” minerals, which you can sample at the end of your visit. To gain a unique insight into life in Aquae Sulis some 200 years ago, you can explore the Sacred Spring, the Roman Temple, the Roman Bath House and the museum, discovering how the Romans lived, worked and played. Highlights are the collection of original artefacts and animated projections of Roman women in the East Baths, and the terrace, flanked by Victorian statues of Roman Emperors, which overlooks the steaming green-grey water of the stunning Great Bath.

Enormous effort has gone into making this ancient site accessible, with four lifts giving access to ninety percent of the complex, although wheelchair-users may need help to negotiate the uneven paving around the Great Bath. The main entrance has large double doors, with level access from the street, and lowered ticket desks: staff can arrange for autistic visitors to bypass the queues, and three wheelchairs and one mobility scooter are available to borrow. Throughout the baths, there are clear signs, information boards with illustrations and symbols, and some Braille panels. Induction loops, BSL audio-tours and an enhanced audio description guide are available, and there's plenty of seating inside and on the terrace. The museum is fascinating, with lots of tactile exhibits and high-tech projections, though it can get crowded and noisy; if visitors with autism find this overwhelming, they can ask a member of staff (all are trained in disability and autism awareness) to find a quiet space or allow them to leave the venue then re-enter. Consider visiting early or mid-week to avoid the crowds. The two museum shops are wheelchair accessible, though they do get crowded and noisy. There's one accessible toilet by the main entrance and one by the King’s Bath (a RADAR key is required for this one). The website has useful information and maps for wheelchair users, plus an autism pack to download (see www.romanbaths.co.uk/accessibility). Blue Badge holders can park on the single yellow lines on nearby Cheap Street and York Street or in the four designated disabled parking bays on New Bond Street. The nearest car parks are Northgate Street and the Southgate car park in St James Parade, both with easy-access parking bays.

FOOD & DRINK

The grand Pump Room restaurant is good for a special lunch or cream tea, while the Roman Baths Kitchen is more informal; both are wheelchair accessible. Alternatively, bring a picnic to eat in the picturesque abbey courtyard.

053 Tarka Trail and Tunnels Beaches, Devon

Tarka Trail: Address: start point Biketrail on Fremington Quay, just outside Barnstaple, EX31 2NH Web: www.northdevonbiosphere.org.uk/the-tarka-trail.html; Biketrail www.biketrail.co.uk Tel: Biketrail 01271 372586 Hours: no closures Dates: no closures Entry: free

Tunnels Beaches: Address: Bath Place, Ilfracombe EX34 8AN Web: www.tunnelsbeaches.co.uk Tel: 01271 879882 Hours: daily: Apr 10am–5pm; May, June & Sept 10am–6pm; July & Aug 10am–7pm; Oct 10am–5pm Dates: closed Nov–Mar Entry: [D]£2.50 [A]£2.50 [3–15s]£1.95 [Under 3]free [Con]£2.25 [Fam]£8.50 (2 adults & 2 children); £9.50 (2 adults & 3 children)
Named after Tarka the Otter – the celebrated children’s book by Henry Williamson – the Tarka Trail is one the UK’s most scenic and accessible trails covering around 180 miles of paths. An accessible section of the trail starts about 40 minutes’ drive from Tunnels Beaches – a unique coastal attraction in Ilfracombe.

A good way to explore the trail is by hiring a mobility scooter or other inclusive cycles such as handcycles, recumbents, wheelchair tandems, trikes or electric bikes from Biketrail on Fremington Quay (advance booking is essential). There’s a drop-off point outside Biketrail, a free car park just past the shop, and an accessible toilet at the end of the Fremington Quay Café. Heading East from Biketrain takes you along the banks of the River Taw towards Braunton and its famous dune system. Within minutes you’ll be immersed in an area rich in flora and fauna, all described on small information posts that work in conjunction with an excellent audio guide (www.tarkatrailguide.co.uk). Curlews, dunlin herons, egrets and the occasional spoonbill – and even a kingfisher, if you’re lucky – are some of the many birds that can be seen along the shoreline. Heading West towards Instow, Tramper users can also go “off road” and explore the nearby Home Farm Marsh nature reserve (www.gaiatrust.org.uk/home-farm-marsh).

Some sixteen miles from the start of the trail in charming Ilfracombe, you can enter a slightly surreal series of tunnels that exit onto a wild Devon bay of craggy rocks and a grey sand and shingle beach. Formed when Welsh miners tunnelled through to Crewkhorne Cove in 1823, the beach was popular with visiting Victorians, complete with separate bathing pools for “Gentlemen” and “Ladies” (today the Gentlemen’s beach is used for weddings, and is closed to the public at those times). In summer the tidal pools are a riot of youngsters in inflatables. Signs at the entrance say when they are exposed. At low tide, this is one of the UK’s best places for rockpooling, with a rich array of crustaceans, sea corals, anemones and hammerhead sharks – though admittedly the last one found here was in 1865. There’s a pay-and-display car park (but no dedicated disabled bays) and level access to the ticket office. The tunnels are flat though the route to the beach gets progressively steeper, so wheelchair users may need assistance here and with the forty yards of sand between the bottom of the paved path and the tidal pools, as well as around the pools themselves.

FOOD & DRINK  Biketrail stocks snacks, drinks and ice creams and is next door to the Fremington Quay Café, which serves baguettes, hot food and tasty homemade cakes. At Tunnels Beaches, you can buy coffee at the beach shop. There are plenty of food options in Ilfracombe on the high street and around the harbour. For locally caught fish, the Take Thyme Fish Restaurant (01271 867622) is an excellent option.

054 Exmoor Scenic Drive, Devon

Driving distance: 21 miles
Approx driving time without stops: 40 minutes

On wild Exmoor, windswept moors give way to gentle wooded valleys, which in turn roll into a handsome coastline. This 21-mile drive covers the best of it and will have you reaching for your camera again and again.

The drive takes a figure-of-eight route: follow signposts from Lynmouth through Watersmeet, Rockford, Brendon and Countisbury, back through Lynmouth and then past Lynton, Valley of Rocks, Woody Bay, Martinhoe, Hunters Inn, Killington Lane and Barbrook, before ending the drive right where you started at Lynmouth. As you pass the Valley of Rocks you’ll realise why this area is nicknamed England’s “Little Switzerland” – there are dramatic rock formations in every direction and even a herd of wild goats. The drive towards Hunters Inn is via a single-track road along the cliff, with the woods on one side and the sea on the other. The scenery is dazzling, though this section of road is not for the faint-hearted. There’s an accessible toilet at Hunters Inn, while the nearby National Trust shop rents out two Trampers – powered, all-terrain mobility buggies (01598 763402). They are ideal for the mile-long accessible trail from here to the beautiful rocky cove of Heddon’s Mouth, or to tackle the six-mile trail to Woody Bay and back, accessible to wheelchair users along a well-made road with a gentle incline.

Back in the car, it’s an easy drive back to Lynmouth, the home of the water-powered cliff railway (01598 753486, www.cliffrailwaylynton.co.uk) that travels back and forth to the cliff top at Lynton – a short but fun trip with exceptional views of the coastline. Wheelchairs can be taken on the cliff railway but must be folded to fit through the doors of the Victorian carriages, and there are a couple of steps to navigate. Once at the top, you can enjoy a bite to eat and panoramic views at the Cliff Top Café (01598 753769), alongside the railway. Alternatively, stay on board for the return trip back to the bottom – pretty Lynmouth, with its whitewashed cottages and attractive gift shops, is fairly accessible. There are six Blue Badge spaces in Lynmouth: two in the Esplanade car park, two in the Lower Lyndale car park and two in the Upper Lyndale car park. There are disabled toilets at the Town Hall, Memorial Hall public toilets, and one more in the Lower Lyndale car park.

FOOD & DRINK  In Lynmouth, try Fish on the Harbour (01598 753600) for tasty fish and chips – it has level access, although the toilets have a big swing door that can make it tricky to enter unaccompanied. Hunters Inn, in the nearby Heddon Valley (01598 763230, www.thehuntersinnexmoor.co.uk), has level access through the main entrance and great food; there’s a disabled toilet on the ground floor.
As you drive along the busy A303 near Andover, there’s little – save the odd brown sign – to suggest that just four hundred yards from the westbound carriageway lies a peaceful 22-acre woodland and meadowland site where you can see more than 130 birds of prey.

The Hawk Conservancy Trust is an award-winning conservation charity and visitor centre whose residents range from dinky pearl-spotted owlets to colossal Bald Eagles. Many of the birds take part in a series of spectacular daily flying displays in which raptors large and small fly so low over the audience’s heads you can feel the wind from their wings. A highlight of the summer season is the Valley of the Eagles display (daily 2pm) where you’ll see a mass fly-past of eagles, vultures and kites which soar and wheel in a nearby thermal before swooping overhead to land in the adjacent wildflower meadow. Nor should you miss the opportunity to meet a bird: adults can have a Harris’s hawk fly to their fist, while children can have their photo taken with a bird of prey.

The centre is served by a large car park on a slight slope with five Blue Badge spaces near the entrance. Access to the reception area is level (though the payment desk is high) and the outdoor paths around the site all have a tarmacked surface, though they aren’t all smooth. All display arenas have viewing areas for wheelchair users, and there are several accessible bird hides. Five manual wheelchairs and two powered scooters are available (phone to reserve; £5 per day), and there are plenty of benches dotted around the grounds. There are three accessible toilets near the entrance, which are clean and equipped with grab rails. For visually impaired visitors, there’s a large-print information sheet available in the gift shop.
Feathers Restaurant is fully accessible and seats 120 people, offering a range of hot and cold food for breakfast, lunch and afternoon tea.

056 Haynes International Motor Museum, Somerset

Address: Sparkford, Yeovil BA22 7LH  Web: www.himm.co.uk  Tel: 01963 440804; access 01963 442783
Hours: Mar–Oct daily 9.30am—5.30pm; Nov–Feb daily 9.30am—4.30pm  Dates: closed 1 Jan & 24–26 Dec

If there’s a wannabe Lewis Hamilton or burgeoning Jeremy Clarkson in your midst, a visit to the Haynes International Motor Museum is a must.

From contemporary super cars, like the Jaguar XJ220 and the Ferrari 360, to veteran masterpieces, there are more than four hundred vehicles here. The Red Room, packed with models in the sports car colour of choice, is legendary, but there are sixteen other display areas to explore too where all the big names are present: Jaguar, Ferrari, Lamborghini, Bentley and Rolls-Royce, to name a few. Outside there are activities for kids, such as diggers and go-carts. Check the website for the eclectic programme of events, such as a tour of the vintage car collections and a breakfast club for motor enthusiasts.

The museum staff have a good understanding of accessibility requirements. Blue Badge parking is clearly signposted near the entrance. Carers get reduced entry, as long as they produce evidence of their status, ideally a registered carer’s card. Indoors, the museum is accessible for wheelchair users with wide paths and only the odd gentle slope. A wheelchair can be hired and booked in advance. If you have any special requirements, the helpful staff provide advice over the phone. A volunteer can be booked as a guide.
around the exhibits – a useful facility for visitors with visual impairments. There are two accessible toilets in the museum and two in the foyer area near the café.

FOOD & DRINK The accessible self-service Café 750 is on the lower ground floor, which is easily reached via a sloping walkway and has movable seating. It serves tasty hot and cold food and the kids’ menu is good value. There are also picnic tables for your own food.

057 Stourhead, Wiltshire

Address: Stourton, near Mere, Warminster BA12 6QD  Web: www.nationaltrust.org.uk/stourhead  Tel: 01747 841152  Hours: house daily throughout summer, check website for closures at other times; garden daily 9am–6pm or dusk if earlier  Dates: house open Mar–Nov; garden closed 25 Dec  Entry: garden & house combined [D]£19.50  [C]free  [A]£19.50  [5–17s]£9.70  [Fam]£29.20–48.70

Stourhead, a Palladian mansion owned by the National Trust, boasts a fine collection of paintings and furniture, while its world-famous landscaped garden plays host to replica Roman and Venetian buildings. When it first opened in the 1740s, it was described by the press as “a living work of art”.

Inside the house, highlights include the Regency library, the Chippendale furniture and the remarkably tall Pope's Cabinet made for Pope Sixtus V in 1590. Access is via thirteen steps with no firm handrail, but a stair climber is available, which must be booked in advance. Once you’re inside, all the public rooms are on one floor, with level access. There’s an accessible toilet by the main entrance and in the courtyard adjacent to the house.

For many visitors, however, the real draw is outside. Stourhead’s grounds are a feast of colour for most of the year and have a magnificent lake as their centrepiece, with classical temples, mystical grottoes and rare and exotic trees to discover on the route.
around it – which is on a level accessible path and just over a mile long. If you want to venture further, the two-mile path to Alfred’s Tower folly may be more challenging. Surfaces vary from gravel to grass and compacted woodland soil, and some paths are undulating, or can get muddy in wet weather, but it is also reachable by car. Otherwise, visitors with limited mobility can take a tour of the grounds in a golf buggy, subject to availability of drivers.

In high season (mid-Mar to Oct), there’s a shuttle bus service between the car park, the house and the lower gardens. The car park has designated Blue Badge spaces and is an even, four-hundred-yard walk from the house.

FOOD & DRINK

The fully accessible restaurant by the car park serves a wide range of food using fresh ingredients – some even grown in the walled garden. A cosy and splendid pub in the courtyard, The Spread Eagle Inn (01747 840587, www.spreadeagleinn.com), serves hearty meals and cream teas – there’s a two-inch threshold step but once inside all is level.

058 Exeter, Devon

With its Roman origins, glorious cathedral and picturesque quayside, the city of Exeter (www.visitexeter.com) is a rewarding and easily accessible destination in the beautiful county of Devon. A good place to start your visit is the Cathedral Church of St Peter (01392 285983, www.exeter-cathedral.org.uk), one of the oldest and most magnificent cathedrals in England. It’s home to the world’s longest stretch of unbroken Medieval Gothic vaulting, stunning stained-glass windows and an intricately carved image screen on the West Front. Excellent access provisions include on-site parking, a RADAR key-accessible toilet, a Braille model of the cathedral, with an accompanying Braille guidebook, audio guides and wheelchairs.
to borrow. With sufficient notice, it may also be possible to organise tours that cater for visitors with specific needs.

Another of the city’s highlights is the Royal Albert Memorial Museum and Art Gallery, on Queen Street (01392 665858, www.rammuseum.org.uk). Its beautifully displayed, diverse collections take in antiquities, natural history and decorative and fine arts. Blue Badge parking spaces can be booked ahead, and the museum is accessible for wheelchair users. It has accessible toilets on both floors, two wheelchairs available to borrow, large-print information, induction loops in the reception area and other main points and volunteers trained in disability awareness. BSL tours are available on a tablet, and assistance dogs are welcome.

On Exeter’s lively quayside, the handsome old warehouses contain craft workshops, antique shops and cafés. There’s also a great accessible footpath along the banks of the River Exe – although on some stretches there’s no barrier between the path and the water. While you’re here, pop into the Custom House Visitor Centre (01392 271611), where you can watch a short film on the history of Exeter and pick up tourist information; its lift can accommodate manual and small electric wheelchairs. There are five Blue Badge parking spaces at the quayside, which is also served by accessible buses from the high street (although these only run until mid-afternoon).

Exeter has excellent public transport links, and the train and coach stations are both close to the centre (wheelchair accessible taxis can be booked at www.waveexeter.com). If you’re driving here, note that Blue Badge holders can park for free in most city council car parks (except the Guildhall, Mary Arches Street and John Lewis car parks, where charges apply). The city centre is compact and flat, and can be easily navigated in a wheelchair or powered scooter; Shopmobility (8–10 Paris Street, 01392 494001), rents out both, and runs the City Sights project, which provides a small number of trained volunteers to guide visitors around. The volunteers can also provide audio description for public events (£2/hr), though you’ll need to book two to three weeks in advance. There are handy RADAR key-accessible toilets on Musgrave Row (near the library), at St Stephen’s House on Catherine Street and at the quayside.

059 Haldon Forest Park, Devon

Address: Haldon Forest Park, Kennford EX6 7XR
Web: www.forestryengland.uk/haldon-forest-park
Tel: 0300 0675826 (ranger’s office; info and Tramper bookings)
Hours: daily: Apr–Oct 8.30am–10pm; Nov–Mar 8.30am–5pm
Dates: closed 25 Dec
Entry: free; parking: £3–7 (car), £15 (coaches)

Forestry England’s Haldon Forest Park has miles of graded walking, cycling and horse-riding trails set in 3500 acres of glorious Devon woodland. Its accessibility means everyone can get a taste of the great outdoors and potentially spot birds of prey, butterflies and the rare black fallow deer that live in the forest.

The Discovery Trail is a circular, 1.5-mile-long all-ability walking and cycling route, suitable for wheelchairs and people with restricted mobility. There are regular resting points along the way, boasting tremendous views across Exeter, the Exe estuary and Dartmoor from sheltered viewing platforms. The trail has an optional shorter loop, which returns to the forest hub via the car park. There are several more demanding trails, with inclines and rougher surfaces; visitors can hire special all-terrain mobility scooters known as Trampers, which can handle the trails with ease and can be brought to your vehicle on request; the Trampers must be pre-booked through the Countryside Mobility Scheme (www.countrysidemobility.org). In addition, you can hire specialist bicycles, including wheelchair, electric-assisted and recumbent bikes, from Forest Cycle Hire (01392 833768) or even take a guided “glide” around the forest on a guided tour with Go-Segway! on their two-wheeled, self-balancing vehicles (07545 917416). Visitors receive a personal induction with all equipment hires.

The main car park, from where most trails are accessed, has three Blue Badge spaces. Nearby you’ll find the ranger’s office and a fully accessible toilet. The rangers can help you devise a route through the forest that suits your level of fitness and mobility. There’s a second car park at Mamhead (see website for directions), which is where the Mamhead Trail begins; note that there are no toilets or other facilities at this site, though parking is free. Those seeking a quieter experience may prefer to visit Mamhead, or go to the main park, on weekdays in term time, when it’s at its calmest.

FOOD & DRINK

The Ridge Café, near the park’s main entrance, serves hot and cold food and drinks, with level access and movable benches inside. There are plenty of benches outside, too, overlooking a large sandpit play area, and a wood burner indoors for colder days.

060 Monkey World, Dorset

Monkey World Ape Rescue Centre is home to more than 250 primates from over twenty species, who live in spacious enclosures, in an attractive, accessible 65-acre park. Many of the monkeys have been rescued from laboratories or illegal smugglers; others were props for beach photographers or private pets who were treated cruelly or neglected. The enclosures here are very well-designed: some are a maze of acrobatic fun, while others have a more natural feel, where the occupants are harder to spot. The animals are guaranteed to be seen during the Keeper Talks, which take place every half-hour from 12.30pm (written versions also available). The primates rush over when the keeper appears and seem to enjoy the experience as much as the audience. The interesting and often moving backstories of the animals are told on boards throughout the park. The children’s playgrounds, set on grass or bark surfaces, are impressive: the two main playgrounds have wheelchair swings, which can be accessed with the help of a member of staff, and there are two reclining chair swings in the Great Ape Play area.

The paths around Monkey World are mainly tarmac, though a few areas have bricks or flagstones, which can be uneven in places. At times the paths are quite steep with an adverse camber, so manual wheelchair users may need a hand, but electric wheelchairs and scooters should be fine. The only inaccessible part of the park is the Woodland Walk, where there is only one marmoset enclosure. Monkey World has a fleet of mobility scooters and two manual wheelchairs to borrow (book in advance and bring ID and a £10 cash deposit). Guide dogs are allowed everywhere except the Malagasy Enclosure where lemurs roam free. Those on the autism spectrum may get nervous if the monkeys make sudden movements or noises, when the marmosets appear overhead in wire tubes, or when the lemurs come close in the Malagasy Enclosure. Autism-friendly days are held throughout the year, when early entry to the park (prior to busy queues) is allowed, and a sensory trail and dedicated chill-out room are made available. There are three sensory primate statues (an orangutan face, male chimpanzee and marmoset) for visually impaired visitors; ask a member of staff for access. The mostly tarmac car park has 22 Blue Badge spaces, with the nearest just 5m from the entrance and the furthest about 75m away, though there are some uneven, stony areas near the accessible spaces; there’s also a large drop-off point right by the entrance. At peak times the area around the entrance gets busy, but if you ring in advance you can use the quieter wheelchair-accessible back entrance to avoid the queues and noise. There are accessible toilets near both the Treetops and Malagasy cafés. Carers go free but only when essential and accompanying an adult visitor; proof is required.

FOOD & DRINK The two cafés, Treetops and Malagasy, serve reasonably priced hot and cold food and cater for vegetarian, vegan, gluten-free and lactose-intolerant dietary requirements. Treetops has a more extensive menu, including burgers, baked potatoes and pasta. There are two lovely picnic areas with benches on grass, by large playgrounds.

061 The Camel Trail, Cornwall

Address: Padstow Harbour PL28 8DB, Wadebridge & Bodmin
Web: www.cornwall.gov.uk/cameltrail
Tel: 01841 533449 (Padstow tourist information), 01208 76616 (Bodmin)
Hours: trail open daily year-round; hire shops vary with season, up to 9pm in summer
Dates: trail open year-round; shops closed 25–26 Dec
Entry: trail free; Bridge Bike Hire rates [A] £13–18 [Child] £8–12 a day; book ahead on peak dates (summer & school hols)

Starting from the beautiful setting of Padstow Harbour, the Camel Trail follows a disused railway line along the Camel Estuary. Along the way there's plenty of beautiful scenery and some good places to stop for a well-earned pasty or pint.

Popular with cyclists, the trail is a relatively level path with a compacted surface which you can follow to Wadebridge (five miles), or more ambitiously to Bodmin (eleven miles), or even continue all the way to the end of the trail in Wenfordbridge (eighteen miles). The Padstow–Wadebridge stretch follows the estuary, with wide-open views of sandbanks, muddy creeks and rocky shores. Birdlife is everywhere, year-round, and viewing hides are set up along the trail. Beyond Wadebridge the route is increasingly wooded, offering only glimpses of the river before emerging on the fringes of Bodmin Moor.

In high season it can be tricky finding a parking spot in Padstow, though there are some Blue Badge spaces in the Town Council and Harbour car parks. A RADAR key-accessible toilet is found in the station car park, with another opposite the red brick building on the North Quay. On reaching Wadebridge, you will find Bridge Bike Hire (01208 813050; www.bridgebikehire.co.uk), where you can pre-book bikes with trailers, tandems, trikes and a Draisin Low Loader that allows a wheelchair (manual or electric) user to travel in their wheelchair at the front of the “bike” with a cyclist behind (£20 to hire). There is also a RADAR key-accessible toilet opposite the bridge at Wool Public House, approximately 300m from Bridge Bike Hire.

FOOD & DRINK
Arrive early to avoid the queues at Stein’s Fish & Chips (www.rickstein.com) in Padstow, where there’s a relatively accessible toilet and tasty food. Alternatively, grab a Cornish pasty and watch the birds and boats pass through the harbour.

062 Weymouth and Portland National Sailing Academy, Dorset

Address: Osprey Quay, Portland DT5 1SA
Web: www.wpnsa.org.uk
Tel: 01305 866000
Hours: daily 9am–5pm; additional access varies by course and season
Dates: no instruction Dec–Jan; contact individual schools for closures
Entry: training prices vary according to experience, course and season
Occupying the site of a former Royal Navy air station in Dorset’s Portland Harbour, this world-class sailing venue provides year-round facilities that are open to all, including sailing and windsurfing schools. It provides direct access to the waters of Weymouth Bay and the more sheltered Portland Harbour, making it ideal for a wide range of abilities – from complete beginners to international competitors. The waters here offer some of the best small boat sailing in the world – so much so that the venue hosted the sailing events of the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

Besides offering ideal sailing conditions – against the stunning backdrop of the Jurassic Coast, a UNESCO World Heritage Site – the venue includes a modern, fully accessible clubhouse (with its own café), slipways, a boat hoist and storage space for up to six hundred boats. The Academy offers excellent access; its large car park has five Blue Badge spaces about fifty yards from the main entrance to the step-free building, which is accessed via an automatic door. All signage is tactile and subtitled in Braille, and an induction loop is available. There are spacious accessible toilets on both floors, and the ground-floor changing rooms have large, wheelchair-accessible shower cubicles. Outside, extra-wide pontoons provide wheelchair access to the water, and four hydraulic hoists aid transfer to and from boats. The charity Chesil Sailability (www.chesilsailability.org.uk) provides sailing opportunities for people with various conditions, running sessions from here one evening a week. They also work closely with the Andrew Simpson Watersports Centre team (www.aswc.co.uk), who are also based at the academy, have accessible boats and are RYA-trained. Weekdays are quieter than weekends for those on the autism spectrum.

FOOD & DRINK

The first-floor café is accessible by lift and serves a good range of soups and hot snacks, with great views of the harbour.
063 Buckfast Abbey, Devon

Address: Buckfastleigh TQ11 0EE  Web: www.buckfast.org.uk  Tel: 01364 645500  Hours: Mon–Sat 9am–6pm, Sun noon–6pm; intermittent closures for prayers and services; hours vary at shops and restaurants  Dates: shops and restaurants closed Good Friday & 25–26 Dec  Entry: free

This magnificent abbey, with its tranquil gardens by the River Dart, is a living monastery with a thousand-year history. A peaceful sanctuary, the abbey is home to a community of Benedictine monks who have always welcomed guests, and it attracts visitors from around the globe. In 2018, the abbey celebrated its millennium with a rich roster of events, including the opening of a Monastic Experience exhibition.

Buckfast Abbey was founded during the reign of King Cnut and stood for five hundred years until Henry VIII’s dissolution of the monasteries. A community of Benedictine monks returned in 1882 to rebuild it on its medieval foundations. It was completed in 1938. The monks were gifted stone masons, as is evident throughout the abbey. Don't miss the bronzes and stained-glass windows, the largest of which, at the rear of the abbey, seems to radiate light even on a dull day. The brothers lead a life of study, prayer and work. Outside, alongside the sweeping lawns, the award-winning Millennium Garden, Physic Garden (with traditional and medicinal plants), Sensory Garden and Lavender Garden (with more than 150 varieties) all boast interesting designs and unusual plants and herbs – and are as much for the benefit of the monks’ work and leisure as for the pleasure of visitors. In the Monastic Produce Shop, you can buy the famous Buckfast tonic wine, as well as a variety of goods and consumables from monasteries and convents around the world. Other retail opportunities at the abbey include the gift shop, which sells a variety of lovely items, and the religious bookshop – one of the largest in southwest England.

The abbey is less than a mile from the A38, with ample free parking. There’s good wheelchair access with automatic doors to the shop, bookshop and restaurant. Manual wheelchairs can be borrowed from the shop. Two Braille guides are available in the church, and abbey stewards can help blind/visually impaired visitors who are welcome to touch figurines and details including the choir stalls and the decorative front of the organ. There are accessible toilets beside the car park and beneath the restaurant.

FOOD & DRINK  Hot and cold food, cakes and cream teas are available in The Grange restaurant, or on the covered terrace, with a lovely view over the abbey and gardens.

064 South Devon Railway and Totnes Rare Breeds Farm, Devon

Run by enthusiasts, both the South Devon Railway and the Rare Breeds Farm draw you in because of the dedication of the staff and volunteers. Together they make for a very enjoyable day out. At Buckfastleigh station, staff will happily get out the ramp for wheelchair and small powered scooter users to board the steam train, although there are some restrictions on size and weights of chairs (see the access page on the website for details). Once at Totnes Riverside station, it’s about one hundred yards along the platform and over the track to the Rare Breeds Farm. The welcome at the farm is instant and children are encouraged to feed, pet and observe many animals including owls, guinea pigs, chickens and goats. Visitors can go into some of the enclosures too. This is not a massive site, and the paths are level and surfaced with solid stone chippings. Knowledgeable staff will happily give blind and visually impaired visitors more information about the animals. The pens have wide entry gates to accommodate wheelchairs and pushchairs; assistance dogs can’t enter the pens but can remain in the Garden Café area.

Back at Buckfastleigh station there’s a miniature railway, an accessible railway museum and a shop selling gifts and kit for model train enthusiasts. The farm has no car park, but there’s Blue Badge parking at the station. You can visit the Rare Breeds Farm directly, but you’ll have to pay to park at Totnes train station then walk over five hundred yards along a tarmac cycle path to reach the site. There’s an accessible toilet in the Buckfastleigh station restaurant and another at Totnes Riverside station. There are no toilets at the farm, so use the one at the station when you arrive or you’ll have a two-hundred-yard trip there and back.

FOOD & DRINK The Garden Café at the farm is accessible and serves local produce where possible. On the train, dining coaches do not have reserved spaces for wheelchair users as the doors are narrow – but it is worth calling ahead to discuss your specific needs to see if the team can help.

065 National Marine Aquarium, Devon

Address: Rope Walk, Coxside, Plymouth PL4 0LF Web: www.national-aquarium.co.uk Tel: 0844 8937938
Hours: daily 10am–5pm; last entry one hour before closing Dates: closed 25–26 Dec Entry: [D]£16.95 [C]free [A]£16.95 [3–15s]£12.95 [Senior]£14.95 [Fam]£53.50

From the rather hideous-looking wolffish to the much-loved clownfish, and quirky little seahorses to menacing sharks, the tanks at the National Marine Aquarium are teeming with variety and colour. With four thousand sea creatures, this is Britain’s largest aquarium. It’s run by the Ocean Conservation Trust, a charity dedicated to connecting people with the ocean.
Neptune the octopus always draws a good crowd, while the cinema-screen-sized Atlantic Eddystone Reef tank beats watching The Little Mermaid. But it is probably the sand tiger sharks, Friday the turtle, the stingrays and replica World War II RAF bi-plane in the Atlantic Ocean tank that really steal the show. There are also hands-on exhibits, puppets and puzzles for young children, displays about aspects of ocean life, a daily dive show and a programme of talks. At 11am on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, you can witness the sand tiger sharks feeding, as they snatch at whole fish dangled to them on (thankfully) long poles.

The entrance is just over three hundred yards from the three Blue Badge parking spaces, but if this is too far to walk, it is possible to borrow a wheelchair – there are three available on a first-come, first-served basis. Once inside, the layout is a bit higgledy-piggledy and there is some walking to do between tank areas, but it is generally not too far and there is seating provided. Stairs can be completely avoided by using lifts. The tanks are predominantly low, while movable steps are provided in the “Shallow Waters” area, so that smaller children can look over the sides of the tanks. Lighting is generally low level and there is a background soundtrack of underwater noises. All the Aquarium’s education facilities and meeting rooms have induction loops.

FOOD & DRINK The self-service café serves reasonably priced hot and cold food. Staff can help with carrying food to your table. An extra coffee bar opens on busy days in the school holidays and an outside picnic area overlooks the Plymouth Sound.

066 The Eden Project, Cornwall

Address: Bodelva, St Austell PL24 2SG
Web: www.edenproject.com
Tel: 01726 811911
Hours: daily from 9.30am (10am in winter); closing varies from 4pm to 9pm (later in summer and at weekends)
Dates: closed
The Eden Project is a botanical and conservation attraction on a colossal scale: two vast, geodesic-dome glasshouses – the “Biomes” – stand at the bottom of a cavernous, landscaped former clay mine, showcasing the world’s huge diversity of plantlife. Winner of the 2017 Inclusive Tourism Award, Eden is, by any standards, one of the UK’s best days out.

The Mediterranean Biome features the sights and scents of warm temperate zones – the Med, the Cape in South Africa, Western Australia and northern California – with herb and vegetable gardens, fruit trees and a vineyard. The Rainforest Biome takes you on a trek through the jungles of Malaysia, West Africa and South America, where huge trees tower overhead, with exhibits on fair trade and deforestation. It can get very warm and humid, but there are plenty of seats and an air-conditioned refuge in the middle.

Eden has excellent access: on arrival, marshals direct you to parking spaces. Apple One car park, closest to the entrance and visitor centre, and Apple Two car park both have Blue Badge parking (if you don’t have a Blue Badge but need an accessible space, speak to one of the readily available stewards). Both have manual wheelchairs available to borrow on a first-come, first-served basis (there are forty in total) and there are also buggies to transport people who have mobility difficulties to the entrance. Ticket staff are fully briefed on access and most are TypeTalk-trained. Hearing loops are available at three of the ticket booths and accessible toilets are plentiful throughout the park. There is also a spacious Changing Places toilet near the entrance, which includes a height-adjustable changing bench, a hoist system and shower.

There are two routes down to the Biomes – the one that goes over the bridge and down in the lift is the shortest, but to avoid any walking at all you can take the land train there and back instead. There are slopes throughout the site, but these are mostly manageable and most of the few steps and steep gradients have alternative routes; there are also thirty park benches around the gardens. For powered scooter users, the majority of Eden is a breeze. Eden’s on-site powered wheelchairs should be booked two weeks in advance during peak holiday times. Manual wheelchair users can get help from one of Eden’s trained volunteers, who can also be booked in advance to assist visitors with sensory disabilities around the site. Easy English, large-print and Widgit (symbols for those with learning and communication difficulties) guidebooks are available – for further information see the Eden Project’s comprehensive access guide (www.edenproject.com/access-guide). You can also get a Braille version of the guidebook sent to you (call 01726 818895 or email Ireid@edenproject.com), and there is a Braille exhibit in the Core where visitors can explore the carbon footprint of everyday items. A hearing loop is available at the access ticketing booth (till number 13) in the visitor centre, highlighted by the T and ear symbol sign on the desk. Free, pre-bookable “relaxed sessions” are held in the summer and Christmas holidays for children on the autism spectrum, with sensory and communication needs or learning disabilities who may benefit from a more informal experience; see the website for details and timings. Staff can sort out quiet areas and provide children’s ear defenders if needed, and will fast-track people through any queue if required.

FOOD & DRINK
There’s excellent food at Eden’s numerous accessible restaurants and cafés, where the bulk of the produce is local and organic.
067 National Maritime Museum, Cornwall

Address: Discovery Quay, Falmouth, Cornwall, TR11 3QY  Web: www.nmmc.co.uk  Tel: 01326 313388

With fifteen galleries spread over five floors, the museum’s exhibits include full-sized boats, radio-control yachts, areas where you can watch craftsmen building and restoring boats using traditional tools and a search-and-rescue area where you can climb aboard lifeboats and a jet ski. You can even head underwater to the tidal zone to look through thick glass windows into the misty depths of the bay, or up to the top of a lookout tower to take in views of the town and harbour. There is a playzone and trails for children to follow around the museum, along with many interactive displays.

The museum aims to be as accessible as possible: while there are stairs up to the lookout tower and down to the tidal decks, both are also accessible by lift, and the rest of the museum is accessed via ramps. There is seating throughout, though it’s a little sparse with no arms for support. Display information is available in Braille and large print and there is a BSL Tablet Tour available, too. In some places the lighting is fairly dim, but overall there’s pretty natural lighting. Although there are no designated quiet spaces, the museum is fairly quiet, with no flashing lights or loud, sudden noises. There are clean accessible toilets on both the first and second floor, with grab rails and enough room to manoeuvre, although it might be a little tight in an electric wheelchair. There’s an accessibility guide on the website, and staff are trained in disability awareness. The hearing loop works in the shop and on the audio exhibits. There are ten Blue Badge spaces in the car park across the flat but cobbled square, which sometimes hosts lively events with stalls, cooking smells and noise.

FOOD & DRINK

The wheelchair-accessible café on the second floor serves drinks and light meals such as jacket potatoes, soups and desserts, all under £7. Vegetarian and gluten-free options are available. Plenty of excellent restaurants on the square outside serve more substantial meals.

068 Trebah Garden, Cornwall

Address: Mawnan Smith, Falmouth, Cornwall TR11 5JZ  Web: www.trebahgarden.co.uk  Tel: 01326 252200
Hours: daily: Apr–Sept 10am–5pm; Oct–Mar 10am–4/4.30pm; last entrance 1hr before closing; closing times can be flexible so it’s best to call ahead  Dates: closed 24–26 Dec  Entry: [D]£2.63  [C]£2.63  [A]£5.25  [5–15]£2.50  [under 5s]free  [Con]various partner concessions, see website for details; free parking

Sweeping down the length of a Cornish valley until it reaches a private beach on the Helfrod River, Trebah Garden is a sea of green speckled with blooming flowers. Massive ancient trees twist up towards the sun on all sides of the valley wall, while a corridor of hydrangeas runs down the middle to reach Mallard Pond. The garden is a seasonal delight: watch the changing colours – the rhododendrons, camellias and magnolias dominate in spring, the giant gunnera in summer, the hydrangeas in autumn and the champion trees in winter – from viewpoints all around the site.

Winding through the greenery are paths that take you down along the middle of the valley or up along its sides. Seating is provided throughout the garden, so there are plenty of places to sit and take in this subtropical paradise. The champion trees are some of the largest of their species in the country, and the breeze is rich with the scent of the flowers in spring and summer. Visitors with mobility issues can access the wheelchair-friendly parts of the garden (about eighty percent of the site) using an electric Tramper (an off-road electric wheelchair, available for hire). Manual wheelchairs are not recommended because of the steep valley inclines. If the Tramper isn't available, visitors can enjoy the top part of the garden and the long views for free. Access to the beach was upgraded in 2019; while there's now level access, some of the paths in this area are rather tight for a powered wheelchair or Tramper.

The free car park has ten Blue Badge spaces close to the entrance and the ticket desk (which has a lower section for wheelchair users). If you want to hire a Tramper, you'll need to take the road behind the visitor centre to the offices instead. Visitors with mobility issues should ask for a wheelchair-friendly map; there's also a large-type information sheet (though not one in Braille). The accessible routes are fairly easy to follow, though some of the signposts for the wheelchair-friendly paths, especially near the start, are positioned in places that make them hard to spot. The majority of the garden is peaceful, but visitors with sensory conditions may want to avoid the children's play area, which can be quite noisy. Staff are friendly and helpful, and being outdoors has proven benefits for a range of mental-health issues. There are also plans to turn an old tennis court near the car park into a walled sensory garden, but this will not be due for completion until 2021. There is one accessible toilet, which is located at the visitor centre; note that this is the only facility for the whole garden and beach.

FOOD & DRINK Sweet snacks, light meals and drinks are available at the clean and bright wheelchair-friendly café, which caters for various dietary requirements. Picnic spots are located throughout the garden, while the shop at the beach serves snacks and drinks, too.

Dominating Lincoln’s skyline, this beautiful church is situated at the top of a steep cobbled hill overlooking the city centre. While the cathedral’s architecture and interior are indeed imposing, it is also a place of peace and spirituality and a must-see if you’re in the area.

The entrance is through the west door into the nave with its vast vaulted ceilings and massive piers. Beyond this, the north–south transept is illuminated by a unique pair of rose windows – the Bishop’s Eye and the Dean’s Eye. You then come to the heart of the cathedral, St Hugh’s Choir, with its splendid oak carvings. Behind the high altar is the aptly named Angel Choir, the well-camouflaged home of the celebrated and much-searched-for Lincoln Imp. Through the northeast transept is the cloister, a tranquil setting for quiet reflection, which provides access to the nine-sided chapterhouse and a fine library designed by Sir Christopher Wren. There are interesting and informative free guided tours at intervals throughout the day.

Parking is the only major access problem at Lincoln Cathedral. The streets in the surrounding area are narrow and cobbled, with limited access for vehicles. Although disabled parking is permitted for up to three hours in the restricted areas, it gets busy, so you’ll have to arrive early to secure a spot. The ground floor of the cathedral is wheelchair accessible, with the exception of the three side chapels dedicated to the armed forces. Just inside the entrance there is a touch model of the building, including a site layout, with a foot-operated audio guide, while in the northeast transept there is a touch exhibition with Braille descriptions. The toilet block has two disabled toilets, and ear defenders can be provided for those who need them. Carers receive free entry but will need to show a carer’s badge.

FOOD & DRINK

The cosy Cloister Refectory, at the north end of the cathedral, serves cakes, sandwiches and a small range of hot meals, some using local ingredients, such as Lincolnshire sausages in the excellent sausage pie. It’s small, but at busy times of the year tables spill out into the cloisters (Mon–Sat 10am–4.30pm, Sun noon–4pm).

070 Natureland Seal Sanctuary, Lincolnshire

- Address: North Parade, Skegness PE25 1DB

If you fancy a break from the beach while on holiday at Skegness, put your bucket and spade to one side and head to Natureland, a seal sanctuary and mini zoo at the northern end of the seafront.

The site incorporates a “seal hospital”, where seal pups that are washed up on the beaches around Skegness are cared for before being released back into the sea – to date, more than seven hundred seals have been successfully returned to the wild. You can observe the rescued pups through viewing windows, and in the outdoor rearing pools where they learn how to catch fish. Some resident seals, too tame to fend for themselves at sea, live in a separate pool. There’s also a spread of other animals to see, including black-footed penguins, crocodiles, pythons and spiders, plus a butterfly house and a collection of domestic animals you can handle and feed, including goats, rabbits and guinea pigs – as well as some meerkats and alpacas. Natureland was built in 1965 and is showing its age a bit, though some areas have been refurbished. The seal feeding times are a real highlight (check ahead for times), allowing you to get up close to these beautiful animals, which you can also watch from an underwater viewing area.

Efforts have been made to make the site accessible: there are slopes either side of the main seal pool leading down to the lower level – the one on the right, by the aquarium, is longer but less steep. In the Tropical House, wheelchair users must retrace their route to avoid the bridge, and may need help opening the heavy doors. Some buildings are dimly lit, with uneven floors, requiring extra care if you’re visually impaired or unsteady on foot. There are disabled toilets next to the aquarium and in the café. There’s no on-site parking, but you can park on North Parade, opposite the entrance, and there’s a pay-and-display car park a couple of hundred yards further up the road. Dogs are welcome, but must be on a lead. Those on the autism spectrum may prefer to visit in winter, when the sanctuary is quieter.

FOOD & DRINK

Between March and the end of October, the on-site Blue Lagoon café-restaurant serves hot and cold meals, and a range of sandwiches and cakes. During other months, it’s open for drinks only.
The 84-mile-long Norfolk Coast Path National Trail (nationaltrail.co.uk) runs from Hunstanton to Hopton-on-Sea, but you don’t have to walk it all – the one-mile stretch linking the busy harbour of Wells-next-the-Sea to its beach and coastline makes an easy, accessible and enjoyable stroll, with plenty to look at along the way.

Start at the harbourmaster’s office on Beach Road, from where the level asphalt footpath heads north towards the lifeboat house and beach car park, running parallel to the road and narrow-gauge railway line. As you follow the path, you’ll be treated to great views of the lively harbour, full of working boats and pleasure craft, and of the saltmarsh and sandbar running alongside it, rich in birdlife. There are plenty of rest benches along the way, including a few with spaces for wheelchairs next to them. After about a mile, the path reaches a steep concrete slipway that – with care – can be used to access the sandy beach. After you’ve had your fill of the sea views, and perhaps stopped for a bite at the Beach Café, go back the way you came.

If you want to extend your walk further, the Coastal Connection Project has recently renovated the Norfolk Coast Path’s surface between Wells (the northernmost point of your walk) and The Lookout at Lady Ann’s Drive in Holkham. The new path was completed in December 2019, making the Norfolk Coast Path fully wheelchair accessible between Wells and Holkham.

The best place to park is at the council-run Stearmans Yard car park on Freeman Street, about a hundred yards from the Wells harbourside, which has ten disabled spaces – avoid the quayside car park, which has obstructive mooring posts and an unprotected quayside edge. Access to the path itself is ramped, with handrails where appropriate. There’s a spacious RADAR key-accessible toilet at the start of the path,
FOOD & DRINK

The accessible Beach Café (www.holkham.co.uk/stay-eat/beach-cafe) at the north end of the path, just off the beach, serves locally produced light meals and snacks at reasonable prices in a lovely spot, with an outdoor terrace and friendly staff.

A visit to Holkham is hugely rewarding. The hall, a Palladian mansion, is complemented by several other attractions – the Field to Fork Experience, a three-thousand-acre park, a lake, plus the expansive sands of Holkham Beach and nature reserve.

The Field to Fork Experience traces the history of farming at Holkham, exploring its origins, food production, gamekeeping and conservation, using audio-visual and interactive displays, films and authentic artefacts. The hall itself has two must-see rooms – the magnificent Marble Hall and the Library. Outdoors, there are six acres of walled garden, parkland for children to run around, plus a woodland adventure play area, high-ropes course and bicycles for hire. The lake is brimming with wildlife, while the park is home to a herd of four hundred fallow deer. Like the beach, the park has many walk and cycle routes – the website has detailed directions for every trail, as well as information on the raised boardwalks that provide breathtaking views. The beach is part of the Holkham National Nature Reserve; in summer you may see dark green fritillary butterflies, and in winter flocks of larks, finches and pipits.

There are multiple disabled parking bays next to the coach park, one hundred yards from the courtyard where the ticket office, Field to Fork Experience, shop and café are located. Each of these venues is accessible to wheelchair users. Further disabled spaces can be found on the gravel driveway outside the hall. A metal ramp is available at the hall entrance. The main rooms are on the first floor, but the excellent and trained staff can operate the Jolly Stairclimber – an inventive piece of equipment that works much like a tank, and is compatible with most manual wheelchairs. Powered scooter users who are able to transfer can borrow manual chairs to get up to the State Rooms, but otherwise wheelchairs aren’t available to rent. Large-print and Braille transcripts are available for the hall and there’s a hearing loop in the Field to Fork Experience from room two onwards. Blue Badge holders can park at the walled garden, avoiding a ten- to fifteen-minute walk from the hall, though transport is available to all between the two sites. In the gardens some of the gravel paths are uneven. An Access Statement with information on all parts of the estate – including door widths, gradients, counter heights and lighting – is available online.

FOOD & DRINK The Courtyard Café serves homemade food using local produce, a variety of hot and cold dishes, snacks, sandwiches and scrumptious cakes. The Lookout visitor centre also serves a selection of food and drink.

Home to the Nottingham Panthers ice-hockey team, Olympic standard facilities and an impressive schedule of live events and concerts, the National Ice Centre, in the centre of Nottingham, is so much more than an average ice-skating rink.

Live events – both on and off the ice – take place in the Motorpoint Arena, based in the centre: check www.motorpointarenanottingham.com for an updated schedule of what’s on, and to book tickets. Acts range from the classics and crooners of yesteryear to pro-wrestling, Disney On Ice, stars such as Ed Sheeran and big-name comedians. Structured skating lessons and one-on-one coaching are available to all, but there are plenty of public skating sessions too. Session times vary throughout the week, with times suitable for beginners, families, teenagers (Club Night on Fridays and Saturdays), parents and toddlers, or experienced skaters: check www.national-ice-centre.com for details.

All public sessions are inclusive, and disabled participants can access the ice in a number of ways. Ice-adapted Zimmer frames are great for those who are on their feet but require support. Manual wheelchair users can take their own chair onto the ice, or use the one available at the centre. The more adventurous, who are able to transfer, can self-propel using small hockey stick-style devices on the ice hockey sleds. The centre also runs a relaxed skating session every month, perfect for those seeking a quieter atmosphere – including those with a learning disability or autism-spectrum condition.

Every effort has been made to provide a first-class experience for everyone – whether participating or spectating – and most staff have had access-awareness training. Approximately ten disabled parking bays are available on Dean Street near the entrance. Wheelchair users should use the doors on Bolero Square or the lift from Lower Parliament Square. Inside there are wide walkways, lifts to all floors and accessible toilets – including the excellent Changing Places accessible changing and washing facility. Manual wheelchairs can be borrowed. Assistance dogs are welcome, but it is best to inform the venue before their arrival. Those who find noise difficult to manage should also phone the venue in advance so that they can give advice on the noise levels in the centre. All leaflets can be ordered in large print on 0843 3733000 – this is also the number to call if you have questions about accessibility. Skaters should remember to wear warm clothes and bring comfortable socks and gloves. Carers are admitted for free, but should submit some form of proof – such as an access card, DLA or PIP – although staff can exercise their discretion; the same applies to carer entry at the Motorpoint Arena.

FOOD & DRINK

The Encore Bar & Grill overlooks the public ice rink on Level 2. It offers good-quality hot and cold food and is a decent place to escape from the cold and crowds below. The Sub Zero Café Bar provides excellent food and drink in a warm environment on Level 1 next to the ice.

074 Broads Tours, Norfolk

Address: The Bridge, Wroxham, Norfolk NR12 8RX
Web: www.broadstours.co.uk
Tel: 01603 782207
Hours: Mar–Oct daily 8am–5.30pm; Nov–Feb Mon–Fri 8am–5.30pm, Sat 9am–2pm, Sun 10am–3pm
Entry: Prices vary according to length and type of boat trip: check website or phone for details.

Broads Tours runs a variety of river cruises on the beautiful Norfolk Broads, one of the UK’s most important wetlands and home to some spectacular wildlife including kingfishers and otters. With more than forty small lakes connected by six rivers, the Broads cover some 125 miles of waterways which you can explore on one of four comfortable passenger boats. There’s also one self-drive dayboat, complete with wheelchair lift. The regular boat trips last one to two hours, and have a full commentary explaining the history of the Broads and pointing out sights of interest and the abundant birdlife. There are also various special trips throughout the year including educational “Discovery River Trips”, which look at geography and conservation issues in the Broads and can be tailored to fit with school curricula.

There’s level access to the venue, with disabled parking spaces a short distance from the clearly signed entrance. The reception area is accessible with friendly staff, and the flooring is easy to walk on with seating available. It also has clean, spacious toilets. Although the staff don’t have specific autism or disability training, they are helpful and can assist with most needs. All four passenger boats are accessible via hydraulic lifts and ramps, with reserved areas for wheelchair users, though some decks within the boats can only be accessed via steps. The Access Statement on the website has full details on the layout and accessibility of the boats, and you can check with staff in advance. All the boats can only take a certain number of wheelchair users, so book ahead to ensure there’s space; that said, larger parties of wheelchair users (up to ten), such as care-home groups, can also be accommodated with advance notice. Wherever possible, groups will be given their own boat to ensure plenty of time for boarding. River cruises tailored for wheelchair users with support by trained staff are run at certain times of the day and must be booked in advance.
FOOD & DRINK

All the boats have an on-board bar serving snacks and drinks, and, a short distance down the road, The Kings Head in Hoveton (www.greeneking-pubs.co.uk/pubs/norfolk/kings-head-hotel) has an accessible restaurant with amazing pub food and a collection of light ales and beers.

075 Barnsdale Gardens, Rutland

Address: The Avenue, Exton, Oakham LE15 8AH  Web: www.barnsdalegardens.co.uk  Tel: 01572 813200

Barnsdale Gardens is an exquisite collection of 38 small gardens spread over an eight-acre site. With sites as varied as the Rose Garden, Fruit Orchard, Wildlife Garden and Japanese Garden – all beautifully stocked and sumptuously planted – there’s something to encourage, inspire and delight everyone, from green-fingered experts to the casual visitor.

The gardens were created by Geoff Hamilton, who for many years presented BBC TV’s Gardeners’ World from here. You’ll be given a map on arrival, useful if you want to target specific gardens, but it’s more enjoyable to just wander around and see where you end up – it’s all pretty wonderful. There are plenty of secluded spots to sit down and just watch, listen and smell, taking in the birds, insects, scents, colours and textures that surround you. Barnsdale’s new Cutting Garden is currently under construction, and promises beds packed with a range of cut flowers.

There are four disabled parking spaces, next to the entrance. The disabled toilet is opposite the entrance – it’s the only one on the site, which is worth bearing in mind before proceeding to the gardens. The gardens themselves are largely accessible and on level ground, though a few of the smaller ones can be a bit of a squeeze. Most paths are fine for wheelchairs, though some areas may be hard going in wet or muddy weather. The centre has two wheelchairs and a powered scooter which visitors can borrow; advance booking is advised. Free entry is extended to carers, who need to bring a form of identification with them.

FOOD & DRINK

The pleasant on-site Tea Room offers tasty soups, sandwiches, cakes and snacks, plus free wi-fi in a spacious, accessible venue. There’s also an outside seating area with wheelchair-friendly tables.

076 National Space Centre, Leicestershire

Address: Exploration Drive, Leicester LE4 5NS  Web: www.spacecentre.co.uk  Tel: 0116 2610261

The UK's largest planetarium and exhibition on space exploration is a stimulating and visually arresting place – something immediately apparent as soon as you lay eyes on its Rocket Tower building, thrusting skywards above the entrance.

Whether or not you’re a fan of space matters, you could easily spend the day here – and if you’re an enthusiast, you’ll be enthralled by Tranquility Base, where you can test your suitability for a career as an astronaut. Elsewhere, six spacious galleries tell the story of the origins of the universe, of unmanned space probes and of space travel, all illustrated by genuine space artefacts, including food packs, rockets and even a space station toilet. Many hands-on activities provide fun for visitors of all ages – don’t miss the Weather Pod, where you can record your own TV-studio weather forecast then broadcast it on the big screen. A highlight of any visit, the futuristic Sir Patrick Moore Planetarium shows stunning thirty-minute films projected onto its huge, domed ceiling. The planetarium has step-free access and six wheelchair spaces.

There are plenty of disabled parking spaces, though there’s a long slope up to the entrance, which is accessed via automatic doors. Inside, lifts provide access to all the levels, though the higher levels of the Rocket Tower will only hold two wheelchairs at a time per deck, and there’s a maximum of six wheelchair users in the planetarium show. Displays are easily accessible and spacious, though a few of the interactive features are out of reach to wheelchair users. Touch tours can be arranged in advance, and most audio exhibits are subtitled. Large-print and Braille guides, ear defenders, wheelchairs and magnifying glasses are available on request. Booking online allows you to avoid any long queues, and quiet rooms can be provided if you phone beforehand. There are disabled toilets off the main lobby and at the back of the ground-floor galleries.

Disability concession tickets can be purchased both on the day and from the website. When collecting pre-booked tickets, a member of staff will ask to see either a PIP letter, a DLA letter, a doctor's note or confirmation of a carer's allowance as proof in order to receive the concession. If purchasing on the day, you’ll need to show these items in person. A free carer pass is issued when one-to-one support is required.

FOOD & DRINK

Beneath the gigantic rockets, Boosters serves a wide selection of food and drink, including hot dogs, chilli and nachos, sandwiches, soup and snacks. Chairs can be moved and the tables are well spread out.

077 Redwings Horse Sanctuary, Caldecott Visitor Centre, Norfolk

Address: Caldecott Visitor Centre, Beccles Road, Fritton, Norfolk NR31 9EY
Web: www.redwings.org.uk
Tel: 01508 481000
Hours: Fri–Mon 10am–4pm
Entry: free

Redwings is the UK’s largest horse sanctuary, caring for over 1500 rescued horses, ponies, donkeys and mules at several sites across England and Scotland, including this Visitor Centre near Great Yarmouth.

Animal lovers will delight in meeting nose-to-nose with the charity's rescued residents, which include everything from cuddly cobs, majestic shire horses, cheeky Shetland ponies and adorable donkeys. Redwings Caldecott is the sanctuary’s largest centre, with more than 120 residents. Regular guided tours and horse-care demonstrations allow visitors to find out all about these wonderful animals, their background stories and how the charity cares for them. For youngsters who still have enough energy after exploring the paddock walks, there’s a children’s play area, while parents can relax in the café and gift shop.

There are around ten disabled parking spaces on a grassy surface, with a central concrete path leading to the fully accessible visitor centre. The wide grass tracks around the main paddocks and the gravel track around the stable yard can all be negotiated in a wheelchair, while benches provide resting places for those on foot. Wheelchair users get a great view of the animals through the wide-spaced paddock fences, and there are plenty of low-level hand-cleaner dispensers dotted around. A manual wheelchair is available to borrow, and there’s a hose to wash down mobility equipment, pushchairs and muddy boots at the exit.

FOOD & DRINK The fully accessible Oliver Twist Café offers a varied menu of light lunches and hot and cold drinks, but if you prefer to bring your own food, there’s also a picnic area available, with some wheelchair-friendly tables.

078 Ely, Cambridgeshire

The tiny city of Ely (www.visitely.org.uk) is known for its magnificent cathedral, whose towers rise majestically over the Fens like a fairytale castle. It’s not the only reason to visit, however; Ely’s charming streets and pretty riverside make fine places to explore.
The cathedral (01353 667735; www.elycathedral.org) was originally built during Norman times, but most of what you can see today dates from the fourteenth century, including the famous octagonal tower which, when illuminated at night, can be seen for miles around. There’s a disabled parking space in the staff car park by the south door (sometimes possible to reserve ahead) and a drop-off point by the main entrance. Once inside, the glorious nave, chapels, aisles and choir are all accessible to wheelchair users; pick up a leaflet at the information desk outlining access facilities, which include an adapted toilet, large-print and Braille guides, loop systems and a wheelchair to borrow. There’s a concession rate available for carers, with no documentation required.

Close to the cathedral, on Market Street, is Ely Museum (currently closed for renovations, expected to reopen in autumn/winter 2020; 01353 666655; www.elymuseum.org.uk), in an old building that served as the town’s jail from 1679 to 1836. Its lively exhibits focus on local history, from prehistoric times up to World War II, and some of the old prison cells have been restored to their original appearance. There’s level access through automatic doors, a stair lift to the first floor and a hearing loop at reception. The museum is also the site of the Ely Shopmobility scheme (01353 666655), where you can borrow powered scooters.

Also worth a look is Oliver Cromwell’s House on St Mary’s Street (01353 662062; www.olivercromwellshouse.co.uk), where the controversial parliamentarian lived for ten years before he became Lord Protector of England. Part of the house is occupied by the tourist information centre, while the rest is a museum, furnished to recreate the look and feel of a seventeenth-century home, with some fascinating exhibits on Cromwell’s life and death, and the English Civil War. There’s wheelchair access to the parlour and kitchen on the ground floor, though the first floor can only be accessed via stairs; visitors can view the second floor of the house via an interactive booth.

In general, Ely’s compact centre is easy enough to navigate in a wheelchair, and there’s a level, accessible footpath skirting the edge of the River Ouse, too, which runs through the city. There’s a decent supply of Blue Badge bays around town, including on the High Street, Market Street, Minster Place and Newnham Street, and there are handy long-stay car parks on Newnham Street and Barton Road, both with designated disabled spaces and a RADAR key-accessible toilet. Other centrally located accessible toilets include those at the Cloisters shopping centre, just off Market Square, and at Sacrist Gate, by the side of the cathedral. For further information, see www.visitely.org.uk.

079 Brixworth Country Park, Northamptonshire

Address: Northampton Road, Brixworth NN6 9DG  Web: www.northamptonshireparks.co.uk  Tel: 0300 1265932  Hours: car park daily 9am–5pm; toilets daily 7am–7pm  Entry: free; car park: up to 4hrs £3.20, up to 8hrs £5.20, up to 12hrs £7.20 (card/contactless payment available at one machine)

Set in the heart of beautiful rural Northamptonshire, Brixworth Country Park is a national showpiece for an accessible countryside. This small yet perfectly formed park offers great possibilities if you want to picnic, walk, push or cycle in woodland, meadow and stunning reservoir surroundings.
There are three short circular routes round the park – Kestrel, Lapwing and Skylark – all signed and colour-coded and ranging from 550 yards to just over a mile. The paths are hard surfaced, with some undulations but no steep gradients, so regular wheelchair users should be able to manage independently or with a little assistance. You can stroll through the woods and meadows, where you may catch a glimpse of wildlife including foxes, squirrels, waterfowl and woodland birds. For a more challenging adventure, the walking routes also give access to a 7.5-mile circuit around the Pitsford Reservoir.

Families are exceptionally well catered for at Brixworth. There are two children’s play areas, both of which are accessed by hard gravel paths and contain some supportive, accessible equipment as well as plenty of open spaces, perfect for sports and play. Kids will also love experimenting with the human sun clock in the newly refurbished, tranquil sensory garden. Following grant funding from the Mick George Community Fund, the Sensory Play Garden has been upgraded and is a vibrant space for visitors of all abilities, with new accessible play equipment, tactile carved wooden sculptures, a willow dome, sand play and new surfacing. On the third Wednesday of every month, young families can attend Nature Tots, a nature-themed parents and toddlers’ group (10–11.30am, £3 per child; advance booking required). Ranger-led events and activities also take place throughout the school holidays, including guided walks, pond dipping, natural play and fire-lighting skills. Details of forthcoming events can be found on the website or Facebook page.

Disabled parking is situated just in front of Rutland Cycling, and at the start of the walking trails (parking charges apply). There’s an excellent disabled toilet facility (you’ll need a RADAR key) opposite, which contains a hoist and privacy screen. A Tramper (a type of powered off-road scooter), a wheelchair bike (with a disabled passenger seat at the front with a rider seat behind) and a powered scooter are all available to hire; they cost £5 for two hours, and must be booked in advance from the ranger’s office. Standard bikes can be rented from Rutland Cycling, next to the ranger’s office and information booth; the latter has leaflets and information about the park and its wildlife.

FOOD & DRINK The Willow Tree next to the car park serves tasty breakfasts, jacket potatoes, cakes, baguettes and burgers – all in healthy portions. There is widely spaced movable seating inside or fixed picnic benches on the patio. There is a great view over the fields and lake and the young children’s play area is next door.

080 Stanwick Lakes, Northamptonshire

Address: Stanwick NN9 6GY  Web: www.stanwicklakes.org.uk  Tel: 01933 625522  Hours: site: Nov–Feb daily 7am–5pm; Mar & Oct 7am–7pm; Apr–Sept 7am–8pm; visitor centre: Nov–Feb weekdays 10am–4pm, weekends and school hols 10am–5pm; Mar–Oct 10am–5pm  Dates: closed 25 Dec; visitor centre also closed 26 Dec  Entry: free except parking charge

Whether you want a relaxing day out, a summer BBQ or an active afternoon at an adventure playground, Stanwick Lakes is the place to be. With a range of accessible walks and thrilling play areas, each member of the family can connect with nature in their own way.

There’s so much on offer at Stanwick Lakes, from cycling, fishing and birdwatching to assault courses, BBQ facilities and a visitor centre – complete with a shop, café and mezzanine displaying archaeological finds. The excellent and imaginative adventure play areas, filled with apparatus, will keep children occupied for hours, while a series of events, including craft workshops, are run throughout the year. The trails around the lake are beautiful and serene, and there’s plenty to look at, from wonderful wildlife sculptures to fascinating historical artefacts.

The car park has two Blue Badge spaces about ten metres from the main entrance, which is step-free with level access and wide doors. The reception desk is lowered for wheelchair users and access throughout the visitor centre and café is tiled and level, with a lift to reach the mezzanine. There are two accessible toilets, one on the ground floor and one on the first floor, which can be accessed via a lift. Both have wide doors, multiple grab rails and lever taps, and require a RADAR key which can be obtained from staff. The play areas have plenty of benches and flat ground, but some of the apparatus is inaccessible because of sand surfaces. There’s more than seven miles of wheelchair-accessible footpaths at Stanwick; the route around the lake is fairly long, but there are rest benches spaced along the way. The trails should be fine for a manual or powered wheelchair, but – depending on how far you go – manual wheelchair users may want a companion on hand. Every Tuesday and Thursday morning at 10am, staff lead a Health Walk from the visitor centre to encourage people to touch the sculptures and structures in the park. Be aware that Stanwick Lakes can get very busy during weekends and school holidays, so visitors with sensory conditions may want to plan accordingly. Find a calm time to come and remember that spending time outdoors, in greenery and among nature, has positive effects on mental health and wellbeing.
FOOD & DRINK

The Solar Café serves hot and cold drinks, sandwiches, light meals and cakes. It’s self-service, but helpful staff are around. If you’d rather eat in more natural surroundings, outdoor picnic and BBQ provisions are available.

081 Wicken Fen Nature Reserve, Cambridgeshire

Address: Lode Lane, Wicken, Ely CB7 5XP Web: www.nationaltrust.org.uk/wicken-fen Tel: 01353 720274

Wicken Fen is one of Britain’s oldest nature reserves and one of the most important wetlands in Europe. It’s home to more than nine thousand species of wildlife, including otters and rare birds such as hen harriers. The reserve has a raised boardwalk which makes it an ideal place for disabled visitors to explore the fens.

A remnant of the once extensive Cambridgeshire fenlands, the area has been managed for centuries by sedge-cutting and peat-digging, resulting in this unique habitat. In order to sustain the many and varied species at Wicken Fen, the reserve has grown from two to two thousand acres since 1899. It is now one of England’s most diverse wetland sites and a nationally important habitat; for example, more than one thousand species of beetle have been found on the reserve. It’s a great birdwatching area (bitterns and marsh harriers being frequent visitors), and if you’re quiet and visit the more out-of-the-way areas, you may see frogs, toads, newts and even a grass snake. Konik ponies (originally from Poland) and Highland cattle can be seen grazing in the reserve too.

You can take the leisurely half-mile walk along the boardwalk or a more challenging two-mile route along either the nature trail or the adventurers’ trail. The boardwalk is completely flat and very easy to walk on, but it can get a little slippery in wet weather. The other paths are uneven and can be muddy, so wheelchair users are likely to need assistance. It’s also recommended to call ahead to check the state of the roads. Both routes have hides along the way. Hire a pair of binoculars on arrival to ensure you have a good chance of seeing some of the more timid wildlife, as well as the birdlife.

Wicken Fen has ten disabled parking spaces and two manual wheelchairs to borrow. The boardwalk hides are fully accessible, with movable benches, so it is possible to get up really close to the windows. It’s a great site to take dogs to, but it’s best to keep them on a lead at all times. Braille and large-print information is available.

FOOD & DRINK

082 Anglesey Abbey, Cambridgeshire

Address: Quy Road, Lode, Cambridge, Cambridgeshire, CB25 9EJ Web: www.nationaltrust.org.uk/anglesey-abbey Tel: 01223 810080 Hours: check the website before visiting; garden & restaurant: daily 9.30am–5.30pm (winter 4.30pm); plant centre & shop: daily 10am–5.30pm (winter 4.30pm); house: daily 11am–5pm (winter 4pm), last entry 1hr before closing, tours available prior to 11am; Lode Mill: Tues–Sun 10.30am–3.30pm, open bank hol Mon and Mon during summer holidays Dates: everything
Anglesey Abbey is a Jacobean-style country house with spectacular gardens, a working watermill and great sensory experiences, plus year-round activities for adults and children. With a plant centre and shop too, it’s a good place to brush up on your historical knowledge, enjoy the wildlife and indulge in some retail therapy.

Set in the gorgeous Cambridgeshire countryside, Anglesey Abbey showcases the 1930s luxury and entertainment that Lord Fairhaven, the owner of the house, offered his visitors – in particular its spectacular ground-floor dining room, which is accessible to those with mobility issues. However, wheelchair users will probably find the gardens more of an attraction, with the walk to the main house a highlight in itself. You’ll experience beautiful floral smells, sculptures and quaint archways, while the winter garden of Himalayan silver birches is so stunning it’s almost haunting.

There’s a huge car park with about 31 accessible parking spaces in front of the main entrance. Smooth, flat paths lead to double automatic doors into the bright and airy foyer, which is totally accessible, with level floors. The reception desk, along with the shop and restaurant, has a hearing loop, and the staff are knowledgeable about access facilities. Scooter hire and shuttle transport to the main house is available at the reception, although pre-booking is recommended. There are three accessible toilets on site – two near the main entrance, and one on the other side of the grounds between the... mill and the house. Both are bright and clean with grab rails, mirrors and alarm cords in case of emergency, though the toilet at the main entrance is more spacious, so better if help is required to transfer. A temporary Mobiloo is available on certain dates – see website for details. Access to the shop and restaurant are both excellent, with staff on hand to help.

A step-free trail winds its way around the gardens, although parts of the trail are steep and/or over grass or woodland. Most of the trail is flat and hard surfaced, so disabled visitors can enjoy the sights and smells of the sensory areas of the gardens. Braille and large-print guides are available in the house. Both the mill and the house have limited access if you can't use stairs. Staff can provide assistance on arrival at the house, where a limited selection of rooms on the ground floor, including in the domestic wing, are accessible for wheelchair users. At the mill, portable ramps are available so that wheelchair users can negotiate the medium-sized step into the ground floor of the building. You can see the workings of the mill on its upper floors, though these are only accessible to those who can manage very steep and winding steps. A detailed access statement can be found on the Anglesey Abbey website.

FOOD & DRINK

The bright, airy restaurant has seating inside and out, and serves a wide range of freshly prepared seasonal dishes and limited-edition local delights.

083 Dunwich Heath Coastal Centre, Suffolk

Address: Minsmere Road, Dunwich IP17 3DJ
Web: www.nationaltrust.org.uk/dunwichheath
Tel: 01728 648591
Hours: heath dawn–dusk; visitor centre & café hours vary, check website for details
Dates: No site closures; dates vary for visitor centre and café, check website
Entry: free; free parking for Blue Badge holders and National Trust members, or £5.50

Dunwich Heath is an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty, with tracts of heather, gorse, woods, sandy cliffs, unspoilt beaches and bucketloads of local wildlife. Certain to appeal to natural-history enthusiasts, this lowland heath has a wonderfully remote feeling and long coastal views.

A colour-coded map is provided, illustrating four routes across the heath – ranging from thirty to ninety minutes. The paths are mixed surface, including sand, gravel and mud, so wheelchair users may find some areas challenging. The accessible route map shows a 1-mile route, with a 0.75-mile shortcut labelled. The site is large, and is mostly quiet and peaceful, but remember to check the forecast before you visit as the paths can quickly become muddy in wet weather. All the routes offer sweeping views and interesting flora and fauna, with a rich selection of birdlife. Dunwich Heath is home to many rare birds, including a pair of endangered stone curlews that bred there for the first time in 2017. Family activities are held on various days throughout the year, such as pond dipping, bug hunting and bird-ringing demonstrations.

The entry road to the site is flat and even, but has five speed bumps. The gravel car park has four designated Blue Badge spaces (free of charge) fifty yards from the tea-room. There is also a Blue Badge bay overlooking the coast with a one-hour time limit. Two off-road mobility vehicles are available, which come with useful front storage.
boxes for bags or oxygen cylinders (pre-booking is advised). The areas that are not suitable for mobility scooters are clearly signposted. A staff-driven multi-seated vehicle (carrying up to five passengers or one wheelchair and three other passengers) is also available, reliant on pre-booking and dependent on driver availability. There is one accessible toilet on site, and an induction loop is available at the visitor centre, café and shop. As with many nature sites, the atmosphere is relaxed and welcoming, and being in the great outdoors has positive impacts on mental health. Nevertheless, if visitors feel overwhelmed, they should approach a member of staff who will be able to provide a quiet area. Assistance dogs are welcome and route maps are available in large print, too.

FOOD & DRINK

The tearoom inside the old Coastguard Cottages offers lovely cakes and seasonal food; try the scones, which are particularly good. Staff will help moving tables or carrying trays. There is seating outside to enjoy the coastal views.

084 IWM Duxford, Cambridgeshire

Address: IWM Duxford, Cambridge CB22 4QR
Web: iwm.org.uk
Tel: 020 74165000; wheelchair & scooter booking 01223 497240
Hours: daily: Mar–Oct 10am–6pm; Oct–Mar 10am–4pm; last entry 1hr before closing
Dates: closed 24–26 Dec

Located on the best-preserved World War II airfield in Europe, IWM Duxford takes you on a journey through the history of aviation in times of war and peace. It’s a vibrant museum that marries its fascinating past with contemporary displays, interactive exhibitions and exciting events.

One thing that shouldn’t be missed is the Battle of Britain exhibition, which recounts the dramatic air campaign waged by the German Air Force in the summer of 1940, intended to crush the RAF – an objective it failed to achieve. The Blitz of 1940–41 is also covered here, brought to life with evocative mementoes and personal accounts. Other highlights include AirSpace, where you can climb on board a Concorde (no lift access); the Exhibitions Gallery, packed with child-friendly interactive exhibits; Air and Sea, which allows close encounters with submarines; and the American Air Museum, with dramatic displays of old aircraft. Boasting one of the UK’s finest collections of tanks, military vehicles and artillery, the museum has plenty of exhibits showing the impact of technological development on war and conflict.

Much thought has gone into making the museum as accessible as possible: there are nineteen disabled parking spaces; a free on-site mobility vehicle is available for visitors who require assistance (excluding air shows and special events); entry to all the main buildings is wheelchair accessible; and there are plenty of disabled toilets. The hangars are connected to each other by good, level paths and most have automatic doors. There’s a wheelchair lift up to the 1940 Operations Room (from where RAF fighter planes were directed during the Battle of Britain), with a help point alongside to call for staff assistance. In addition, visitors with visual impairments are allowed to touch the aircraft and free audio guides for AirSpace and the Historic Duxford exhibition are available; the audio guide should be reserved in advance on 01223 497240 or by emailing contact@iwm.org.uk. All audio-visual presentations have subtitles, and many have BSL interpretation, while most audio exhibits have the support of induction loops. Guide and assistance dogs are welcome.

FOOD & DRINK IWM Duxford has a restaurant and a café, both self-service. Hot meals are available as well as sandwiches, snacks, soft drinks, teas and coffees.

085 An Artistic Drive through East Anglia

Driving distance: 26 miles  Approx driving time without stops: 1 hour

East Anglia’s Stour Valley and Dedham Vale are famous as “Constable Country”, for it was here that the great nineteenth-century landscape artist, John Constable, painted some of his best-known canvasses. But he wasn’t the only English artist associated with this area, as the following scenic drive reveals.

Our route begins in the pretty village of Long Melford, the location of Melford Hall, a red-brick Elizabethan pile set in 130 acres of parkland (01787 379228, www.nationaltrust.org.uk/melford-hall). The property was formerly owned by relatives of the author-illustrator Beatrix Potter, who frequently came to stay; you can visit her bedroom and admire a collection of her charming watercolours and sketches in the Beatrix Potter Room. Melford Hall has disabled parking, ramped access and two accessible toilets. A stair lift will be available from the 2020 season onwards – please call ahead to check before visiting.

Moving on, drive south to the pretty market town of Sudbury, where you can visit the birthplace and home of Thomas Gainsborough, eighteenth-century England’s leading portrait painter. The house is now a museum, displaying an outstanding collection of Gainsborough’s works (under major redevelopment until 2021).
From here, head east through the bucolic landscape of the Stour Valley. You’ll pass through the picture-perfect village of Stoke-by-Nayland, with its clutch of timber-framed cottages, before reaching the historic little town of Dedham. Here, Castle House (01206 322127, www.munningsmuseum.co.uk) was for forty years the home of Sir Alfred Munnings, famed for his paintings of horses. It’s now the Munnings Art Museum, which has the largest single collection of Munnings’ works. There’s an accessible toilet and good wheelchair access to the ground-floor galleries, but not to the two first-floor galleries.

The most celebrated local artist, however, is John Constable, who grew up nearby and came to school here in Dedham. While you’re here, pop into the parish church on the high street, which houses one of his paintings, The Ascension. Back on the road, loop east then north over the River Stour to East Bergholt, where Constable was born, continuing to the neighbouring hamlet of Flatford, where he painted some of his most famous works, including Willy Lott’s Cottage, near Flatford Mill. The mill and cottage in question are now owned by the National Trust (no general access), as is Bridge Cottage (01206 298260, www.nationaltrust.org.uk/flatford), which houses an exhibition on Constable’s life and works (with level access), and has a lovely riverside tearoom.

FOOD & DRINK Melford Hall and Bridge Cottage both have attractive and accessible on-site cafés serving sandwiches, cakes and light snacks. In Dedham, the Essex Rose Tea House (01206 323101) on the high street, is another good bet; fully accessible, it serves delicious cream teas as well as hot food and snacks.
From its humble beginnings in 1955, when there were just six trees on a windswept hill, the land at Hyde Hall has been transformed into a variety of glorious gardens, with a wide range of plants, trees and flowers from around the world. The highlight is the Hilltop Garden, with its wonderful vistas over the grounds below. Along with exploring the magnificent gardens, visitors can learn about the history of the place in the library, or try one of the many workshops and activities on offer, such as woodcarving or paper-making, using original techniques, creating an indoor terrarium, learning how to grow vegetables and willow-weaving.

All parts of the garden are accessible for wheelchairs and mobility scooters along well-kept paths – although some paths are on an incline, it shouldn’t be a problem for most visitors and there are numerous benches and seated areas throughout the gardens. Getting to the top of the Hilltop Garden requires some effort in a standard wheelchair – you may prefer to borrow one of the two mobility scooters available (suggested donation £2). The signage is clear with a large map clearly visible as you enter the gardens; although none of the signs are in Braille, there are Braille guidebooks available. There’s level access through automatic doors into the main building, which has plenty of space... for wheelchairs and powered scooters. The shop is also quite large and fully accessible, with easy access into the Clover Café. There are two sets of accessible toilets, a spacious one in the main building and another in the Hilltop Garden. The car park is just a short distance from the main entrance with level access and a few Blue Badge spaces. The gardens make a relaxing setting for visitors who need to be in a calm environment. It’s busier here in the summer months, but there are plenty of grassy and lawned areas within the grounds where you can escape any crowds.

FOOD & DRINK

The Barn Restaurant in the Hilltop Garden offers a variety of hot meals and snacks, while The Clover Café serves a good selection of cakes and sandwiches. Alternatively, bring your own lunch to enjoy in the gardens.

[Map of The West Midlands and West Country]
Chatsworth House, in the heart of the Peak District in Derbyshire, is a deservedly popular, extraordinary stately home, dating back to the seventeenth century. Owned by the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, the house has been updated and expanded over sixteen generations, but the current incarnation remains a harmonious whole. The four-poster bed where George II died and the Great Dining Room – set as it was for the visit of George V and Queen Mary in 1933 – are showpiece exhibits. Another enduring highlight is the magnificent collection of paintings. Chatsworth displays works by Tintoretto, Van Dyck and Rembrandt, whose Portrait of an Old Man hangs in the Old Master Drawings cabinet.

There is a lot to see and do in the grounds as well: a grotto and artificial waterfall; a nursery and assorted greenhouses; a tour of the sensory garden to stimulate sound, touch and smell; a farmyard, with daily animal handling sessions; and a woodland adventure playground that has water, sand pits, a climbing forest and spiral slides.

An excellent map indicating the location of benches, accessible toilets and varying path surfaces is downloadable from the accessibility page of the website, and also given out on arrival. Parking for Blue Badge holders is clearly marked and free of charge, and drop-offs are permitted at the main entrance; close by you'll find an information kiosk and an accessible toilet. There are further accessible toilets in the restaurant and at the farmyard. A powered scooter and manual wheelchair collection point is at the North Gate (these are free to hire but be sure to book in advance and be aware they may not be made available in bad weather). All areas, including the entrance to the main children's attractions – the farmyard and adventure playground – are at the top of the main car park. There is lift and ramp access to the animals, picnic room, café, shop and playground, but the woodland playground has a bark surface. There is a gently sloping footpath leading to the paddocks and picnic area. There's also a tractor-trailer tour of the garden, which is accessible.

A lift in the house means wheelchair users have unrestricted access to the full house. A new multimedia guide, free to all visitors, has a BSL option; those who are visually impaired also have access to the audio tour. Assistance dogs are welcome throughout the whole estate, including the house. Induction loops are available at the house, garden and farmyard entrances. All the restaurants and shops have level access and plenty of space. The closest Changing Places facility is located at the Arc Centre, Matlock. Carers go free. If you have any queries about accessibility before you visit, phone or email visit@chatsworth.org.

FOOD & DRINK

Treat yourself to a luxurious brunch or champagne tea, at the award-winning Flying Childers. Alternatively, the fully accessible Carriage House café is good for families, serving fresh dishes prepared from local and seasonal food.

Set in the Derbyshire countryside, Crich Tramway Village is home to the National Tramway Museum, with its extensive collection of restored vehicles and memorabilia including more than sixty trams built between 1900 and 1930. Full of old-fashioned charm, the large, recreated period village has plenty to explore, including a pub, old-style sweet shop, tram depots, an indoor exhibition centre, play areas and a woodland sculpture trail. On entering the museum, visitors collect an old penny to pay the conductor then take a tram ride one mile into the Derbyshire countryside and back. Exhibition areas take visitors on a fascinating journey through a hundred years of tram history, with interactive audio-visual panels, archive films and a dressing-up area. You can also watch the museum’s workshop staff restoring the trams to tip-top condition from an accessible viewing gallery. Throughout the year, a variety of themed events take place, including World War II, Beside the Seaside, Vintage, Classic Vehicles and Horse Tram Days; craft activities are also available during the school holidays and at some special events.
All areas in the village can be accessed via ramps or lifts, and a wheelchair-accessible tram runs at 11.30am and 2.30pm if requested on arrival. Due to the nature of the site there are cobbles, slopes and some uneven surfaces, but a “smoothway” path for wheelchairs and pushchairs runs from the main reception area around the village. Significant slopes lead to the Woodland Trail, play area and tearoom. To avoid the steep uphill segment, take a tram to the top of the village and walk back down through the woodland trail. Although the smoothway path runs around the play area, the equipment, including a nest swing, is set on bark so may be difficult to access for some. There are plenty of helpful staff and seats throughout the village, plus a hearing loop available from admissions, tactile exhibits and several carved, wooden sculptures along the woodland trail. A number of well-appointed, accessible toilets are dotted throughout the site, and all the eating options and shops have ramped or level access. The main admissions area has level access through a wide double door. The themed events are very busy, so visitors who find this challenging may prefer to visit at a quieter time. Check the website for details of events and accessibility.

FOOD & DRINK

You can enjoy light meals in the period Red Lion pub (which also serves gluten-free beer and cider). Rita’s Tea Rooms serves pies, snacks, cakes and hot and cold drinks. Grab a sweet treat from Bluebell’s Ice Cream Parlour or Barnett’s Sweet Shop, or enjoy a scenic picnic.

089 Peak District Scenic Drive

Approx driving time without stops: 1 hour 40 minutes

Sandwiched between the major urban centres of Manchester and Sheffield, the Peak District National Park (www.peakdistrict.gov.uk) is an oasis of beautiful, unspoiled countryside. This fifty-mile drive takes you through the varied landscape of the park, from the gentle hills in the south to the dramatic, rugged moorland of the Dark Peak in the north.

Starting at the bustling market town of Ashbourne, drive northeast to Carsington Water (0330 6780701 or 01629 540696), an excellent... spot to spend a morning before entering the national park itself. This man-made reservoir is an accessible playground for all, with a large visitor centre, restaurant, bird hides, watersports centre, sailing club, picnic areas and children’s playground. An eight-mile circular walk and sculpture trail traces the water's edge, with a map showing a wheelchair-accessible route. Accessibility is a top priority here, with adapted bikes, accessible sailing boats with hoist access and an accessible wheelyboat. The attraction has a relaxed and calm atmosphere, and visitors are surrounded by nature. There’s Blue Badge parking, accessible toilets and powered scooters for hire.

Head north and west to enter the Peak District National Park and reach the Victorian spa town of Buxton, whose elegantly landscaped Pavilion Gardens (www.paviliongardens.co.uk) are laced with inviting accessible paths, with accessible toilets, a smart café-restaurant and disabled bays in the adjacent car park. Buxton is also home to Poole’s Cavern (01298 26978, www.poolescavern.co.uk), on the southern edge of town – a network of underground caves with spectacular stalactites and stalagmites; wheelchair users get free entry since they can only access the main chamber, after which there are 28 steps.

Northeast of Buxton, the ancient village of Castleton is overlooked by the romantic hilltop ruins of twelfth-century Peveril Castle. There are several Blue John mines and show caves here including Peak Cavern (01433 620285, www.peakcavern.co.uk), a short walk (step-free but with a hill) from the car park next to the accessible national park visitor centre in the village. Its vast entrance cave – the largest natural cave entrance in Britain – was for two centuries inhabited by rope-makers supplying the lead-mining industry; wheelchair users can watch demonstrations of the craft here, but will likely find it difficult to go any further into the caves, because of the number of steps.

Take a scenic detour to the Moorland visitor centre in pretty Edale, via Mam Nick – the dip in the southern ridge that borders the Edale Valley – before returning to Castleton through the stunning Winnat’s Pass: the limestone crags and rugged hills around here are breathtaking. Continue east to Hope and Bamford, taking a side road north to the impressive Ladybower Reservoir, which has a visitor centre (Upper Derwent 01433 650952), bicycle hire shop which rents out trampers (01433 651261), and a largely accessible six-mile circuit around its shore (there is one set of steps, and the ground may be easier to cover with wider wheels). Back on the main route, proceed east toward the village of Hathersage, which boasts a heated outdoor pool (01433 650843, www.hathersageswimmingpool.co.uk; ramped access through the back gate and lift for entry into the water) surrounded by stunning scenery.

FOOD & DRINK

The Castle in Castleton (www.vintageinn.co.uk/thecastlecastleton) serves good, reasonably priced food – eat by the crackling fire, or in the pretty gardens.

090 The Trentham Estate, Staffordshire

Address: Stone Road, Trentham, Stoke-on-Trent ST4 8JG
Web: www.trentham.co.uk
Tel: 01782 646646

Hours: gardens 10am–6pm (exit by dusk); autumn & winter hours vary (check website), but generally north entrance open until 4pm, south entrance until 1pm, 3pm at weekends; Monkey Forest Apr–Oct daily 10am–5pm, last entry 1hr before closing
Dates: gardens: closed 25 Dec; Monkey Forest: closed Nov–Mar

Entry:

From the days of its first recorded mention as a royal manor in the Domesday Book in 1085, through its many and varied incarnations – including Augustinian priory, prestigious mansion with landscaped gardens, and 1990s golf club – the Trentham Estate has always welcomed visitors.
These days, in the midst of a £100-million redevelopment project, Trentham offers an eclectic package of attractions that confidently promises “something for everyone”. The mansion is long gone (having been demolished in 1911), but the revamped gardens are as stunning as ever, especially the superb Italian Garden which marches boldly down to a mile-long lake, designed by Capability Brown. You can walk around the lake, take a boat across it or admire it from a miniature train. Beyond the lake lies the Trentham Monkey Forest, home to 140 Barbary macaques which roam freely around sixty acres of woodland. Watching the family groups tending to and playing with their young makes for compelling viewing. There’s also Trentham Treetop Adventures, a tree-based high ropes adventure course. No experience is necessary, but there is a minimum height requirement of 1.4m. Finally, and slightly incongruously, the estate is also the site of a “shopping village” with over fifty shops and a large garden centre.

There’s plenty of free on-site parking, with designated disabled spaces and level access to the garden centre, shopping village and gardens. The Monkey Forest is quite a distance from the other areas, but you can drive there (it has its own car park) or reach it on the wheelchair-accessible (seasonal) boat across the lake. The paths around the gardens are mostly level, with a compacted gravel surface; scented paths and tactile features add to their accessibility. The path around the lake is only partially suitable for wheelchairs, but there is a designated accessible route through the Monkey Forest. There are several disabled toilets dotted around the site, all equipped with grab-rails. Assistance dogs are not permitted anywhere in the Monkey Forest site.

FOOD & DRINK Trentham offers numerous eating options, including the beautifully located Lakeside Café down towards the Monkey Forest, the delightful Italian Garden Tearoom and a clutch of restaurants in the shopping village and garden centre.

Hours: Apr to Sept daily 10am–5pm; Feb & Oct half-terms daily 10am–4pm; Oct, Nov, Dec & mid-Feb to Mar Sat & Sun 10am–4pm
Dates: closed 25 Dec–Feb
[Con]£9.50  [Fam]£38.50

This is a boisterous day out: if you’re a family that enjoys the countryside and can’t get enough of farm animals, then you’ll love it here.

Adults will be pleasantly surprised by the uniforms and memorabilia in the Welsh Guards display, while older children will enjoy the fitness and assault courses, a 131-foot zip-wire, the off-road 4x4 children’s driving course and a go-kart circuit. Animals are the main draw, especially the pig races held daily at 12.30pm and 2.30pm. Children can hold guinea pigs and rabbits in the pet-handling area, everyone can have a go at milking the cow and even toddlers can join in with brushing the tiny Shetland ponies. From the end of February until early summer, lambs and goats can be bottle-fed by visitors – check the website for times. You can also say hello to Pluto the horse in the stable yard. Elsewhere, there are two massive play barns, containing a sand and water play zone, bouncy castles, a brickworks play area, a drop slide and other slides, nets and ropes. There are heritage exhibits too – the Trench Experience allows visitors to experience warfare through an elaborate network of trenches from World Wars I and II and modern times, while the Victorian School and Iron Age Roundhouse are full of information and artefacts too.

Accessible parking is close to the entrance. The Park Hall team has made provisions for visitors with varying abilities – wheelchair users in particular – to access the farm. However, there are areas of the attraction that are still reminiscent of a working farm. Be aware that some of the flagstones and paths are slightly uneven and that some of the ramps for access between barns and to indoor and outdoor areas can be tricky for wheelchair users to negotiate independently. There is no step-free access to the upper level of the granary or to the tractor-towed cart-ride around the farm; however, the friendly staff are on hand to assist if required.

FOOD & DRINK The café/restaurant at the back of the largest building serves basic hot and cold food, including burgers, soup and sandwiches – at peak times it can be a little crowded but there are picnic areas if you want to bring your own sandwiches.

092 Shrewsbury, Shropshire

Almost completely encircled by a loop in the River Severn, Shrewsbury’s town centre (www.originalshrewsbury.co.uk) has the feel of an island, with water on all sides. It can be accessed via the Welsh Bridge in the west and the English Bridge in the east, their names neatly reflecting the town’s borderland location.

One of the most beautiful market towns in Britain, Shrewsbury boasts a wealth of stunning, timber-framed black-and-white buildings, many of them dating from medieval times. The Visitor Information Centre, in the Music Hall on The Square, offers fascinating guided walking tours around the historic centre – with notice, these can be adapted to suit visitors with disabilities. The tours take in the best of the town’s medieval architecture, including gems such as the sixteenth-century Market Hall and a clutch of twisting, evocatively named streets and alleyways (known as “shuts”), including Grope Lane and Fish Street – they’re manageable in a wheelchair, but some have uneven surfaces and lack drop kerbs.

If the narrow streets leave you feeling a little claustrophobic, head over to the expansive Quarry Park, a beautifully landscaped riverside park, with plenty of rest benches and some inviting, accessible footpaths. Its centrepiece is “the Dingle” – a sunken garden sited in a former quarry, bursting with colourful flowers.

Try to pay a visit to Shrewsbury Abbey (01743 232723, www.shrewsburyabbey.com), home of fictional detective Brother Cadfael, just across the English Bridge. Although much of the abbey was destroyed in the sixteenth century, it retains four massive Norman columns from the original church, plus an attractive stained-glass window and fourteenth-century tower. The ancient stone tombs are also compelling, and there is a memorial to local World War I poet Wilfred Owen. The abbey has level access, an accessible toilet and on-site parking with designated Blue Badge spaces.

Shrewsbury offers a good spread of on-street Blue Badge parking in the town centre, with designated spaces in many car parks including the Abbey Foregate – or use the accessible park-and-ride services (see www.shropshire.gov.uk). As the town is spread over two hills you should be prepared for some steep inclines, which means that manual wheelchair users are likely to need assistance. There are a number of accessible toilets dotted around, including at the Market Hall.
Even non-aviation buffs will get something out of a visit to the RAF Museum at Cosford – the whole family will benefit from the fun, yet educational, exhibits, and should leave with a new appreciation of what life is like in active service.

The sister site to Hendon’s RAF Museum, in north London, this museum houses over seventy aircraft in four hangars, including experimental aircraft, engines, missiles and World War II planes. Captured enemy aircraft provide an interesting comparison with the British models on show, while the Cold War exhibition covers the subject extensively. The displays are interactive throughout, but the Fun ’n’ Flight Learning Zone in the test-flight hangar is particularly brilliant, and well-engineered for kids.

Access to the visitor centre from the conveniently located accessible parking spaces is along a downhill tarmac path. Pedestrian entry is through a newly added, fully accessible sliding door. RAF Museum Cosford is pretty well set up for wheelchair users, although a fair amount of transferring between buildings is required. Maps are on hand to help with navigation from hangar to hangar (keep an eye out for Hangar One, as it isn’t as well signposted as the others). The four museum buildings are level and spacious, and three of them have well-indicated pedestrian walkways for visitors.
with impaired vision. There are four designated toilets throughout the site as well as a Changing Places toilet located near visitor reception. The one split-level building housing the Cold War exhibition has an induction loop and a lift giving access to a very effective viewing gallery; Braille and large-print guides are available, too. The overall site has a slight gradient and some visitors may find the return trip to the car park quite steep. A limited number of motor scooters and manual wheelchairs can be borrowed on a first-come, first-served basis.

FOOD & DRINK

The glass-fronted café Refuel is light, modern and spacious, with movable furniture and a menu including burgers, jacket potatoes, salads and paninis.

094 Twycross Zoo, Warwickshire

Address: Burton Road, Atherstone CV9 3PX
Web: www.twycrosszoo.org
Tel: 0844 4741777
Hours: daily: summer 10am–6pm; winter 10am–5pm
Dates: closed 25 Dec

Set in more than eighty acres, Twycross Zoo is home to around five hundred animals from almost one hundred species, including some of the most endangered creatures on the planet. Since its modest opening in 1963, the zoo has become renowned as a specialist in primates and is home to a wide variety of monkeys and apes including the UK’s only group of bonobos, making it the only zoo in the country to house all four types of great ape.

As well as primates, the zoo is home to all sorts of other species, including zebras, snow leopards, Humboldt penguins and meerkats. Visitors can get up close and personal with butterflies and lorikeets in their walk-through enclosures, and admire the graceful giraffes in their savannah setting. Look out, too, for the penguins as they waddle around.

The zoo and its staff have a commendable grasp of the needs of visitors with access requirements, and facilities are impressive. There are well-signposted Blue Badge parking spaces in front of the Himalaya visitor centre (the zoo’s main entrance). Twycross is wonderfully flat with very few slopes, and certainly no steep ones. All path surfaces are hard gravel or tarmac, but these can be affected by heavy rain. Powered scooters can be rented for £12 (book in advance). All the cafés, shops and toilets are easily accessible (and there is a RADAR key-accessible Changing Places facility, too), as are most of the animal houses. While welcome on site, assistance dogs are restricted from entering some areas, such as the indoor animal houses, and must be wearing an approved harness; their presence needs to be arranged in advance with the guest-services team. Carers receive free entry, but must provide documentation.

FOOD & DRINK

You don’t have to visit the zoo to enter the Himalaya Centre, with its huge glass windows overlooking the snow-leopard enclosure – it’s a great spot for a family lunch. The restaurant has movable seating, the hot and cold menu includes healthy, vegetarian and gluten-free options, and you can book for specific dietary requirements in advance. There’s a gift shop and soft-play area, too. Several other places on site offer food.
Bursting at the seams with hands-on exhibits, Thinktank is a fun museum, covering the sweep of past, present and future science and technology. Although often awash with young children, there is plenty to engage big kids and adults too, and a family will need at least half a day to enjoy it all. This diverse learning experience is spread over four galleries on four floors. Down on Level 0, the journey starts in The Past, where there's a full-size Spitfire, plus a gallery that explores Birmingham's key role in the manufacture of these aeroplanes, and a look at the steam machinery of the Industrial Revolution that was instrumental in Birmingham's expansion. From there, as you work your way up the building, through the three further areas, The Factory, Our World and The Future, all the exhibits are colourful, tactile and utterly compelling. You can play along with a drum-playing robot, record a news broadcast and programme the Robo Thespian, a robot that imitates your expressions, body language and voice. The brand-new under 8s roleplay area, MiniBrum, is vast and designed for younger children to unleash their imaginations and learn at the same time. The diverse programme of events, activities and lectures for adults changes regularly – check the website for dates and for BSL-interpreted events. In addition, there is a Planetarium (shows £2.50), plus the exciting Science Garden, an outdoor discovery space with family-oriented activities.

Thinktank was created in partnership with the visual impairment specialists at Queen Alexandra College, with every element of the space crafted to ensure accessibility. The displays are low-level, with plenty of free space around the exhibits, and captions on the walls are generally large. There's an accessibility box, containing large-print and Braille guides, magnifying glasses, adult and child wheelchairs, ear defenders and an induction loop. People on the autism spectrum can download information (from www.birminghammuseums.org.uk/thinktank/visit) to prepare for a visit. Morning Explorer sessions are held before the museum opens to the public for those on the autism spectrum and with sensory issues to look around the exhibitions at a quiet time and do craft or other activities: entrance for these sessions is half-price (with a free adult carer), and places must be pre-booked by phone (see www.birminghammuseums.org.uk for details). There’s a multistorey car park behind Thinktank, accessed from Jennens Road. Blue Badge parking is free.

FOOD & DRINK The café, located on Level 0 of the museum, serves hot and cold food including baguettes, jacket potatoes, pizza (whole or by the slice) and daily specials. There is always a Halal option available. Tables and chairs are moveable but manoeuvring can be difficult during busy periods.

096 Cadbury World, Birmingham

Address: Cadbury World, Linden Road, Bournville, Birmingham, B30 1JR
Web: www.cadburyworld.co.uk
Tel: 0121 3936004
Hours: vary from 9am–4.30pm at peak times to 10am–2pm in low season; check website for details; pre-booking is advised to guarantee entry
Dates: closed 1–23 Jan & 10, 14, 17, 24–26 & 31 Dec
Entry: [D]£17.50 [C]free [A]£17.50 [4–15s]£12.85 [under 4s]free [seniors & students with NUS card]£13.25 [Fam]£52.50–62.70; prices vary slightly depending on the day of visit, so check online first; ID required for discounted disabled and carer tickets

Covering the story of chocolate from bean to bar and the history of Cadbury from tiny shop to international brand, Cadbury World has enough facts and nostalgia to entertain the adults and enough fun and free chocolate for kids to love it even more.
This engaging, interactive attraction tells the story of chocolate from its discovery by the ancient Mayans and Aztecs through its journey to the bars and brand that we know today. This is a multi-sensory experience where visitors progress on a fun journey through several zones, with rides, history, interactive cinema and tasting experiences all cleverly linked – and the sweet smell of chocolate is never far away, especially where the chocolatiers demonstrate traditional chocolate-making techniques. The advertising avenue introduces a spot of nostalgia, too, bringing back memories of Cadbury campaigns from the past.

The flat car park has plenty of accessible parking spaces, less than a hundred yards away from the main entrance along a slight slope. Automatic doors open onto the good-sized reception area, with low-level payment desks and priority queues for those with disabilities. The accessible toilets are excellent – very modern, bright and well-kept – and there's a Changing Places facility with a hoist and height-adjustable bench.

Overall, Cadbury World is well thought-out, and those with different needs can access and interact with most parts of the attraction. The staff are helpful and are used to disabled visitors and their needs. Some parts of the building are dark, with little contrast between walls and floor, or have brick-effect flooring, which may be tricky for those with impaired sight or mobility. Recently launched SEN sessions, with reduced music and lighting, are perfect for those with autism and sensory issues. A manual wheelchair-accessible car is available on request on the Cadabra ride, and there are two wheelchair spaces on the 4D Chocolate Adventure. Wheelchair users who can transfer into a cinema seat will have a more interactive experience, as the seats shake and move as part of the experience. Carers go free, but must provide supporting documentation (details on website).

FOOD & DRINK

The on-site café is light, with a variety of seating areas, movable chairs and tables; it serves a limited selection of food including paninis, sandwiches, cakes, jacket potatoes, burgers and chips, and soup.

097 Coventry Transport Museum

Address: Millennium Place, Hales Street, Coventry CV1 1JD
Web: www.transport-museum.com
Tel: 024 76234270
Hours: daily 10am–5pm (last entry 4.30pm)
Dates: closed Dec 24–26 and Jan 1
Entry: [D]£14 [C]free [A]£14 [5–16]£7 [under 5s]free [Con]£10.50 [Fam]£28–35; fee covers entry for one year; city residents go free

Coventry Transport Museum, right in the heart of the city, houses the largest publicly owned collection of British vehicles on the planet. With a cornucopia of historic transport on display, alongside interactive modern exhibits and highly immersive exhibitions, the museum explores how one city changed the world through transport. With so much hands-on fun, the whole family will find it hard to leave.

The museum tells a very British story of vehicle manufacture in the Midlands and beyond. Exhibits lead through the first bicycles – think boneshakers and penny-farthings – to early motor transport, iconic cars and commercial vehicles and on to innovative designs like the impressive 1997 ThrustSSC, holder of the land-speed record. Further displays take a peek into the technologies that could define our future. The evolving his-
Herbert Art Gallery and Museum

The history of manufacture, technological development, the effect of war and all the past and current big players are explained well. The new Move and Play zone is a stellar example of how interactive and inclusive learning – with activities like movement games and big screens – can entertain and educate kids and adults alike.

There is accessible parking in the museum car park, but visitors will need to call in advance. Alternatively, there are disabled bays (free) in the Bishop Street car park, just behind the museum; access from here is flat, although some of the pavements are in need of repair. Entering the museum via the slowly rotating door is possible in a wheelchair, but alternative access is through the café. A ramp leads to the reception area; the lighting here is subdued, which may suit people with sensory conditions but cause problems for those with a visual impairment. Inside the galleries, access is good, with lift access to all floors, wide walkways and regular seating throughout. Wheelchairs can be borrowed from the museum, and many of the interactive exhibits – especially those in the Move and Play zone, which was clearly designed with inclusion in mind – are accessible for those with restricted mobility. A few ramps are in use, and there’s one section of uneven ground leading towards the museum experience (brick-style street paving); those with visual impairments should also take care as the lack of contrast between dark floors and the low-level barrier edges may be a tripping hazard. The Blitz experience has flashing lights, intense smoke and noise, but this section can be easily bypassed. The toilet area requires an access code (to prevent people coming off the street to use the toilets), and the twist latch to exit is too high for wheelchair users. The main disabled toilet just about has space to transfer. Essential carers go free.

FOOD & DRINK

The museum’s café and coffee house is pleasant and open, with movable chairs and tables and space to manoeuvre. Expect homemade cakes, smoothies, coffee, basic jacket potatoes and paninis with crisps and salad.

098 Herbert Art Gallery and Museum, Warwickshire

Address: Jordan Well, Coventry CV1 5QP  Web: www.theherbert.org  Tel: 024 76237521  Hours: Mon–Sat 10am–4pm, Sun noon–4pm  Dates: closed 24–26 Dec & 1 Jan  Entry: free
If you’ve never heard of the Herbert Art Gallery and Museum, it’s time to find out more. A former winner of The Guardian’s Family Friendly Museum award, this eclectic museum is devoted to art, and local and natural history.

The museum’s great achievement is to combine serious, grown-up content – from Saxon glazed wall tiles to thousands of fossils – with an imaginative approach that really engages children with the collections. Abstract paintings and sculpture, Old Masters, minerals, fossils, stuffed birds, silk weavings and Victorian clocks sit cheek by jowl with hands-on exhibits, touch-screen displays, dressing-up costumes, things to smell, story baskets, family trails and more. The Herbert has a number of permanent galleries, ranging from the visual arts to social and industrial history, archaeology and natural history, plus a series of exhibitions that change every few months (some charge an entrance fee); check the website to see what’s coming up. Past exhibitions have included Recording Britain from the Victoria and Albert Museum, Roman Empire: Power and People from the British Museum, and The Story of Children’s Television: from 1946 to Today, a record-breaking exhibition. A wide range of detailed talks and events take place throughout the year. Lively, child-centred workshops add to the family appeal, and everything in the museum is beautifully displayed in a modern, light and accessible space. The Herbert is also home to Coventry Archives, the city’s destination for historical documents, photographs, maps and archival materials. If you want to explore Coventry’s rich history further, you can book special tours of the Old Grammar School and Medieval Undercroft.

There’s no on-site car park and the gallery is in the middle of a busy city centre. Two Blue Badge bays on Bayley Lane are used by gallery visitors and city-centre shoppers alike, so are in high demand. Around the old cathedral some double yellow lines can be parked on with a Blue Badge or, failing that, try one of the city’s pay-and-display car parks nearby. Once inside, accessibility is outstanding. There are features not uncommon in other modern museums: induction loops in the reception area, lifts and level access to all floors, and accessible toilets, for instance. But there’s also the sense that the Herbert wants to go beyond this and make itself as accessible as possible to as many people as possible, particularly with its multi-sensory elements. Birdsong recordings, for instance, can not only be listened to: visitors can “feel” the sound on a vibrating metal plate, and “see” a visual interpretation of it on a large screen. Pre-arranged touch and audio descriptive tours are available, and the well-trained staff are uniformly helpful.

FOOD & DRINK

The light, airy Alfred’s café is on the ground floor with level access, though there’s little space to manoeuvre at busy periods, so you could try one of the many other cafés and restaurants nearby.

099 Severn Valley Railway, Worcestershire

Address: Kidderminster Station, 1 Comberton Place, Kidderminster DY12 1QR
Web: www.svr.co.uk
Tel: 01562 757900
Hours: daily mid-May–Sept; irregular service Oct–Apr, check website for details & special events
Dates: closed Jan (except New Year special), 25 Dec & selected dates Feb–May & Oct–Dec (check ahead)
There's a magic about travelling by steam train that appeals across the ages - from children captivated by the huffs, puffs and toots to older folk nostalgic for the romance of a bygone era. With its shiny steam engines, heritage carriages and picturesque stations, the Severn Valley Railway doesn't disappoint.

The original Severn Valley Railway was closed in 1963 as part of national rail rationalisation, but it was subsequently bought and gradually restored by enthusiasts keen to preserve it for future generations. Running sixteen miles from Kidderminster in Worcestershire to Bridgnorth in Shropshire, the line meanders through the Severn Valley, often close to the River Severn itself (at one point crossing it on the impressive Victoria Bridge, high above the water). Those keen to explore the valley should get a “Freedom of the Line” ticket, which allows passengers to hop on and off. One stop definitely worth making is the recently opened Engine House visitor centre at Highley, where you can view the reserve locomotives, find out what it's like to ride on the footplate (and pull the whistle!) or simply watch trains go by from the viewing platform.

The railway goes out of its way to make itself welcoming and accessible to those with limited mobility. Access at the main stations (Kidderminster, Bewdley, Highley and Bridgnorth) is good – all offer designated Blue Badge parking spaces, and staff can point you to the most appropriate entrance/exit or way to cross the tracks when necessary. Ramps are available for boarding trains at most stops (excluding Country Park Halt and Northwood), and many of the trains have specially adapted carriages for wheelchair users, which come with fully accessible toilets (also available at Kidderminster and Bridgnorth stations, and in the Engine House). Assistance dogs are allowed to travel on the trains for free and large-print leaflets are available from the Bewdley ticket office.

FOOD & DRINK

The café at the Engine House visitor centre serves well-priced light meals in an airy, bright space with a great view of passing trains and out over the Severn Valley. There are refreshment rooms and pubs at Kidderminster and Bridgnorth, and there's also a trolley buffet service on the trains.

With elephants, rhinos, giraffes, zebras, tigers, hunting dogs, cheetahs and antelopes, West Midland Safari and Leisure Park gives you a taste of Africa from the comfort of your own car. You can easily spend a couple of hours driving around the park's one hundred acres (it can be congested at peak times), observing the wildlife and stopping to take photos along the way. Some of the less dangerous species can be fed from car windows, and you can buy a box of the special feed at the entrance. Feeding is fun and a great way to see the animals up close, though you may be left with slobber on your hands! The latest exhibit in the animal reserves is Realm of the Lions, which is home to a pride of eleven African lions, who can often be seen relaxing on their own rock. You are welcome to drive around the park as many times as you wish. Guided minibus tours (£6.50) are available, but you need to be able to board the vehicle on foot.

After the safari experience, there is even more to enjoy in the rest of the park. Penguin Cove is home to a colony of Humboldt penguins, complete with a semi-submerged beach and underwater viewing area, while the African Village houses Meerkat Mayhem and Lemur Woods. As well as various animal encounters throughout the day, there’s Creepy Crawlies, Aquarium, Twilight Cave, Mark O’Shea’s Reptile World, Lorikeet Landing, the wheelchair-accessible Land of the Living Dinosaurs, which is home to forty life-size animatronic, pre-historic beasts, plus the new, wheelchair-accessible sensory playground Boj Giggly Park and the equally accessible Ice Age.

As the park is a pedestrian area, you’ll need to leave your car in the accessible parking area near the entrance. There are some considerable distances to cover, and a few slopes to negotiate, but rest stops are provided along the way. Manual wheelchairs can be borrowed too, but do call ahead to book and note that your car keys or driving licence will need to be left as a deposit. The park has a new Changing Places facility in the main car park toilet block, complete with an adult changing bed and hoist. Access to most of the animal houses, including the ramped high walkway over the hippo enclosure, is reasonable, although visitors should be prepared for some steep and uneven surfaces. The park boasts thirty rides and unsurprisingly not all of them are accessible. If you can transfer from your wheelchair, the intense Venom Tower Drop and the delightful Jumbo Parade family ride, among others, are manageable. You can find a brief, useful overview of each ride on the website, along with other information.

FOOD & DRINK

The Dino Diner is midway through the park and has plenty of healthy options, a children’s menu, accessible toilet and movable outdoor seating. Alternatively, Burger Co. serves a variety of sandwiches, burgers, children’s meals and salads.

101 The MAD (Mechanical Art and Design) Museum, Warwickshire

Address: 4–5 Henley Street, Stratford-upon-Avon, Warwickshire, CV37 6PT
Web: www.themadmuseum.co.uk
Tel: 01789 269356
Hours: Apr–Sept Mon–Fri 10am–5pm, Sat & Sun 10am–5.30pm; Oct–Mar Mon–Fri 10.30am–4.30pm, Sat & Sun 10am–5pm; weekend opening hours also apply to Warwickshire school hols & bank hols; hours may vary over Christmas (last admission 45min before closing)
Dates: closed 24–26 Dec

The UK’s only museum dedicated to mechanical art and design, Stratford-upon-Avon’s award-winning Mechanical Art and Design Museum is packed with interactive exhibits to educate and entertain visitors of all ages. Fans of Wallace and Gromit’s crazy contraptions or the wild creations of Caractacus Pott in Chitty Chitty Bang Bang will love this quirky and fascinating museum. Small and friendly, it’s interactive-heaven with buttons, knobs, levers and pedals to make the displays come to life around every corner – you’d be “MAD” to miss it.

An open-tread, metal staircase takes visitors up to the first-floor museum reception and shop, and there’s also a large lift with audio announcements and Braille text on the buttons. Once on the first floor, the museum is all on one level with wide walkways, no steps or ramps, and a number of seats throughout the venue. The majority of the exhibits are operated by well-lit, low-level push buttons. Clear directional signage is used throughout, and descriptive text for people with impaired vision is available on request. The museum has numerous mechanical installations, some with lights and sounds, which may make some visitors jump. Some visitors on the autism spectrum may be overwhelmed by the many visually stimulating exhibits and the sounds they produce, such as the model train running around the ceiling which toots periodically, the machine which claps loudly in response to visitors, and the oversized marble-run that follows the staircase with occasional “clanking” sounds as the marble drops between levels. Others will be absolutely fascinated by the interesting mechanics of the displays, which can be operated repeatedly. A couple of exhibits have flashing and moving lights, which people with epilepsy may be sensitive to. There is a large accessible toilet in the museum with a wide doorway, grab-rails and lowered sink. The nearest car park is on Windsor Street, a two-minute walk from the museum, with eight Blue Badge parking spaces. The museum website has further accessibility information, and you can call in advance if you have specific queries or to get advice on when the quietest periods to visit are (those without school group bookings in place, for example).

FOOD & DRINK There is no on-site café, but the museum is in the heart of Stratford-upon-Avon with plenty of places to eat and drink nearby, plus a nice picnic area a five-minute walk away by the river.
One of the world’s best-known theatre ensembles, the Royal Shakespeare Company is based throughout the year in Stratford-upon-Avon, where it performs plays by the bard himself, William Shakespeare, alongside the work of his contemporaries, as well as putting on pieces by new playwrights.

The venue includes the 1000-seat Royal Shakespeare Theatre, as well as the smaller, more intimate 400-seat Swan Theatre, while The Other Place, a short walk away from the main building, houses the experimental 200-seat Studio Theatre. The theatres in the main building both have thrust stage auditoria, projecting out into the audience and making for a more intimate relationship between the actors and audience, while the Studio Theatre is frequently reconfigured to suit the work on display there. There are plenty of other activities, too: you can follow a guided theatre tour; visit the free seasonal exhibition in the PACCAR room; or see The Play’s The Thing, an award-winning experience which explores 100 years of theatre with beautiful costumes and hands-on, interactive fun. You can also pick up a self-guided Family Trail or take a lift up to the top of the 105-foot-high viewing tower, for panoramic views over Shakespeare’s home town.

Access facilities at the venue are excellent. There are accessible parking bays on Waterside, in front of the main theatre, and ten on Chapel Lane, opposite the Swan Theatre, with additional spaces on nearby Southern Lane. (Ongoing construction work will affect these bays until June 2020, but replacement spaces will be located further up Chapel Lane (signposted) in the meantime.) Visitors with sensory conditions are well catered for: signage is clear; there are audio-described performances with touch tours and captioned performances on every RSC production; several shows have a BSL-integrated performance; and large-print and Braille cast lists are available. Assistance dogs are welcome in the auditorium, or can be left with friendly theatre staff. There are also loop systems in the auditorium and other public areas. There are twelve wheelchair spaces, with excellent visibility, and accessible toilets on every level. Tickets for visitors with disabilities (and their carers) are charged at a reduced tariff of £16 – best booked ahead. Front row seats are available at every performance for those with visual or hearing impairments – email access@rsc.org.uk for audio-described introductory notes, which can be provided online or on CD for each production. The theatre also puts on relaxed performances for those on the autism spectrum or with special educational needs, with chill-out areas available. Quiet performances are also staged for parents with babies, people living with dementia and others who might benefit from a less restrictive theatre environment. For more information, visit www.rsc.org.uk/access.

FOOD & DRINK

The Rooftop Restaurant & Bar serves delicious food in a spacious and sophisticated dining room with wonderful views – the fixed-price pre-theatre menus are good value, with two courses for £22.50, or three courses for £26.50. Susie’s Café Bar is a relaxed, friendly restaurant in The Other Place, a short walk from the main theatre, with two courses for £14.50 and three for £18.95. Otherwise, the more casual Riverside Café serves snacks and light meals overlooking the River Avon.

103 Hereford Cathedral and Mappa Mundi, Herefordshire

Address: 5 College Cloisters, Cathedral Close, Hereford HR1 2NG
Web: www.herefordcathedral.org
Tel: 01432 374200; accessibility officer 01432 374240
Hours: cathedral 9.30am–evensong; Mappa Mundi and Chained Library exhibition, café and shop Mon–Sat 10am–5pm; library and archives Tues–Thur 10am–5pm, first Sat of the month 10am–1pm
Dates: exhibition, café and shop closed Good Friday, 24–26 Dec & 1 Jan
Entry: Mappa Mundi and Chained Library: [D]£6 [C]free [A]£6 [Con]£5 [Fam]£8 (1 adult, 1 child), £10 (1 adult, 2–3 children), £14 (2 adults, up to 3 children); tours £5; free disabled parking at the cathedral but requires advance booking Beautifully sited on the banks of the River Wye, this ancient Norman cathedral is well worth a visit. Housing the sensational Mappa Mundi – the largest surviving medieval map of the world, dating to around 1300 – as well as a plethora of amazing artefacts and archaeological information, there’s much to admire here. By embracing modern technology, the cathedral has created an exciting and accessible experience for everyone.

Entering through the huge main doors, the immense presence of the building reveals itself, from the beautiful stained-glass windows to the expansive floor, covered with colourful tessellated tiles. Soft whispers reverberate around the space, where high ceilings, ornamented walls and superb statues all add to the atmosphere. The Mappa Mundi and the extraordinary Chained Library stand out from everything else. Drawn on a single calfskin, the Mappa Mundi shows Jerusalem at the centre of the world and is decorated with numerous fascinating images of historical and Biblical events, as well as plants, animals and mythological creatures. The Chained Library consists of several early seventeenth-century bookcases bearing more than two hundred medieval manuscripts, all attached to the bookcases by chains, rods and locks. You can simply soak up the atmosphere, attend the entertaining and illuminating tours or join in with the prayers. A cathedral choir that has sung here since the thirteenth century can be heard during services – this is still very much a “working” cathedral, so check ahead if you want to catch or avoid a service.

Access to the building is excellent and staff – who undergo accessibility training – are on hand to assist. The exhibition area housing the library and Mappa Mundi has level entry through a push-button door and plenty of space. Visitors with visual impairments are very well catered for with a tactile map and Braille interpretation of the Mappa Mundi and accompanying audio descriptions, a Braille map of the cathedral and a Braille guide. The rest of the cathedral is largely accessible to wheelchair users, with the exception of the tower, crypt, Lady Chapel and Audley Chapel. The atmosphere is generally quiet and calm, but the interior of the building is huge, which may be overwhelming for some. In addition, the organ music and prayers delivered by microphone can be loud, but ear defenders are available. As well as a sensory trail, there are family trails, quizzes and brass rubbings that will keep children of all ages occupied. Makaton has been introduced and can be used by staff and volunteers. There's one spacious accessible toilet (which requires a RADAR key, available in the shop or the vestry). Carers go free but should bring supporting documentation.

FOOD & DRINK

The reasonably priced and accessible on-site café serves hot and cold meals, soups, sandwiches and cakes. The adjacent Chapter House Garden proves a lovely additional outdoor eating area.

Presiding over the quaint village of Symonds Yat, on the banks of the River Wye, Symonds Yat Rock is a dramatic limestone outcrop that rises some 500ft from the river. It offers breathtaking views over the Herefordshire countryside and down to the wooded gorge far below.

Thanks to a Heritage Lottery Fund grant of almost £3 million, the viewpoint has been fitted with a fully accessible, all-ability trail to the top. Visitors should start their journey from the main car park, where there’s Blue Badge parking and accessible toilet facilities. Follow the path that leads through the hill fort to a clearing with picnic tables, and the Log Cabin Café – from there, a solid wooden footbridge starts the path up the hill. The total distance from the car park to the summit is around 450 yards. The inclines along the way are not too extreme, but if you’re using a manual wheelchair, assistance may be required in some places. At the viewpoint, low walls allow wheelchair users to enjoy the glorious views and the first-rate birdwatching possibilities – if you visit between April and August, look out for the pair of peregrine falcons that nest in the area. There is an alternative car park for Blue Badge holders only, which is closer to the viewpoint and café, but further from the toilets. There is a mobility scooter available at Forest Holidays (www.forestholidays.co.uk) that can be hired and then taken on an off-road route (a little more than three miles long) to Symonds Yat Rock.

When you’ve had your fill of the views, head to the aMazing Hedge Puzzle, a few miles over the river in Symonds Yat West (there’s also a butterfly zoo, mini golf and laser tag here). This perfectly formed maze, one of the largest in the UK, is composed of six-foot-high, three-foot-wide hedges; it’s a challenge, but great fun and a big hit with kids. Note that you can only leave the maze by finding the centre or going backwards, so it’s not suitable if you might need to exit quickly. The hard, wide paths are fine for wheelchairs, though the viewing platform in the middle can only be accessed via a metal staircase. Those on foot, however, will appreciate the well-deserved rest seats. The attraction has designated accessible parking (though it’s not free for Blue Badge holders) and a RADAR key-accessible toilet. Mornings are the quietest times to visit.

FOOD & DRINK

Symonds Yat Rock has the Log Cabin Café on site (opens at 10am, with closing times varying between 3–6pm seasonally). Alternatively, The Saracens Head (01600 890435, www.saracensheadinn.co.uk), at Symonds Yat East, a two-mile drive away, has outdoor seating overlooking the river, access into the bar area and an accessible toilet. The aMazing Hedge Puzzle has its own tearoom, serving cakes, teas and light lunches.

105 Walks on Wheels, the Cotswolds

Web: www.cotswoldsaonb.org.uk Tel: Cotswold Conservation 01451 862000 (ask to discuss Walks on Wheels)

Covering much of Oxfordshire and Gloucestershire, as well as parts of Wiltshire, Warwickshire and Worcestershire, the picture-postcard Cotswolds region boasts old churches and handsome stone mansions, with beautiful walks galore. Walks on Wheels is a well-researched collection of fourteen totally accessible short walks in the area, giving step-free access to some of the most picturesque and historic places in the country, from relaxing river walks to ancient stone circles. Comprehensive downloads mean you can relax into the experience with peace of mind.

Rangers and volunteers have pooled their extensive knowledge of hundreds of Cotswold rambles to select a number of walks which are both scenic and interesting yet totally accessible. There are no steps, no steep gradients, no impassable terrain and no stiles or narrow bridges, so everyone is free to enjoy the countryside in total confidence. Some walks are surprisingly urban, others in unspoilt greenery, some trace riverbanks, others take in breathtaking viewpoints and ancient archaeological sites. Many similar walking collections attempt the same goal but fail by forgetting that terrain is crucial, a steep gradient can be an insurmountable barrier or that a narrow bridge cannot be circumvented, but this selection has been filtered down and thoroughly scrutinised so that there are no unexpected obstacles.

Every route is different, but to qualify, walks must have level access, easy terrain and no barriers. As there’s no designated website for the collection, you’ll have to navigate to Walks on Wheels via the Cotswolds website: click on Visiting & Exploring, scroll down to Self-Guided Walks, filter by Wheelchair friendly and you’ll see the list of Walks on Wheels. There’s an excellent two-page download for each walk showing the nearest accessible parking, accessible toilet and café or food outlet, as well as an excellent map of the route with a clear description of the terrain. Being outside in nature also has proven benefits on a range of mental-health conditions, and for fresh air and blissful views, the Cotswolds is hard to beat.

FOOD & DRINK There are no specific refreshment stops as the walks generally take in open countryside, but the two-page download includes information on the nearest opportunities.

106 WWT Slimbridge, Gloucestershire

Address: Slimbridge GL2 7BT Web: www.wwt.org.uk/slimbridge Tel: 01453 891900 Hours: daily: Nov–
Mar 9.30am–5.00pm; Apr–Oct 9.30am–5.30pm; last entry one hour before closing Dates: closed 25 Dec

You may imagine that wetland centres are frequented solely by fanatical ornithologists brandishing binoculars and talking about obscure species. But the Wildfowl & Wetlands Trust (WWT) works hard to ensure its habitats are fun places for everyone to visit.

Situated beside the Severn Estuary, Slimbridge Wetland Centre is the jewel in the crown of the nine WWT locations in Britain. Visitors are free to roam in the same wetland area as many of the birds, and can get very close – feeding of some species is allowed, using bird food available on site. Other species, including flamingoes, are in outdoor open enclosures. The visitor centre holds excellent daily talks on amphibians, otters and cranes, and back outside, otters, water voles and harvest mice can be seen. Small children won’t be able to resist splashing around in the Welly Boot Land wet play area (there’s no water from Nov–Feb due to ice). The pond zone is also great for kids wanting to discover mini aquatic beasties. Canoes are available for hire (Apr–Oct) for a duck’s-eye-view of the reed beds.

There is a large car park, with plenty of Blue Badge spaces, next to the visitor centre and entrance. A long ramp leads up to the reception area, where you can get a map and advice on what to see. All the paths are tarmac, hard gravel or boardwalks, while routes around the different areas of the grounds vary from a quarter of a mile to a full mile. To take the whole centre in, you’ll need to travel around three miles in total. There are many accessible hides, including the Estuary Tower hide, which opened in November 2019 and is fully accessible to wheelchair users, with a lift to all levels. The Summer Walkways will also be fully accessible to wheelchair users by summer 2020. Despite this, some fairly steep ramps to other hides and some uneven boardwalks mean that unstable walkers or wheelchair users may want to bring a companion to assist at some points. The South Lake Discovery Hide is particularly tranquil and quiet, so good for those on the autism spectrum. Wheelchair users may also want to bring gloves, as lots of birds wandering freely around can cause a lot of mess on the paths (even though the site is cleaned daily) – plenty of hand sanitiser is provided throughout the site. You can book manual wheelchairs and powered scooters in advance. There are accessible toilets in the visitor centre and on the grounds. Assistance dogs are welcome, but proof of registration is required because of the wildlife on site.

FOOD & DRINK

The visitor centre has a spacious restaurant serving good-quality hot and cold food, including homemade bread and soup. It has movable tables and chairs and great views of the Caribbean flamingoes through huge windows.

107 Westonbirt, The National Arboretum, Gloucestershire

Address: Near Tetbury GL8 8QS  Web: www.forestry.gov.uk/westonbirt  Tel: 0300 0674890  Hours:
daily 9am–5pm; last admission 4.30pm  Dates: closed 25 Dec  Entry: Mar–Nov [D]£10 [C]free [A]£10 [5–18s]£4 [Con]£7; Dec–Feb [D]£7 [C]free [A]£7 [5–18s]£3 [Con]£7; prices vary for special events

Westonbirt, The National Arboretum, is one of the most magical and inspiring tree gardens in the world. Cared for by Forestry England, it’s a unique collection of 15,000 specimen trees from around the globe. Today, Westonbirt is known as a hotspot for the very best in autumn colour, though the flowering trees are magnificent in spring, as are the sculptural and bright-stemmed specimens in winter.
Westonbirt’s collection of trees, plants and shrubs is vast, and worth visiting in any season. Two different areas comprise the site’s six hundred acres: the Old Arboretum is fairly level and has a family play trail, while the larger Silk Wood has some steeper slopes (especially near the entrance) but also benches to rest on. There are seventeen miles of paths throughout the Arboretum and dozens of leafy glades with levels of accessibility to suit visitors on foot, in mobility scooters or with pushchairs. Wheelchair users, however, may find some of the bark trails off the beaten track hard to navigate, particularly after rainfall. A three hundred-yard-long STIHL Treetop Walkway, accessible for walkers, wheelchairs and powered scooters, rises above the leaf canopy to a height of forty feet along a gentle incline, allowing visitors to look down over the trees.

Powered scooters allow visitors with limited mobility to freely explore the whole of Westonbirt, and using one is recommended – the visitor centre has several available to borrow (no charge), but you are advised to call ahead to book one, especially in October and November. You can get advice on the best trail to choose from the friendly team of staff and volunteers, who will help you get the most out of your visit. There is also a handy map available on arrival. Check the website for events that take place throughout the year, including the popular Christmas illuminations.

The Arboretum can get busy, particularly in autumn, so if you visit on a weekend or a sunny day and want the most convenient parking, arrive as early as possible. Westonbirt has a Welcome Building with a car park offering 21 accessible parking bays to visitors.

FOOD & DRINK

Westonbirt Restaurant offers tasty hot and cold food in pleasant, relaxed surroundings (daily 9am–4.30pm). The Westonbirt Café serves takeaway tea, coffee and hot and cold snacks (seasonal opening 9am–4pm). Outdoor seating is available.

108 Lake District Scenic Drive

Driving distance: 47 miles  Approx driving time without stops: 1 hour 35 minutes

This stunning drive takes you through some of the finest scenery in Britain, with several tempting opportunities to get out and do a bit of fell walking along the way.

Starting at Cockermouth, a handsome market town on the northwestern edge of the Lake District, head south down the B5292. Three and a half miles down the road, a side road (the B5289) branches west to Loweswater, where a mile-long, fully accessible path leads from Maggie’s Bridge car park down to the lakeshore – the views from here across to the undulating slopes of Fellbarrow are lovely, and visitors with good mobility can continue through the lakeside woods. Back on the main route, continue south to the pretty village of Buttermere, where another smooth, accessible footpath awaits you, this one leading from the village car park to tranquil Lake Buttermere in just under a mile.

As you head south from Buttermere, the scenery gets wilder and more dramatic at every turn, particularly as you drive over the 1167-foot-high Honister Pass, hemmed in by steep, craggy hillsides. Once over the pass the road loops north through the Borrowdale Valley, treating you to classic Lakeland vistas in all directions. Beyond, you’ll skirt pretty Derwentwater before arriving at Keswick, a busy town with many facilities and great views of Skiddaw. The next stage of the drive takes you south of Keswick down the A591, passing the flanks of Helvellyn, the Lake District’s third-highest peak at 3117 feet.
Soon you’ll come to Grasmere, a picturesque village that from 1799 to 1808 was home to William Wordsworth. His house, Dove Cottage, is open to visitors but is not wheelchair accessible, though the adjacent Wordsworth Museum (01539 435544, www.wordsworth.org.uk) – stacked with books, manuscripts and paintings – is served by ramps and lifts.

South of Grasmere you’ll pass the turning to another of Wordsworth’s homes, Rydal Mount (partially accessible; contact 01539 433002), before reaching Ambleside, a busy little town that makes a good lunch stop, with plenty of Blue Badge parking options. Alternatively, stay in your car for some dazzling views over Lake Windermere, just out of town. A couple of miles south of Ambleside, the Brockhole on Windermere visitor centre (www.brockhole.co.uk), with its wonderful gardens, accessible footpaths and superb location on the shore of Lake Windermere, makes a good place to end your drive – see next page for more details.

FOOD & DRINK In Ambleside, you’ll find delicious pizzas at Zeffirellis, on Compton Road (015394 33845, www.zeffirellis.com), and a great vegetarian menu at nearby Fellinis (015394 32487, www.fellinisambleside.com), on Church Street; both venues are fully accessible. The Lakeside Café at the Brockhole Visitor Centre is another choice spot for lunch.

Address: Lakeside, Keswick CA12 5DJ  Web: www.theatrebythelake.com  Tel: 01768 774411  Hours: Box office Mon–Sat 9.30am–7.30pm; on non-performance days, it closes at 6pm (some parts of building close at 5pm)  Dates: closed 25 Dec & 1 Jan  Entry: ticket prices vary depending on seat and production [C]free

It may not be what you’d expect to find on the banks of Derwentwater, but Theatre by the Lake – a registered charity funded by Arts Council England – has succeeded brilliantly in bringing the dramatic arts to a part of the country more commonly associated with bracing walks and cloud-shrouded landscapes.

You would be hard pressed to find a more beautiful setting, or such a relaxed atmosphere, at a theatre anywhere else in the country. The audience is made up of locals, people on holiday or a weekend break, plus a sprinkling of walkers still wearing their deerstalkers and brandishing sticks – not your usual metropolitan theatre crowd. Opened in 1999, and expanded since, the complex houses two stages: the large Main House which seats four hundred visitors, and the one-hundred-seater Studio. Each summer season the company produces a series of works, with an interlocking programme that enables visitors to see several different plays over the course of a long weekend. In addition, the theatre hosts a string of events, featuring literature, jazz and film.

Reaching the venue is easy: there’s a huge council car park next to the theatre with a dozen or so accessible parking bays just outside the entrance, and a wheelchair is available to help with transfer inside. If organised in advance, auditorium seating can be removed to create wheelchair spaces. The access facilities are generally excellent, with lifts and accessible toilets on each floor. Pre-performance touch tours and familiarisation tours for those on the autism spectrum can be booked, infra-red handsets for the hearing impaired can be borrowed from reception, and captioned and audio-described performances are scheduled for certain shows; see website for details.
Assistance dogs are welcome in all areas of the building, and audio and large-print versions of the programme can be requested. Relaxed performances are held with chill-out spaces, and many of the front-of-house staff and volunteers are Dementia Friends.

FOOD & DRINK You can have breakfast, lunch, afternoon tea or a full pre-theatre meal in the accessible lakeside café which offers stunning views across the lake to Catbells.

110 Brockhole on Windermere, Cumbria

Address: Windermere LA23 1LJ
Web: www.brockhole.co.uk
Tel: 01539 446601
Hours: daily: information centre, café, indoor play, garden, grounds, playground & shop 10am–5pm; Gaddum Restaurant & lakeshore activities 11am–4pm
Dates: closed 25 Dec
Entry: free; car parking £2 first hour; 40p per 20 mins thereafter; maximum £8

With a stunning location on the shore of Windermere, Brockhole, the Lake District Visitor Centre, offers up historic buildings, mature gardens, woodland walks and breathtaking waterside views.

The handsome Victorian residence hosts the Gaddum Gallery, The Story of the Lake District Exhibition, a soft-play area, the Gaddum Restaurant, a café and a gift shop. Outside, thirty acres of beautiful gardens spread out along the shore of Lake Windermere, offering stunning views towards the distant Langdale Pikes. Paths snake between... lovingly tended flowerbeds, shrubs, borders, magnolias and rhododendrons, taking in a wildflower meadow and a tract of woodland (look out for deer, foxes and badgers). Activities include archery, laser clay shooting, an adventure playground, Tree Top Trek, Crazibugz (a children’s off-road driving experience) and mini golf. There’s also a boating centre down by the lakeshore.

Blue Badge holders can use the small car park right next to the visitor centre. In addition, there are several accessible parking bays down in the main car park from where it’s a fairly steep hundred-yard walk on a smooth tarmac surface up to the entrance. Alternatively, you can pre-book the “Brockmobile” electric bus that ferries less mobile visitors between the car park, visitor centre, grounds and lakeshore jetty. The house is perfectly accessible, and there are well-appointed accessible toilets next to the visitor centre and in the main car park. The paths around the gardens and down to the lake have a hard-packed surface, manageable in a wheelchair, though there are some steep gradients where you may need help; a few paths have steps, which you can easily avoid. There’s a comprehensive map of the grounds and visitor centre on the website to help you plan your trip. The adventure playground has a swing suitable for children with limited mobility.

FOOD & DRINK

The very reasonably priced café and restaurant are fully accessible, and there is a delightful outdoor terrace with terrific views.

Ravenglass is the only coastal village in the Lake District – a wonderfully quiet spot, where mountain scenery gives way to coastline, a world away from the tourist hotspots of Bowness and Ambleside. Following the undemanding Walls Drive Trail takes you through magnificent Cumbrian countryside, culminating at some significant Roman remains. Ravenglass car park is large and has accessible toilets – it’s an excellent base to set off from and is clearly signposted on the only road that leads into the village. The beginning of the walk skirts the station of the Ravenglass and Eskdale Steam Railway; when you leave the car park, head towards the railway bridge, and then follow signs to the Roman Bath House. The path slopes slightly from the car park but quickly becomes level and is compactly surfaced along the entire scenic trail. After around thirty minutes of smooth progress, you reach the ruins of Glannoventa – a huge Roman fort, perhaps once one in a string of defences built along the northwest coast. Much has been destroyed and, apart from earthworks, all that now remains is the Bath House, one of the largest existing Roman structures in England. It’s possible to get inside and look around – the level grass surface is firm if a little muddy following heavy rain, and there is an information panel and a bench to rest on nearby. A map for this “Miles without Stiles” route is available at https://www.lakedistrict.gov.uk/visiting/things-to-do/walking/mileswithoutstiles/mws20.

From Ravenglass to the Bath House and back is little more than a mile. The village is small and accessible, with smooth, level roads and pavements throughout – its huge natural harbour is well worth a look when you return. If you’d like to see more of the area, the steam railway winds seven scenic miles inland past craggy Muncaster Fell, with views of the Scafell range and through the Eskdale Valley. The locomotives in service have carriages with wheelchair spaces (which must be booked) and ramped access on and off the train. Many of the charming stations en route have level access, but not all are staffed. The line ends at Dalegarth Station near Boot, which has a visitor centre and museum documenting the 140-year history of the railway. The full return journey takes one hour and forty minutes. Ravenglass Station has accessible parking, close to the platforms; for comprehensive access details and station maps, check www.ravenglass-railway.co.uk/plan-visit/accessibility.

FOOD & DRINK  The Turntable café at Ravenglass Station is fully accessible, as is the Fellbites café at Dalegarth.

Diggerland Yorkshire (Castleford WF10 5NW; www.diggerland.com) Packed with giant diggers, earth movers and dumper trucks, this novel adventure park (one of five nationwide) makes for a great family day out. Although none of the machines are adapted for disabled use, most have power-assisted hand controls that don’t require great strength to operate; you just need sufficient mobility to get on them.

SNO!zone @ Xscape Milton Keynes (Buckinghamshire MK9 3XS; www.snozoneuk.com; www.disabilitysnowsport.org.uk) Disability Snowsport run lessons at the SNO!zone centre (and at other locations around the country), where sit-skis, hand-held outriggers, tethers and other specialist equipment give people with a wide range of disabilities the opportunity to get out on the snow. is criss-crossed by a network of eight waymarked paths and five cycle trails, varying in accessibility; collect advice, information, maps and guides from the helpful rangers in the centre, before you set off to explore. Each path is unique, but many boast incredible views: Carron Crag – the highest point in the forest – overlooks The Old Man of Coniston and the Grizedale Valley (although this viewpoint is only accessible via a steep, rocky path). The trails are dotted with eclectic sculptures – there are more than fifty to discover in the forest, and their locations are marked on a map available from the centre. The all-ability Ridding Wood trail – a tarmac, almost level, mile-long loop – leads through oak woodland. The Millwood trail passes some of the oldest trees in the forest, covering about a mile on natural surfaces, impassable for wheelchair users, but suitable for cross-country terrain powered scooters. E-bikes are available to hire from the on-site bicycle shop. The extensive play area is superb, with cleverly constructed ramped entry at the top and bottom, and to many of the bits of recreation equipment. Weather conditions can change rapidly in this area of the country – remember to wear plenty of layers and suitable footwear. There is a hoist in the accessible toilet.

FOOD & DRINK

The excellent Grizedale Café, located by the visitor centre, is fully accessible. It uses local produce that is beautifully prepared, and the treetop views through the huge picture windows are brilliant.

Hours: open daily 10am; closing varies seasonally and for events, check website for details
Dates: closed 25 Dec; varies for venues & events
Entry: prices vary seasonally and by attraction; online discounts available, including multi-attraction pass with Madame Tussauds and Sea Life Centre

The Blackpool Tower and its ancillary attractions are the epitome of the British day at the seaside. Somehow, the tower seems to have survived its kitsch reputation and stood the test of time to retain its own iconic appeal.

Whatever the weather, there’s plenty to see. The tower boasts much more than a trip to the top, although the 380-foot-high, glass Skywalk can still take your breath away. The comfortable lift takes you over four hundred feet up, where you can see straight down to the ground and as far afield as Wales and the Lake District. Kids in particular will love the 4D cinema with its sun, wind and rain effects. You can also enjoy the excitement of the traditional circus and the truly magnificent Victorian splendour of the The Blackpool Tower Ballroom, where you can eat high tea while the dancing takes place. Alternatively, you can take the kids on a laugh-out-loud tour of the superb Dungeon (over 8s only), with its excellent live shows and drop ride, or tire them out in Jungle Jim’s Indoor Play Area.

The tower has no dedicated parking of its own. There are plenty of spaces only two minutes away, in outdoor and multi-storey car parks; both have Blue Badge parking, but expect them to be very busy. If you would rather use public transport, note that the railway station is a ten-minute walk away, although bus and coach stations are closer. All of the trams (except the Heritage Trams) now have level boarding and step-free interi-ors, plus visual and audible announcements of stops. The tower has lifts to every level with many accessible toilets, and all the attractions are accessible, except the ballroom balcony. Book ahead for both the circus and Dungeon – accessible seating is limited in the circus, and parts of the Dungeon only have space for one wheelchair at a time. Wheelchair users are advised to visit with a helper. A BSL interpreter can be arranged in advance for events, while Quiet Hour sessions have been specifically developed for guests on the autism spectrum.

FOOD & DRINK You don’t need to leave the tower to eat, as there’s an on-site Harry Ramsden’s for fish and chips.

114 Sandcastle Waterpark, Blackpool

Address: South Beach, Blackpool FY4 1BB
Web: www.sandcastle-waterpark.co.uk
Tel: 01253 343602; Access Hotline 01253 340721
Hours: opening hours and days vary through the year; check website for full details
Dates: closed 25–26 Dec & 1 Jan

On Blackpool’s seafront, Sandcastle Waterpark is the UK’s largest indoor waterpark, with eighteen waterslides, pools and a wave-machine in an 84-degree tropical climate. This award-winning, accessible attraction appeals to fun-loving thrill-seekers with its exciting waterchutes in the fantastic Hyperzone, while the Sea Breeze Spa (adults only) is a relaxing oasis where you can feel refreshed and re-energised, or simply unwind.
The waterpark is committed to accessibility for all visitors, and its website has detailed information on its facilities for those with mobility, hearing or visual impairment, plus an excellent guide telling those on the autism spectrum what to expect. Lifts provide access to all floors, with level or ramped access to all other areas of the waterpark (except the foot spas), though the walkway to the seating area and drinking water machine is quite narrow. There are accessible changing rooms and toilets, as well as four adjustable accessible woggles (a type of long float), a movable changing bench and three accessible wheelchairs. Water ambassadors with accessibility and autism-awareness training can help guests into the pools and around the facilities. Those with access needs can request support before arrival on the Access Hotline or via the AssistMi app. The waterpark operates Quiet Starts for the first hour of each day and Relaxed Evenings, when background music, tannoy announcements and general noise levels are reduced (check website for details of these). Familiarisation visits for guests on the autism spectrum can be arranged in advance on the Access Hotline. Water-safe ear defenders can be used on all the slides except Montazooma and Duelling Dragons, and staff in the first-aid room can provide access to an autism-friendly quiet room if needed. Guests who find queuing difficult can ask a member of staff and bypass the bottom queue on Aztec Falls, Master Blaster, Montazooma and Sidewinder slides. There are Braille signs throughout the waterpark and large-print menus in all the catering outlets. Guide dogs are welcome and will be looked after by staff during your visit. There are hearing loops at the reception desk and at all catering outlets. The car park has accessible parking spaces less than fifty yards from the main entrance, with level access via a gently sloping path, and a drop-off zone directly outside the entrance. During busy periods there can be long queues in the reception area, where there are also lots of signs, colours, textures, sounds and smells; staff will try to fast-track people on the autism spectrum through the arrival queue.

FOOD & DRINK

The Bongo-Bongo Burger Shack, Snack Shack and Waterfalls Café serve hot and cold food including gluten-free, lactose-free, vegetarian and Halal options.

115 Brockholes Nature Reserve, Lancashire

Hours: daily Apr–Oct 10am–5pm; Nov–Mar 10am–4pm
Dates: closed 24–25 Dec
Entry: free; parking £5 a day; coaches free

Brockholes’ slogan announces “Nature just got closer” – and, at just a stone’s throw from junction 31 of the M6, this nature reserve certainly offers easy access. The reserve is composed of an appealing mix of grassland, reedbeds, ancient woodland and several lakes, the largest of which sports Brockholes’ extraordinary centrepiece: the floating Visitor Village, where you’ll find a visitor centre, shop, restaurant and other facilities.

The wide range of habitats at the site provide a home for numerous birds, bats, mammals and insects, which you can investigate from three trails. Two of them are wheelchair accessible: the Gravel Pit Trail, which you can do in half an hour, and the longer Reserve Trail, which covers a much larger area in about two hours, via a couple of accessible bird hides. Guided walks are also offered, which are a great way to make the most of a visit. The ingeniously designed floating village really makes you feel like you’re on the lake, rather than near it, and is a fabulous spot to sit down and take it all in. The car park has plenty of Blue Badge spaces on firm, level tarmac. From here, there is a tarmac path down to the Visitor Village. All areas of the “village” are totally accessible, with low counters and exhibits, interpretation boards, tactile features, large-print displays, hearing loops and an accessible toilet. Elsewhere, the trails through the reserve vary in surface type; the two accessible trails should be straightforward in a wheelchair, though they can get very muddy during wet weather. An access guide – available in the visitor centre and on the website – gives detailed information on path gradients, kissing gates (which can be bypassed, if necessary) and the location of hides and steps.

FOOD & DRINK  The bright, spacious Kestrel Kitchen in the Visitor Village offers fresh, locally sourced (and reasonably priced) food, low-level serving counters and lovely views across the lake.

116 Southport Pier, Merseyside

Address: Southport, Merseyside PR8 1QX Web: www.visitsouthport.com Tel: Tourist Information Centre 01704 533333 Hours: daily 11am–5pm; bank hols & school summer hols 10am–6pm Dates: closed 25 Dec & during Southport Air Show Entry: pier free; road train £2 return (£1.50 child)

A classic seaside resort, Southport is the proud possessor of the country’s second-oldest, second-longest pier, as well as a 22-mile stretch of beautiful coastline and a beachside town centre featuring some handsome Victorian architecture.
The main event here is the great iron pier, built in 1860 and extending two-thirds of a mile out to sea – or at least towards the sea, which in low tide it falls well short of. Indeed, a peculiarity of the pier is that it crosses an ornamental lake, a miniature railway and a road before it even gets to the beach. Those who journey its length – whether walking, wheeling or on the road train that once took steamer passengers out to meet their boats – can enjoy traditional seaside treats such as fish and chips, ice cream and candy floss, and play on the antique penny arcade machines (using authentic old pennies) in the new pavilion at the pier head. The pavilion also houses a new interactive display and exhibition on the local wildlife and coastline. Back on land, why not take a trip on the boating lake or miniature railway, or explore the nearby sand dunes? Time your visit right and you can also take in the Southport Flower Show (late August), though the pier is closed during the celebrated Southport Air Show (September). The pier is also closed on Christmas Day, but a Boxing Day stroll along its length is something of a tradition for many local families. At the entrance to the pier is Silcock’s Funland, a family amusement centre, with video games and amusements and, just around the corner, New Pleasureland has traditional fairground rides including dodgems, waltzers and rollercoasters.

There’s plenty of generously spaced parking on Marine Parade, much of it very close to the pier. If you feel daunted at the prospect of tackling the full length of the pier under your own steam, take advantage of the road train that travels its length every half-hour, with space for wheelchairs and powered scooters. Alternatively, there’s ramped access halfway along the pier from the car park below. Once you’re up there, you’ll find plenty of rest seats and a smooth, level surface that’s perfect for wheelchairs – though bear in mind that you’re very exposed to the elements, so wrap up warm against the wind.

FOOD & DRINK There’s a decent café and bar in the pavilion at the end of the pier, which both offer superb views over the sea. Besides this, there’s a traditional fish and chip restaurant at the pier’s entrance, and any number of seaside snack bars and restaurants along Southport’s promenade.
117 iFLY Indoor Skydiving, Manchester

Address: 9 Trafford Way, Trafford Park, Manchester M41 7JA Web: www.iflyworld.co.uk Tel: 0845 3316549 Hours: reception: daily 9am–9pm; flying: Mon–Fri 10am–10pm, from 9am during school hols; Sat, Sun & bank hols 7am–11pm; check website for peak times Dates: closed 25 Dec Entry: from £29.99

Experience the thrill of “human flight” in a vertical wind tunnel at this extraordinary indoor skydiving venue, suitable for people of all abilities, including those with limited mobility.

The activity takes place in a flight chamber, where a column of air (with wind speeds of over 120mph) suspends you, allowing you to experience the sensation of freefall in a totally safe environment. You’ll begin your flight session with twenty minutes in the classroom, where you’ll meet your instructor, watch an instructional DVD (with subtitles for those with hearing impairments), get briefed and kitted out in your flying suit in the changing rooms (a variety of flight-suit sizes allow for maximum comfort). From here, you’ll enter the wind tunnel area. When your turn comes, you simply lean into the wind towards your instructor and take flight. The instructor is with you every step of the way, providing support and encouragement, to help you experience the full thrill and master all the basic moves. After the flight, photos and videos captured by the in-tunnel camera are available (for a fee), and you also get a certificate.
iFLY welcomes visitors with limited mobility, and staff are experienced at dealing with people of all abilities; it is recommended, however, that visitors with specific requirements contact the centre in advance. It is also a good idea if you can book your session on a weekday, so that extra time and attention can be allocated. All iFLY venues offer Blue Badge parking. The building is fully accessible – the floorplan was specifically designed to be free of obstruction. Accessible facilities are on the ground floor, with lift access directly to the wind tunnel. Wheelchairs can be fully manoeuvred right up to the flight chamber entrance. Note that a carer is permitted to enter the flying zone with you (free of charge), though not the flight chamber itself – but the instructor will be with you in the chamber at all times.

FOOD & DRINK

The café-bar is open all week serving drinks, snacks and fresh Italian food. Next door, the accessible Chill Factore indoor skiing venue houses several restaurant chains.

118 Science and Industry Museum, Manchester

Address: Liverpool Road, Castlefield M3 4FP  Web: www.scienceandindustrymuseum.org.uk  Tel: 0161 8322244  Hours: daily 10am–5pm  Dates: closed 1 Jan & 24–26 Dec  Entry: free; donations welcome; charges apply for some exhibitions and activities

Filling five enormous listed buildings – including the world's oldest surviving passenger railway station – the Science and Industry Museum brings Manchester's industrial and scientific heritage to life with a vast collection of eclectic and compelling exhibits.

The early days of the industrial era in the north of England are vividly evoked by the ear-splitting cotton machinery demonstrations, where you can watch cotton being processed and find out about the working conditions of the thousands of adults and children who worked in the region's mills. Special events here have included exhibitions about robots and graphene, plus displays of iconic objects like Tim Peake's spacecraft and Stephenson's rocket. The museum also produces Manchester Science Festival, with lots of science events on site and across the rest of Greater Manchester; check the website for details of future exhibitions and events.

The museum is accessed by a smooth path, and the main entrance can then be accessed by lift. Despite being spread over five nineteenth-century buildings, almost the whole site is wheelchair accessible, with smooth-surfaced paths connecting the different buildings, allowing you to avoid the Victorian cobbles. Wheelchairs can be borrowed and the staff are very willing to help. All multi-level buildings are served by lifts, and most buildings have accessible toilets. Those on the autism spectrum can view the guide at www.scienceandindustrymuseum.org.uk/visit/facilities-and-accessibility to familiarise themselves with the museum before their visit.

FOOD & DRINK

The museum’s stylish ground-floor coffee shop serves drinks, snacks and cakes in a spacious, contemporary dining room, while the licensed first-floor bistro offers a full menu featuring hot and cold meals and snacks, as well as several children's options. In addition, there are plenty of excellent restaurants nearby, including many in the picturesque canal basin.
The university’s Whitworth Gallery succeeds in making great art accessible to all, regardless of age or ability. The building reopened in 2015 after a £15-million renovation project to double and extend its public space into the surrounding Whitworth Park, and the huge refurbishment has paid off, giving access to every room on every floor.

This is a gallery created for the twenty-first century. Yes, there are exhibitions of eminent art, magnificent sculptures and sumptuous textiles (the widest range outside London’s V&A), but they are displayed with great imagination – as you walk around the exhibits you are fed snippets of fascinating detail. The glass walls and walkways of the award-winning gallery space blend seamlessly with the park, and sculptures by the likes of Emily Young, Nathan Coley and Dorothy Cross have augmented the already spectacular collection that includes work by Epstein, Hepworth and Moore. Tours run daily and can be organised in advance to suit your particular interests, while children of all ages can participate in craft clubs or play days inside and out.

There’s no parking on site, but there are free, timeless Blue Badge bays on the roads bordering the park near the entrances. The surrounding terrain is level and, set in open parkland, the museum feels calm and relaxed. The main entrance is approached via shallow steps or slopes, and doors are wide and electronically operated. Inside, the galleries are spacious and well connected (including railed ramps where necessary), with lift access to every floor. There’s plenty of natural light, but some spaces are darker for conservation reasons. Signage is excellent throughout. Staff are trained in a range of accessibility issues and are extremely helpful, as is the website, with a lot of attention given to matters relating to mental health and autism. Audio description accompanies many exhibits and there are autism-friendly art groups, ear defenders to borrow, quiet rooms and quiet hours. Several accessible toilets are dotted around, all fitted to a high standard with wide doors and all the necessary equipment you’d expect.

FOOD & DRINK

Everything is cooked on site at the museum’s café and restaurant. Menus change regularly, prices are reasonable and everything is served in a bright, airy, spacious environment.

Hours: Mon–Wed 10am–midnight, Thur 10am–1.30am, Fri & Sat 10am–2am, Sun 10am–midnight
Dates: Closed Dec
Entry: entrance fees for everyone are Mon–Wed free (£2.50 charge 15 July–9 Sept due to live stages); Thu free until 8pm, then £4; Fri & Sat free before noon, then £2.50 til 8pm, then £5; Sun noon–8am £2.50, then £4. There’s a £1 discount if you book online. Bands playing at the weekend in the Cavern Lounge may cost more; check website for details.
The most famous club in the world, which oversaw the birth of Mersey Beat in the early 1960s, remains a vibrant centre for live music more than sixty years after it first opened. You can see the original stage where the Beatles, Cilla and other household names first played, and listen to new groups trying to emulate their success.

Crowds arrive from around the world to pay homage at this shrine to popular music – on a typical day you’ll rub shoulders with locals, Japanese coach parties and assorted Americans, all keen to soak up the atmosphere, have a drink and take in the vibe. Despite first hitting the headlines more than half a century ago, this iconic club attracts a clientele aged from 15–75 as it showcases the next wave of young talent. New live bands play daily in the Cavern Club, with more established groups playing weekly in the adjoining Cavern Lounge. The whole area is full of memorabilia, much of it for sale. Tourist coach trips leave daily from the club on a Magical Mystery Tour around Liverpool.

As the club is on a pedestrianised street, there is no drop-off at the door, but nearby are multi-storey car parks and lots of on-street designated Blue Badge bays. The club entrance is downstairs, so either ring ahead to be met or send a companion down to the reception: helpful staff will escort you around the block to a neighbouring building, where there is lift access to the Club and Lounge – it's a bit of a trek but all step-free. The only accessible toilet in the club is en route from the access lift. Once inside, there is a solid level floor throughout with no steps, though a steep ramp leads up to the bar in the Lounge. There are many accessible tables, where you can sit and enjoy a drink, and lighting is subdued but even throughout. Noise levels are generally high, with music at all times, and as the venue is small it always appears crowded. The pub is the third part of the Cavern Experience; while the adjoining Club and Lounge are fully accessible, the Pub (which also has lots of memorabilia) is downstairs across the road, and has no lift so no wheelchair or scooter access.

FOOD & DRINK

There is a fully equipped bar in the Club and the Cavern Pub sells food. The Cavern also owns the Festival Food and Drink restaurant (www.festivalfoodanddrink.com) and there are myriad eating options in the Albert Dock area (see below).

Originally redeveloped in the 1980s, the Albert Dock has become a major tourist attraction. The complex sits on the banks of the River Mersey, with views, walks, grassy areas to play and picnic on, and a clutch of outstanding museums.

The Merseyside Maritime Museum and International Slavery Museum (both www.liverpoolmuseums.org.uk) are magnificent, with several floors of superb exhibits and installations in a converted dockside warehouse – they place Liverpool at the centre of the world’s trading history and bring alive the great historical status of the port. Tate Liverpool (www.tate.org.uk/liverpool) is a nationally important gallery of modern and contemporary art, which draws visitors from around the world. And of course you can’t visit Liverpool without paying homage to the Beatles. The Beatles Story (www.beatlesstory.com) has plenty to offer visitors young and old – educational exhibits on the Fab Four’s life, times and legacy and a 4D multi-sensory cinema to experience their music. Finally, a few hundred yards north of the dock (and connected by a riverside walkway), the fully accessible Museum of Liverpool (also www.liverpoolmuseums.org.uk) tells the city’s story with three floors of compelling, hands-on exhibits, housed in a spectacular building.

Parking is not a problem, with designated outdoor spaces. The venues have staff who try very hard to accommodate the needs of all visitors. The three museums are very accessible with plenty of lifts, accessible toilets and audio descriptions, while great care has been taken with signage and information; the International Slavery Museum also works with Autism Together. Tate Liverpool has similar facilities, plus wheelchairs, BSL-interpreted events and quiet hours, ear defenders and many more services catering to a wide variety of needs (the access pages of the website are very useful). The Beatles Story has lift access (though height restrictions apply) and portable ramps – the basement venue looks a little awkward at first, but it’s a surprisingly comfortable and accessible place to visit. Outside, there are a few challenges, including the occasional slight gradient, flagstones and cobbled surfaces, but the whole area is criss-crossed with hard paths, making all areas accessible.
FOOD & DRINK The choice of places to eat reflects the international history of the port, from The Smuggler’s Cove (0151 7036555, www.thesmugglerscove.uk.com) to modern regional food at the Maritime Dining Room in Merseyside Maritime Museum (0151 4784056), and a traditional pub at The Pumphouse (0151 7092367). More recent openings in the area that have wheelchair access (including accessible toilets) are the Middle Eastern-inspired Maray (www.maray.co.uk); the authentic Rosa’s Thai Café (www.rosasthaicafe.com); and the family-run Peaberry Coffee House & Kitchen (www.peaberrycoffeehouse.co.uk).

Built in 1875 to haul cargo boats from the River Weaver up to the much higher Trent and Mersey Canal, the 72-foot-high Anderton Boat Lift is a remarkable feat of Victorian engineering. Following a multi-million-pound restoration project, visitors can marvel at the machinery, take a ride through the lift and continue on a river trip through the beautiful Cheshire countryside, or simply take in the view from the coffee shop.

The main entrance is in the modern, fully accessible visitor centre, where an interactive exhibition on the lift’s workings and history has plenty to captivate both adults and children. Once you’ve learned all about it, head over to the real thing for a fifty-foot vertical ride through the lift itself inside a glass-roofed boat, the Edwin Clark. If you want more than the thirty-minute-long lift trip, the lift and river trip offers visitors 45 minutes more of leisurely cruising down the River Weaver to Northwich and back. You can also explore the site’s other attractions, including a children’s adventure play area designed to look like the lift itself, with some activities suitable for wheelchair users. There is a nature park too, home to a dragonfly pond and stunning wildflower displays in late spring and early summer. From here, paths strike out through the picturesque Northwich Woodlands (www.northwichwoodlands.org.uk) along the riverside, the canal and north to Marbury Country Park, whose magnificent arboretum and avenues of limes recall its days as a grand country estate.

Blue Badge holders will find five free, dedicated spaces in the site’s large, level car park, close to the two-level visitor centre, which is accessed via a slope and has a lift inside. The audio-visual presentation has an induction loop, and the interpretation boards are designed with different sizes of lettering. The Edwin Clark takes two wheelchairs, with a hydraulic lift to transport them into the boat. There is one step into the boat, with handrails either side. The paths into the nature park and Northwich Woodlands are mostly level and hard-surfaced, allowing for easy progress, while clear maps make route-planning straightforward. A Braille map of the site is available from the reception desk. The website has a dedicated access page that is worth checking for further details of access throughout the attraction.
The family-friendly café in the visitor centre makes a convenient lunch stop, and there are some lovely picnic spots (with accessible tables) around the site and in the neighbouring woodlands. Nearby alternatives include the Moorings Restaurant (01606 79789), which you pass en route to the car park, and the excellent Stanley Arms pub (01606 77661), overlooking the boat lift.

123 Chester, Cheshire

The ancient city of Chester (www.visitchester.com) was founded by the Romans in 79 AD, on the banks of the River Dee. Today, you’ll find a spread of beautiful old buildings and historic sights, combined with a thriving city centre packed with bustling shops.

Chester is the only city in England to retain the full circuit of its defensive walls, which offer panoramic views from the footpath along the top. Two sections of the walls have ramped, step-free access – one next to the cathedral, and the other in Lower Bridge Street. The cathedral itself (01244 324756, www.chestercathedral.com) is a must-see; wheelchair accessibility is good to almost all parts of the building. Inside, treasures include some outstanding medieval woodcarvings in the quire, an image of the Virgin and Child painted on the web of a caterpillar and the UK’s only surviving ecclesiastic court of law.

Also unique to Chester are the town’s four “Rows” – streets lined with two-storey half-timbered buildings, with raised, covered walkways running alongside the upper storey of each Row. They were originally constructed in medieval times, but most of the Tudor-style buildings you see today were rebuilt in the nineteenth century. All the Rows are wheelchair accessible (via ramps on Pierpoint Lane and Goss Street, or level access from Grosvenor Shopping Centre or Godstall Lane). Other diversions include the Chester Racecourse (01244 304600, www.chester-races.co.uk), at the southern end of the city centre, and Chester Zoo (01244 380280, www.chesterzoo.org), about four miles north of the centre, which boasts seven thousand animals and good access facilities, including a fully accessible monorail around the site.

Before you come here, it’s well worth getting hold of the excellent Chester City Centre Access Guide, produced by the city council; you can order a copy by phone (0300 1238123). If you don’t manage to obtain it in advance, pick up a copy at the tourist information centre in the Town Hall on Northgate Street. The guide gives comprehensive details on Blue Badge parking, wheelchair-accessible toilets, step-free access points to the Rows and Shopmobility services. There’s also an accessible park-and-ride scheme (see council website, www.cheshirewestandchester.gov.uk for details) between the outskirts and the centre, and the train station is served by regular accessible buses to Frodsham Street, near the cathedral, as well as a taxi rank outside.

In 1996, the Duchess of Northumberland set up a trust to transform an area of derelict wasteland into a spectacular contemporary garden. The result is The Alnwick Garden. With its colourful Cherry Orchard, the meandering Bamboo Labyrinth and watery Serpent Garden, it feels like a fantasy land.

Water and light are used for theatrical effect at The Alnwick Garden: the huge central Grand Cascade is unlike any run-of-the-mill water features you may have seen elsewhere – its fountains and jets erupt on a spectacularly complex cycle, while visitors try to dodge them. Children are allowed to paddle in the Toricelli feature in the Serpent garden – be sure to bring them a change of clothing. The plants grown in the infamous Poison Garden require a special licence from the Home Office and can only be viewed on guided tours. But perhaps the most enchanting feature at The Alnwick Garden is the Treehouse, which is accessible, remarkably – in this huge cedar, pine and redwood building, trees grow through the floor and wooden walkways lead outdoors into the surrounding treetops, while a roaring log fire keeps everyone cosy.

It seems that considerations for visitors with access needs were at the forefront of the design plans. Disabled parking is close to all the main buildings and garden features, so you don’t have to trek for miles to get to the best bits and back again. The garden has smooth, solid surfaces, although it is large, with some slight gradients. Sixteen powerd scooters and wheelchairs are available for three-hour slots, free of charge (advance booking advised) – check out the scooter-use map available free at reception. At the time of writing, the charitable trust was raising funds to construct an all-ability adventure playground.

FOOD & DRINK The Treehouse restaurant is a fairly pricey but magical place to eat. If you’d prefer something lighter, try The Potting Shed located on the Treehouse decking or the Pavilion Café, which overlooks the Grand Cascade. All these venues are accessible.

125 Seven Stories: The National Centre for Children’s Books, Newcastle upon Tyne

Dates: closed Easter Sunday, 24–26 Dec & 1 Jan
Entry: [D]£6.60 [C]free [A]£7.70 [0–1s]free [1–3s]£2.50 [4–16s]£6.60 [Con]£6.60 [Fam]£23.10–£27.50; concession family ticket £18.70

This very special and unique museum brings books alive for children. Seven Stories uses every technique possible to provoke children’s imaginations and involve them in the wonder of books, reading and play. The lowest floor of this converted warehouse is home to the studio, where families can draw, paint, write and build together. There is a light and airy café on level one, where a gradual slope takes you to the well-designed reception area on level three, with a low counter, hearing loop and spaces to sit, plus a wonderful, colourful bookshop, with displays and activities in abundance. But the fun really starts on the next few floors, with innovative and multi-sensory exhibitions featuring original manuscripts and artwork straight from the Seven Stories archive; talks are regularly given by authors and illustrators, and the magical attic area is a space for storytelling and dressing-up.

There are Blue Badge parking bays on Lime Street and Stepney Bank, and there’s a car park behind the museum on Foundry Lane. Alternatively, the yellow Quaylink bus stops within a ten-minute walk of the centre, and Manors metro station is also a ten-minute walk away. Inside, the building is very accessible – it’s designed for children and with Disability Discrimination Act-compliancy in mind. There are low levels, wide passageways for pushchairs, bright colours and lots of contrast. There’s a large lift to all levels, and a fully accessible Changing Places toilet on level one. Early-bird opening (9–10am) is offered on the first Saturday of every month for visitors on the autism spectrum, and ear defenders and sensory backpacks full of tactile props and activities are available. Films in the galleries are always subtitled, there are quiet spaces around the building for respite and the friendly front-of-house staff are trained in Makaton. The venue also offers events and activities throughout the year designed for families with additional needs, including Sensory Stories and Sensory Adventures. A Social Story can be downloaded from the website in advance.
FOOD & DRINK

The fully accessible café serves child-friendly and healthy dishes named after famous children’s books. Head into Newcastle for something more sophisticated.

126 Sage Gateshead, Tyne and Wear

Address: St Mary’s Square, Gateshead Quays NE8 2JR  Web: www.sagegateshead.com  Tel: 0191 4434661  Hours: check website for details of daily opening times and occasional building closures  Dates: closed 25–26 Dec & for occasional special events  Entry: building entry free; ticket prices vary depending on performance & seat

Designed by Sir Norman Foster, the remarkable Sage Gateshead sits high above the River Tyne, like a great soap bubble of steel and glass. Built to be the northeast’s premier concert venue, it hosts music events from classical to rock, from brass to jazz and folk to soukous.

The now iconic outer shell houses three major spaces. Sage One is a 1700-seater, state-of-the-art concert hall with extraordinarily good acoustics, capable of showcasing the Royal Northern Sinfonia and a solo artist equally well. Sage Two is smaller and more experimental – a ten-sided space with many movable seats, where the stage can be reconfigured and even transformed into a dancefloor. The third venue, the Northern Rock Foundation Hall, is a rehearsal and participation space. Sage Gateshead is a wonderful place to attend a performance – its lively programme appeals to all age groups, and the atmosphere is always great.
There are a number of priority spaces for Blue Badge holders near the various entrances to the building, as well as in the venue car park. Accessible parking is free at all times, but you’ll need to visit the box office with your ticket and car-registration details. All the bays lead to simple, level access to the building. The whole structure is open and uncluttered, with the option of using steps or multiple lifts to the upper spaces. Whether it’s with toilet changing areas (plenty of accessible toilets on every level), loops, venue audibility, ease of movement from one point to another or low surfaces in retail areas, the building’s designers have clearly given access issues careful consideration. It’s a very welcoming space, too, with positive, well-informed staff. The venue has an Access Requirement Register for people with specific additional needs – the information you provide will help the team find the best seats for you; full information is available at www.sagegateshead.com/your-visit/access-information/access-requirement-register. A thoroughly comprehensive access guide is also available online or from the venue. Sage Gateshead’s ongoing commitment to inclusion and access has resulted in some impressive accolades in recent years: the venue was awarded Gold by Attitude is Everything on their Charter for Best Practice, and Gold for Inclusive Tourism at the North East England Tourism Awards in 2018. The only minor criticism is that the coordinated design results in some dark areas and occasionally poor colour contrast that won’t be helpful for visually impaired visitors.

FOOD & DRINK

Outside the auditoria, there's a very large public concourse that houses the Sir Michael Straker Café, a separate brasserie, several bars, chill-out areas and shops: sit down with a coffee or a beer and enjoy the brilliant view.

127 Beamish Museum, County Durham

Address: Beamish, County Durham DH9 0RG
Web: www.beamish.org.uk
Tel: 0191 3704000; bookings 0191 3704026
Hours: Apr–Oct daily 10am–5pm; Nov–Mar daily 10am–4pm; Jan to mid-Feb closed Fri & Mon
Dates: closed 25–26 Dec & 1 Jan

Beamish is a huge and utterly compelling open-air living history museum, transporting visitors back in time to experience what life was like in northeast England in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Painstaking recreations include an authentic nineteenth-century hall, 1940s farm, 1900s town and pit village (with more besides and a 1950s town in production), all spread over a three-hundred-acre site.

Beamish isn’t a museum where you look at items locked behind glass in a display cabinet; instead, visitors are encouraged to actively engage with their surroundings to find out more. In the 1900s town you can enjoy a pint of ale in The Sun Inn, go to the bank or peruse the shelves of the vintage sweetshop; in the pit village you can visit the schoolhouse to practise your sums on an abacus and write your name on slate. Discover what life was like on the home front at the 1940s farm, take a ride behind a steam locomotive, or hop on and off the museum’s fleet of beautifully restored working trams. The first buildings of the new 1950s town have already opened – the welfare and community hall showcases how families were supported and children were socialised in the mid-twentieth century. Friendly, talented staff (in costume) provide valuable insights into how life was lived in past decades.

Beamish takes accessibility very seriously, and all staff undergo disability-awareness training. There’s a designated car park for Blue Badge holders, close to the entrance, which has excellent access. The museum is spread over a wide area, but a fully accessible bus, with a wheelchair lift and space for four wheelchairs, is available to transport visitors around the site. Visitors with greater mobility can take advantage of the tramway and bus that serves the museum’s main points of interest, and there are also many spacious, accessible toilets dotted around. There is also a new RADAR-key Changing Places toilet situated in the 1950s welfare hall. Historical authenticity means that parts of each attraction are more accessible than others, and there are some uneven surfaces such as cobbles and steps. Bring a companion to help, ask the friendly staff for assistance where necessary and consult the accessibility guide. Carers are admitted for free but should bring a copy of PIP or DLA documentation.

FOOD & DRINK

There’s a good choice of food outlets, including Davy’s Fried Fish & Chip Shop in the 1900s pit village. Alternatively, bring your own picnic.

128 Killhope: The North of England Lead Mining Museum, County Durham

Address: Killhope, Near Cowsill, Upper Weardale, Co. Durham DL13 1AR
Web: www.killhope.org.uk
Tel: 01388 537505
Hours: daily Apr–Oct 10.30am–5pm; last mine trip at 3.30pm
Dates: closed Nov–Mar
Entry: [D] £6 [C] free [A] £9 [4–16s] £4.70 [Con] £6 [Fam] £25; annual tickets available
The first winner of The Guardian’s Family Friendly Museum award in 2004, this museum works very hard to give a true impression of the hardships endured by miners in a nineteenth-century lead mine. Thanks to the meticulous restoration of buildings and machinery used at the time – including the huge water wheels working above and below ground – it’s an authentic, educational and captivating experience, where children will be fascinated to discover how the miners and their families lived and worked. They can explore the mine shop, dress up as a washer boy, search for minerals like quartz among the silt, and even go down into the mine kitted-out with a hard hat, head lamp and Wellington boots (only for children over four). All of this is backed up with exhibitions and workshops, with helpful guides on hand with information and explanations. After the rigours and darkness of the mine, the woodland walk is a good place to spot red squirrels in the trees and frogs in the ponds. There are three accessible yurts on site if you want to stay the night – bring your own bedding and equipment.

Despite its location on a slope fifteen hundred feet up in the rugged splendour of the North Pennines, this is a surprisingly accessible site, without impacting on the integrity of the historical realism. There are Blue Badge parking spaces plus a drop-off point in front of the entrance, with level access from the car park to the main entrance, which has automated doors. Gravel paths connect the different sections of the attraction, which may be tricky for wheelchair users; the lower part of the site around the buildings is generally flat, though some areas of the site require stair-climbing. The trip into the mine may be awkward for some visitors: although access is level, the tunnel is narrow and the ground is rough and wet. The helpful staff will do all they can to make a journey underground possible, so contact them in advance to talk through practicalities. Those on the autism spectrum may prefer to visit at quieter times, which are early in the morning and early in the week. The weather in the area is changeable – so bring layers, waterproof clothing, sturdy footwear and a spare pair of socks.

FOOD & DRINK The café serves a welcome array of hot snacks, drinks and cakes. For a full meal with all the trimmings, try Nent Hall Country Hotel at nearby Alston.

129 Low Barns Nature Reserve, County Durham

Address: Witton-le-Wear, Bishop Auckland DL14 0AG
Web: www.durhamwt.co.uk
Hours: daily 9.30am–5pm; Nov–Mar 9.30am–4pm
Dates: closed 25 Dec
Entry: free; car park £2.50

Low Barns Nature Reserve is tucked away in a secluded location in West Durham. Based around old gravel workings in a meander of the River Wear, it affords easy access to many different types of habitat and wildlife – for such a small area there is incredible diversity here.

Visitors to the reserve will see many different birds, and (depending on the time of year) butterflies, dragonflies and wildflowers, too. Otters can sometimes be spotted by those enjoying the circular route around the reserve's lakes. Starting from the visitor centre, this walk is less than two miles long, but you can also add on an optional detour to one of the observation hides. There are four hides in all, giving you great views of Marston Lake, with its islands and marshes, and West Lake, with its reed beds and wet pasture grazed by Exmoor ponies. There is a rare alder wood, which is part of the reason that Low Barns is listed as a Site of Special Scientific Interest. There is also an observation tower, and a wonderful boardwalk that leads through the reed beds. In addition, bird-feeding stations attract a huge variety of birds – you should look out for brilliant kingfishers and, in summer, migrants such as pied flycatchers. Bitterns sometimes visit in winter.

This is an accessible site, with a surfaced car park and an accessible toilet. A powered mobility scooter can be booked free of charge (phone in advance). All the paths are level and firm, with few gradients, though there can be puddles in wet weather and there are some patches of loose chippings – powered scooters will have no trouble, but manual wheelchair users may need assistance. The paths that lead to the hides are inclined, but well surfaced, while the boardwalk is flat and wide. All the hides are spacious, with low windows. The only inaccessible feature is the observation tower.

FOOD & DRINK
The visitor centre has a very welcoming coffee shop, with large indoor and outdoor seating areas and a good range of hot and cold food available. Otherwise you’ll have no problem finding a lovely local pub in the nearby Witton, Crook and Bishop Auckland areas.

130 Middlesbrough Institute of Modern Art (MIMA), North Yorkshire

Address: Centre Square, Middlesbrough TS1 2AZ
Web: www.mima.art
Email: mima@tees.ac.uk
Tel: 01642 931232
Hours: gallery: Tues, Wed, Fri & Sat 10am–4.30pm, Thur 10am–7pm, Sun noon–4pm; kitchen: Tues–Fri 8.30am–4pm, Sat 9am–4pm, Sun noon–4pm
Dates: closed Mon & bank hols
Entry: free, but charge for some events

Opened in 2007 and spanning three floors, the stunning Middlesbrough Institute of Modern Art (MIMA) is a purpose-built art gallery and community space. Bringing together the city’s municipal art collections, MIMA doesn’t just display traditional art. The walls of each gallery are adorned with interesting text pieces, and you’ll find forms represented from crafts to ceramics, sculpture to jewellery. Audio-visual installations, which you can listen to on headphones or in breakout rooms, offer a more immersive experience. Local and international artists are both well represented, and the collection features work by David Hockney, L.S. Lowry and Tracey Emin, among others. The second floor holds a community workspace and the third has a roof terrace with superb views over Middlesbrough town centre. The excellent gift shop has books and items relating to the exhibitions, as well as items made by community groups.

There are eight Blue Badge bays in the MIMA car park, with level access to the building. At the entrance, low counters cater to wheelchair users, and the gallery is fully accessible throughout, with lifts to all floors and disabled toilets equipped with grab rails. All gallery doors (bar one) open using a touch button, and wheelchairs can be borrowed on request. The atmosphere inside the gallery is generally quiet and peaceful.
but can get busy during the Thursday community lunch. Ear defenders can be provided if it gets crowded, or if any individual exhibition is too loud. Signage is very clear, and large-print information can be requested, too. Assistance dogs are welcome.

FOOD & DRINK
MIMA Kitchen offers a range of light lunches and breakfast options, including sandwiches and quiches, that are prepared on-site daily.

131 North York Moors Scenic Drive

Driving distance: 115 miles
Approx driving time without stops: 3 hours 40 minutes

This beguiling tour of North Yorkshire takes in some spectacular moorland and coastal scenery, as well as a clutch of architectural and historical jewels.

The itinerary begins at Castle Howard (www.castlehoward.co.uk), one of Britain’s most magnificent stately homes, famously used as the filming location for Brideshead Revisited – both the classic 1981 TV adaptation and the 2007 feature film. Be sure to arrive early, as you’ll want to spend a good couple of hours here before moving on.

When you’ve had your fill of Castle Howard, set off for the seaside town of Whitby, about an hour and a half north – the minor road, via Rosedale Abbey, takes you through the heart of the North York Moors National Park, with its sweeping vistas of rolling, heather-clad moorland and wide-open skies. Try to get to Whitby in time for lunch, so you can feast on the award-winning fish and chips on offer at the Quayside Restaurant. While you’re here, be sure to pay a visit to the dramatic ruins of the seventh-century abbey perched on the cliff overlooking the town – said to be the inspiration for Bram Stoker’s Dracula. If you would like to avoid the 199 steps from the lower town, drive up to the abbey and adjacent visitor centre (01947 603568, www.english-heritage.org.uk); most of the site is wheelchair accessible and it offers a range of facilities, including Blue Badge parking and an accessible toilet.
Moving on from Whitby, follow the coast road to Staithes, ten miles north, for some superb views of the cliffs and sea, before turning inland to enter the moors again. From Staithes, it’s about half an hour to Guisborough, with its atmospheric ruined priory (www.english-heritage.org.uk), served by a small on-site car park.

Pushing on, it’s around ten miles south to Great Broughton, where you can continue south through the national park to the splendid Rievaulx Abbey (01439 798228, www.english-heritage.org.uk), one of the largest and most complete sets of abbey ruins in the UK. There’s an on-site car park with three Blue Badge spaces, wheelchair access, an adapted toilet and audio tours tailored to visually impaired visitors. There’s also a lovely (accessible) on-site café, serving delicious cakes and hot food – the perfect spot to end a full day’s sightseeing.

FOOD & DRINK
Whitby’s Quayside Restaurant (with street-level entry and an accessible toilet) is down by the harbour at 7 Pier Road (www.quaysidewhitby.co.uk). There are also on-site cafés at Castle Howard and Rievaulx Abbey.
At the heart of the UK’s largest seabird colony, RSPB Bempton Cliffs nature reserve nestles on Yorkshire’s east coast, with the North Sea lapping at the base of its cliffs. From April onwards, mayhem breaks out as half a million seabirds descend on the reserve to begin courting, breeding and rearing their young. In mid-April, the stars of the show, the puffins, arrive on the bustling cliffs and remain until the end of July; they can often be seen in the sea in early August. You can also watch razorbills launching themselves from the cliff face before frantically flapping their wings to take flight, and noisy gannets, with their enormous fluffy white chicks, gliding gracefully in the coastal breeze. By autumn most of the seabirds have gone to find warmer climes (the gannets stay into November), but you can still enjoy the winter calm and some of the UK’s most spectacular coastal views along Yorkshire’s finest cliffs.

Seven Blue Badge spaces are available in the car park, within 30ft of the entrance, via a smooth hard-surface path. There’s level access through push-button doors into the Yorkshire Seabird Centre, where there may be short queues at busy periods, but staff are usually available to help both outside the entrance and in the reception area. The accessible toilet is spacious and clean with grab rails, and there’s two electric mobility vehicles and two manual wheelchairs available to hire: to book in advance, visit the website. Beyond the reception area, the small RSPB shop has narrow aisle gaps, and doors leading out to a patio with three picnic benches. A ramp leads to the main reserve path, which generally has a good surface. Of the six cliff-edge viewing platforms, four are fully accessible, and all six have at least one wheelchair bay. With around half a million seabirds here, the colony can be very noisy and smelly during breeding season, and the viewing platforms get busy as people jostle for the best views. While many volunteers on the autism spectrum have thrived on the cliff tops, others may find the site challenging at busier times of the year. The path back to the Yorkshire Seabird Centre is up a long incline so manual wheelchair users may need assistance. The website has full access details, including a video for wheelchair users.

FOOD & DRINK The café in the Yorkshire Seabird Centre serves snacks, drinks and a variety of sandwiches. On a fine day, you can sit outside for lunch with a view.

133 Burton Agnes Hall and Grounds, East Yorkshire

Burton Agnes Hall is a magnificent Elizabethan stately home, set in glorious grounds. Completed in 1610, the house has remained in the same family for four hundred years, and is still lived in by descendants of its first owner – though these days its doors are open to the public, too.

Wheelchair access is limited to the ground floor, but the building is on such a grand scale this still leaves you with plenty to see. Highlights on this level include the Great...
Hall, with its massive fireplace and exquisite Elizabethan panelling and plasterwork; the Red Drawing Room and its collection of French and English porcelain; the Chinese Room, featuring some stunning Chinese lacquer screens; and the Garden Gallery, which houses paintings by a number of Impressionist and Post-Impressionist artists, including Walter Sickert and Albert André. If you aren't able to climb the great oak staircase up to the bedrooms and Long Gallery, head out to the beautiful grounds, which boast an enchanting Elizabethan walled garden and a mile-long woodland sculpture walk.

There is designated Blue Badge parking in the car park. The ground floor is wheelchair accessible, and there are rest seats in every room, with plenty of staff on hand to assist. The upper floors can only be accessed via the large staircase; if you can't manage this and want to know what's up there, ask for a printed guide with photos at reception. Outside, there's an accessible toilet in the courtyard, next to the café. Most areas of the grounds are wheelchair accessible, including the woodland sculpture walk, which has a level hard-surfaced path, and the walled garden, where a ramped entrance allows you to bypass the stone steps.

FOOD & DRINK

The Courtyard Café serves appetising tea and cakes, light meals and hot dinners, with much of the fresh produce grown on-site in the kitchen gardens.

134 Harrogate, North Yorkshire

Harrogate (www.visitharrogate.co.uk) is a prosperous, historic and classy town, packed with beautiful old manor houses, stately architecture, avenues of trees and some wonderful public gardens. The town falls into two distinct areas: upper and lower Harrogate; most of the sights are concentrated in the compact lower town, which is pretty level, and has plenty of on-street parking (free for Blue Badge holders).

A good place to start a visit is the Royal Pump Room Museum on Crown Place, which details Harrogate's rise to riches in the eighteenth century as a fashionable spa town – while you're here, you can sample the famed sulphurous water that brought visitors flocking, convinced of its medicinal properties. The museum is wheelchair accessible (although you can't get down to the wells) and has a disabled toilet.

If this puts you in the mood for some spa action, head to the nearby Turkish Baths on Parliament Street (01423 556746, www.turkishbathsharrogate.co.uk), whose grand, beautifully tiled steam room and heated chambers are fully accessible (the only exception being the plunge pool). There's a ramped entrance, a lift to all floors and an accessible changing room.

From here, you could pay a visit to the Mercer Art Gallery, on Swan Road, with rotating displays of nineteenth- and twentieth-century fine art from its extensive collection, which includes works by the likes of Alan Davie and William Powell Frith. The wheelchair-accessible entrance is at the back of the building (ring the bell if it's not open), and once inside everything’s on one level.

Further up the road, the elegant Old Swan Hotel (www.classiclodges.co.uk) is where Agatha Christie went into hiding for eleven days in 1926, prompting a massive manhunt. To find out more, pick up a leaflet at reception, which you can peruse in the sumptuous dining room, or while having a cocktail at the bar. There's ramped access to the hotel, a disabled toilet inside and four Blue Badge spaces available for parking.
If you'd rather stay outdoors, take a stroll through the beautifully landscaped park, Valley Gardens, or better still, the fabulous RHS Garden Harlow Carr (01423 565418, www.rhs.org.uk) next door, with its entrance on Crag Lane. Its gardens, woodland and alpine areas are laced with accessible paths (with a map available to display those routes), and there's designated parking near the entrance plus wheelchairs and powered scooters to borrow (suggested donation of £5). There's even an on-site branch of the famous Betty's Tea Rooms (whose main branch is on Parliament Street).

For more information on Harrogate's disabled facilities, including parking, RADAR key-accessible toilets and provision at visitor attractions, see the council's excellent website, www.harrogate.gov.uk.

135 National Railway Museum, York

Address: Leeman Road, York YO26 4XJ Web: www.railwaymuseum.org.uk Tel: 0333 0161010 Hours: daily 10am–5pm in winter; 10am–6pm in summer Dates: closed 24–26 Dec Entry: free

The UK’s largest railway museum has giant halls full of steam and diesel engines including Mallard, the world's fastest steam locomotive, a replica of Stephenson's Rocket and the world's finest collection of royal carriages. Covering two hundred years of history, the museum explores the pivotal role railways played in our industrial development and the extent to which they permeated society, from transporting royalty in sumptuous elegance to providing work for the masses. You’ll be impressed by the sheer quantity of fascinating railway objects on display and the knowledge, enthusiasm and helpfulness of the staff and volunteers.

There are about ten designated Blue Badge bays at the museum entrance, with a large drop-off area alongside. Check the website beforehand to locate the free accessible parking – it’s easy to overshoot (poor signage) and end up at the main car park, which has awkward gradients and no accessible spaces. Electric doors lead into the museum’s comfortable reception area with plenty of space and seating; there are several counters at the reception desk, some with low sections.

The museum consists of two main sites either side of a road linked by an underpass: both sites are large so you never feel crowded, and access to all areas is excellent, completely level and under cover. There is plenty of space around the exhibits with decent lifts to negotiate the underpass. Much of the floor on the Station Hall side is raised (due to its engineering maintenance past) which greatly enhances views of the exhibits. The Great Hall has several ramps up to the most interesting trains and an Observation Gallery – even the inaccessible motion simulator has a static version alongside so you can experience the sights and sounds. Lighting is subdued on the Station Hall side, and brighter in the Great Hall with lots of natural light. The road train around historic York (caught outside the main entrance) has an accessible coach, and there are accessible toilets on both sites, all clean, spacious and with appropriate grab rails and drop downs. The shop is slightly crowded for some tastes, but well lit with high and low shelving and surfaces.

FOOD & DRINK

The museum has three eating outlets, all accessible – the Countess of York, the Great Hall Café and the Station Hall Café. There’s also scrumptious Northern Bloc ice cream available, with dairy and vegan options.

Excavations of Coppergate in 1976 uncovered York’s original Viking settlement, now largely buried beneath a shopping centre. But at adjacent Jorvik, visitors are propelled in “time capsules” on a ride through a reconstructed version of the tenth-century Viking city, immersing you in the sights, sounds and smells of the times. Reimagined and reopened in 2017 after a multi-million-pound makeover, Jorvik is bigger, better and more accessible than ever.

There’s more than one way to interact with history at Jorvik Viking Centre. On top of the stand-out ride, there are Viking hosts kitted out in full costume, an artefact gallery with hundreds of fascinating items and a descriptive video showing how archaeologists were able to excavate and preserve so much of this Viking heritage. A glass floor allows... visitors to see the reconstructed Coppergate Dig right beneath their feet, giving a real sense of how people lived.

There’s no car park at the attraction itself, but the Piccadilly and Coppergate car parks are both nearby, with designated disabled bays. There’s level access to the entrance, where visitors with additional access needs can skip the queue (make yourself known to a member of staff). A RADAR-key accessible toilet is on the lower-ground floor, with grab rails and plenty of space to manoeuvre. Although a lift services the lower-ground floor, it’s worth checking the maximum wheelchair width with the disabled-access staff – some powered wheelchairs might be too big, but you can borrow a manual wheelchair on site. Because of fire regulations, only one wheelchair user is allowed on the lower-ground level at a time; on the ride, there’s one time capsule that can accommodate a wheelchair.

Jorvik is underground and some areas are dark, and the ride’s sounds, smells and animatronics are potentially distressing for those on the autism spectrum or with other sensory conditions – the centre can provide sensory packs to help alleviate anxiety and a visual story can be downloaded online. Jorvik also operates a sticker system for people with autism, with colour-coded badges indicating whether visitors are happy to be approached, do not wish to be approached, or would like staff to answer questions when asked. Those with complex access needs should phone in advance; the team, who all receive disability training, strive to accommodate everyone, and can arrange BSL interpreters too. Large-print and Braille guides are available at the admissions desk and assistance dogs are welcome. Carers also receive free entry.

FOOD & DRINK

There is nowhere to buy refreshments on site, but there are numerous cafés and restaurants located inside the Coppergate Centre and the surrounding streets that are accessible and fairly priced.

137 Leeds Playhouse, West Yorkshire

Address: Playhouse Square, Leeds LS2 7UP Web www.leedsplayhouse.org.uk Tel: 0113 2137700 Hours: office daily 10am–5pm Dates: closed bank hols, 24 Dec & 1 Jan Entry: dependent on show but carer goes free

One of Britain's leading homes for new artistic talent, Leeds Playhouse was reopened in 2019 after a huge refurbishment that upgraded the building to facilitate access and inclusion. The playhouse was founded as part of the Leeds Playgoers’ Society and the Leeds Arts Club in 1907, and moved to its current location in Quarry Hill in 1990. Today, Leeds Playhouse is a hub of creativity and activity.

Families, groups and individuals can all come and spend time exploring their artistic personality – varied performances range from classical drama to children’s shows, with a focus on new writing. But it is the award-winning Creative Engagement programme that really makes this place special. Projects for young people, older people, local communities and schools all unfold here. All this is backed up by a dedicated programme for refugees and asylum seekers, including a weekly singing group with a supervised creative play session for children – in recognition of this work, the Playhouse has been designated the first ever Theatre of Sanctuary.
With an ethos that champions making theatre accessible to everyone, the recent re-development has pulled out all the access stops. There’s disabled parking at the front of the building, new entrances to the Playhouse with level access and automatic doors, Braille signs and lifts between floors. There are accessible toilets on every level (as well as a family bathroom with full changing facilities) and staff members are on hand to help. Captioned, audio-described, BSL-interpreted, relaxed and dementia-friendly performances are delivered by an experienced freelance team. As part of their ongoing commitment to inclusion, Leeds Playhouse is part of the Access Leeds Theatre Partnership (a Leeds-wide initiative to improve theatre access) and the Ramps on the Moon consortium (putting deaf and disabled actors on the stage).

FOOD & DRINK  The Front Room Café offers a selection of hot and cold drinks and snacks; the second-floor restaurant has hot meals, including a vegetarian option. Both are accessible.

138 The Deep, East Yorkshire

Address: Tower Street, Hull HU1 4DP  Web: www.thedeep.co.uk  Tel: 01482 381000  Hours: daily 10am–6pm; last entrance 5pm  Dates: closed 24–25 Dec  Entry: [D]£14  [C]free  [A]£14  [3–15s]£11  [under 3s]free  [Con]£13; 10% discount for advance booking online

Designed by Sir Terry Farrell, the gleaming glass and aluminium building that houses The Deep is distinctly shark-like in appearance – aptly so, because this huge aquarium is home to more than 5000 animals including sharks, rays, loggerhead sea turtles, a colony of gentoo penguins and the UK’s only green sawfish.
As well as being a visitor attraction, The Deep is an educational and conservation charity, equipped with interactive displays. Prepare to be taken on a journey, where you’ll explore the world’s oceans, from the early beginnings of life to the present day – through coral reef, slime and flooded forests, and from the warm waters of the tropics to the icy Antarctic. Children are entertained the whole time, with attractions such as touch-pool sessions, penguin feeds, dive shows and presentations. Gentoo penguins have a purpose-built enclosure, the Kingdom of Ice. The highlight, however, is a walk through a deep viewing tunnel followed by a breathtaking ride in an underwater lift, which takes you through the main exhibit, home of the sharks. Dive shows take place regularly, with different species taking the spotlight – sometimes the sharks are fed by hand.

The Deep is only a five-minute walk from Hull Marina, and access around the whole site is excellent; the venue undertakes regular reviews of their services and facilities to ensure they offer access to all. The Deep’s car park has twelve accessible spaces, right next to a designated accessible entrance. Parking is free for Blue Badge holders. Wheelchairs and a variety of walking aids (including rollators) can be booked in advance for free and there are also electric scooters available, though these can’t be booked in advance. There are seating areas on each level – but be warned that the route throughout The Deep is gently sloping all the way along, and can be crowded at busy times. Accessible toilets, fitted with emergency call alarms, are on every level of the building. There is also a Changing Places facility, providing much more space, plus a hoist, an adjustable basin/mirror, a central toilet and a privacy screen. The room is decorated with coral-reef murals, and access is by using a RADAR key that can be borrowed from reception staff. The lift is wheelchair accessible. There are Braille guides, ear defenders, sensory support packs, personal induction loops and audio guides available. All assistance and hearing dogs are welcome, and induction loops can be found at reception, at the tills at the gift shops and in the conference suite of the Learning Centre. Finally, on several dates throughout the year, “quiet days” are organised, when the audio system is turned down, the lighting turned up and BSL-signed presentations are available throughout the day. During term times, on “Tranquil Tuesdays” the same sensory changes are made to the environment (minus the BSL presentation) from 3pm, specifically designed for visitors who prefer a quieter and more peaceful environment – everyone is welcome and there’s no need to book. Carers are granted free entry, provided they are needed on a one-to-one basis; bring proof, as random checks can be made on documentation.

FOOD & DRINK

On the third floor, Castaways Café (with a children’s menu and options for a range of dietary requirements) is open until 5.30pm, is accessible and offers impressive views over the Humber. A snack bar serving light bites is open halfway round the attraction during weekends and school holidays. On Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, visitors can dine alongside the sharks in the award-winning Two Rivers restaurant.

139 Eureka! The National Children’s Museum, West Yorkshire

Address: Discovery Road, Halifax HX1 2NE
Web: www.eureka.org.uk
Tel: 01422 330069
Hours: Sat & Sun 10am–5pm; Mon–Fri during local school hols 10am–5pm; Tues–Fri during local school term 10am–
4pm Dates: closed 24–26 Dec & 1 Jan Entry: [D]£13.95 [C]free [adult & child over 3]£13.95 [1–2s]£5.95 [under 1s]free; parking up to 4hr £3.20; up to 12hr £6.40; free annual pass with every standard admission (additional charge may apply on some events and activities)

The award-winning Eureka! The National Children’s Museum aims to inspire children to find out about themselves and the world through hundreds of imaginative, cleverly designed and interactive exhibits within six indoor galleries and a large outdoor space.

Among the numerous multi-sensory activities on offer, Zoom the Robot is very popular as he’s fully interactive – talk to him and he talks back. In the All About Me section, children can climb inside a cavernous mouth; they can become mechanics and give a car an MOT in Living and Working Together; and they can discover the properties of sound and music in Sound Space. Meanwhile, under 5s can explore the sights, sounds and textures of a giant garden in the SoundGarden. While Eureka! is targeted at the under 12s (with Desert Discovery, SoundGarden and Creativity Space designed for the under 5s), there’s plenty here to enthrall older children – and their adult companions – too.

There are three dedicated disabled parking bays around fifty yards from the main entrance (bypass the main car park and park beside the Eureka building), plus extra bays near the path in the overflow car park, both with level access into the museum. Inside, there’s a low counter at the ticket desk where children and other visitors with access needs can jump the queue at busy times – just ask on arrival. There are no awkward surfaces or gradients for wheelchair users to contend with and a few wheelchairs are available to borrow (book in advance). All staff receive disability training (including autism training) and many of the front-of-house staff can do basic signing or finger spelling. Visitors can book a dedicated, trained “Extra Pair of Hands” enabler for two hours during their visit.
(book in advance). The museum has an induction loop, Changing Places bathroom, ear defenders for those with sensitive hearing, large-print multi-sensory displays, and the All About Me gallery has BSL interpretation for some exhibits. A private chill-out space is available for visitors with access needs, too. Free weekend and holiday clubs for disabled children and their families are supported by trained staff and adapted activities. Outside, the Wonder Walk incorporates a sensory trail (for all) and a wheelchair accessible trail. An online sensory guide is available at www.eureka.org.uk/guide.

FOOD & DRINK The accessible café serves tasty hot and cold meals and snacks, and has a children’s menu, with sandwiches made on-site. There’s a microwave for heating baby food and a picnic area outside, plus additional seating areas and a refurbished train carriage for extra lunch space.

140 The Victoria Theatre, Halifax, West Yorkshire

Address: 2 Fountain St, Halifax HX1 1BP
Web: www.victoriatheatre.co.uk
Tel: 01422 351158
Hours:
Box office on non-performance days Jan, Feb & June–Aug daily 10am–4pm; Mar–May & Sept–Dec daily 10am–6pm; on performance days it stays open until 30 mins after curtain up
Entry: Ticket prices depend on the performance but [C]free; see website for details

In the heart of Halifax, the Victoria Theatre is a traditional Victorian theatre staging a varied programme of plays, concerts and events, including rock ‘n’ roll performances, side-splitting comedy, ballet, opera and traditional panto. The theatre’s sumptuous interior contains many original features including an ornate, sweeping, double staircase.
in the foyer with its beautiful, stained-glass dome and striking statue of Queen Victoria. While the auditorium retains the feel of a bygone era, the theatre itself has modern facilities such as a wheelchair stair-lift and infra-red audio system.

There are free parking spaces for Blue Badge holders on Commercial Street, directly outside the theatre, with dropped kerbs and level walkways. The main entrance has steps, so wheelchair users should enter via the side entrance on Commercial Street, which offers level access through wide doors. If pre-advised, staff can meet visitors with access needs here and offer additional support. From here, there is level access to the stalls, the stalls bar, the accessible toilet and designated wheelchair spaces in the auditorium. There are hearing loops in the booking office and the auditorium, and an infra-red audio system allows customers in the stalls and circle to adjust the volume of the performance. The annual pantomime has both BSL-interpreted and BSL-integrated performances and a relaxed performance for those on the autism spectrum. A touch tour is also available during pantomime season, enabling visitors with visual impairment to meet the cast and feel costumes and props. Seasonal brochures are available in large print, and guide dogs are welcome. There are two large, accessible toilets. The significant detail and contrasting colours in the Victorian interior may be a little overwhelming for those with sensory sensitivity, along with the noise levels on entry, exit and during intervals. Visitors with access needs should tell staff when booking, and wheelchair users can sign up to the theatre’s email service to book performances in advance.

FOOD & DRINK

The theatre has two main bars and a smaller bar for pre-show and interval drinks, plus a snack kiosk in the lobby and a number of smaller ice-cream kiosks. There are plenty of places for a full meal nearby in Halifax town centre.

Safari Parks

Knowsley (Prescot L34 4AN; www.knowsleysafarixperience.co.uk) A conservation-led, drive-through wildlife sanctuary with active breeding programmes, where you can come face to face with all manner of exotic animals from emus to giraffes.

Woburn Safari Park (Bedfordshire MK17 9QN; www.woburnsafari.co.uk) With a wide range of animals from around the world, as well as rides and indoor activities to keep kids occupied in poor weather, Woburn offers an excellent day out. Thorough access info on their website too.
Footpaths lead around a variety of walk-through areas, where many of the animals are free to wander around, often venturing up close to visitors before shying away. In South America ¡Viva! you can walk among troops of capybaras, the largest rodents in the world, while over in Lemur Woods you can hang out with two species of lemur. Some areas, such as the Wallaby Walkabout, allow you to pet the animals. Some of the more predatory creatures, including the Amur tigers and Amur leopards, can be viewed from raised accessible walkways or through ground-level glass panels. The park is also home to anteaters, lions and four polar bears: Victor, Pixel, Nissan and Nobby. Children will enjoy the three outdoor play areas – Oasis Play Area, Jungle Lookout and the Big Bug Play Area – plus the huge, indoor Monkey Playhouse, with its viewing area into the baboon reserve, though these have no special disabled provision.

Access to the Yorkshire Wildlife Park is good, with plenty of disabled parking spaces and a ramp down to the courtyard, where trails lead to the wildlife areas. All the trails and walkways are wheelchair accessible; most paths are fairly level, with a hard surface of compacted gravel, though there are a few gravelly or uneven parts where wheelchair users may need some assistance. Ten manual wheelchairs are available to borrow (but must be booked ahead) and there are three fully accessible toilets; the one in the café also has a hoist. Assistance dogs are welcome at the park, but can’t be taken into the animal contact areas. Visitors on the autism spectrum should pre-book for fast-track entry, while those who struggle to queue can head to the quieter Information Station for assistance; queues are usually less busy from 2pm onwards.

FOOD & DRINK

There are outdoor picnic areas plus accessible cafés and kiosks dotted throughout the park.

142 Magna Science Adventure Centre, South Yorkshire

Address: Magna Way, Rotherham S60 1FD  Web: www.visitmagna.co.uk  Tel: 01709 720002  Hours: opening hours vary; check website for details  Entry: [D]£10.95  [C]free  [A]£10.95  [4–15s]£8.95  [2–3s]£4.95  [under2s]free; discounts available online; annual passes available (day tickets can be upgraded)

Magna has four huge interactive pavilion structures built inside the shell of what was once one of the biggest steelworks in the world. The thread that runs through the vast centre (550 yards long and 12 storeys high) is the demonstration and celebration of science, and particularly the ear-splitting heavy industry of the north, which is now largely historical. Everything at Magna is on a monumental scale.

The four pavilions represent the four elements: earth, air, fire and water, each one housing themed collections of experiments and demonstrations. You can operate a JCB, blast a rock face, fire a super-soaking hose, shine searchlights and engage in masses of hands-on gadget adoration. And to remind you what it’s all built upon, at regular intervals they fire up the steel mill’s original arc furnace for The Big Melt, in a ground-shaking multimedia spectacular. Outside, there are two extensive play areas, Sci-Tek and Aqua-Tek (bring spare clothes), which have level access and a wide range of play equipment. Check the website, too, for special event days, when activities such as bungee-jumping and zip-wire rides are offered.
There are designated disabled parking spaces beside the main entrance, though they’re not particularly wide. Inside, the site is superb for visitors with accessibility needs. The incredible scale means it never gets crowded, even when more than a thousand people are here at once – so you’ll have no problem navigating the attractions in a wheelchair. Portable seating is available at reception to help if you’re visiting on foot. A huge, slightly sloped reception area (with an excellent low section) leads to lifts, and the pavilions are connected by long, wide walkways with a perfect metal surface. Make sure your powered scooter has fully charged batteries, as there are long stretches of walkway between displays, and note that the building is cold, even in summer, so be sure to dress warmly.

Braille signs indicate the toilets and stairs, but visually impaired visitors may struggle with the low light in much of the building. While some of the interactive exhibits have subtitles, visitors with hearing impairments may find the empty, echoing spaces distracting. Some areas, including the Melt Show, have strobe lighting effects.

FOOD & DRINK The restaurant in the Red Hall, on the ground floor, serves meals and snacks and is reasonably priced. It is wheelchair accessible and has a disabled toilet.

Dates: closed for two weeks over the Christmas period; call ahead to check exact days as it varies from year to year
Entry: entry to the standing stones and visitor centre is free, but the following charges apply to the “Story of the Stones” exhibition: £2.80, or free, depending on circumstances; £3.50 [under 16s] £2.20 [Seniors & students] £2.80; group rates available

A Neolithic marvel in a wild island landscape, the Callanish Standing Stones on the remote Isle of Lewis are older than the Pyramids, and rival Stonehenge for historic and archaeological importance. Set in a wild lochside location, Callanish offers stunning views across Loch Roag and the surrounding countryside, making a visit worthwhile for the vistas alone.

Unlike many other ancient monuments, you are encouraged to touch the stones and roam around this atmospheric and mysterious place. The general shape of the stones is that of a Celtic cross which only adds to the mystery of this ancient landmark, as it is thousands of years older than Christianity. In use from the late Neolithic to the Bronze Age, its original purpose is subject to debate, but one theory is that it was an astronomical observatory. If you are lucky enough to visit during one of the solstices, an unusual weather event like the Northern Lights, or planetary events like a blood moon or eclipse, then the site assumes a very special atmosphere and can get busy.

There are no dedicated parking spaces, but visitors with accessibility needs can park in one of the bus bays near the visitor centre; otherwise the tarmac car park is on an incline, a few metres slightly downhill from the visitor centre. There is ample space to... drop-off too. From the visitor centre car park, a fairly long uphill hardcore path leads to the stones, which might challenge less-fit wheelchair users or those with limited walking ability – though there are rest seats en route. To avoid this path, ask the visitor centre for directions to a second car park with level access into the site. Bear in mind, however, that Callanish is an ancient monument in a wild landscape consisting mainly of peat, which can become soft in wet weather and may cause problems for some wheelchair and scooter users – visiting on a dry day would make life simpler. Entrance into the visitor centre is step-free, with a small lip at the front door. The reception, shop and pay counter of the café are all at a good height for wheelchair and scooter users, and there’s a spacious unisex disabled toilet (no key required) in the visitor centre, which is clean with grab rails and a wide door. The café and shop are easily negotiated by wheelchair, though the informative “Story of the Stones” (with audio description for the sight-impaired) is more compact and may prove a squeeze for users of larger scooters.

FOOD & DRINK

The lovely, bright on-site café doubles as an art gallery and has glorious views. It serves reasonably priced hot and cold food, with level access throughout.

144 Fort George, Inverness-shire

Built on the orders of King George II in the wake of the Jacobite Rebellion of 1745, Fort George is still in use as an army barracks today. It is one of the largest and best-preserved forts in Europe, a spectacular complex of fortifications and garrison buildings set on a spit of land jutting into the Moray Firth. After parking, you approach the fort along a path that takes you through sandstone tunnels and over white wooden bridges that span the ditches. Once there, you’re rewarded with magnificent coastal views from the ramparts – sometimes you can even spot dolphins in the sea from here.

A short (12min) film recounting the Fort George story is a good starting point for a tour, and a ninety-minute multilingual audio tour is available to guide you around the extensive site. The Historic Barrack Rooms vividly recreate the living conditions of the eighteenth-century soldiers who lived here. Other highlights include: the Grand Magazine, which once held thousands of gunpowder barrels and now stores a vast collection of eighteenth-century arms; the Garrison Chapel; a dog cemetery (which is not accessible); and the Camp Cinema with its short film about the history of the Black Watch regiment. There’s a special quiz sheet for children and summertime family events – though the shiny weapons, imposing buildings and vast space to run around in will provide ample enjoyment for younger visitors.

Though built to be impregnable, the fort is very accessible today. From the car park it’s around two hundred yards to the visitor centre and main entrance, mostly across level ground, but with two short stretches of cobbles to cross. You can borrow powered scooters at the visitor centre, as well as some manual wheelchairs. The site is largely wheelchair accessible, though assistance may be needed up one of the six grassy ramps (twenty degrees) onto the ramparts or up the slight step into the Barrack Rooms. The Regimental Museum has chairlift access to the first floor only; the second floor can only be reached via a staircase. There are two sets of accessible toilets: one in the main garrison area, the other in the café. An induction loop is available in the audio-visual theatre and in the shop and main reception area.

FOOD & DRINK The Fort George Café sells homemade, organic food such as soup and sandwich lunches, and has level access and disabled toilets.

145 Culloden Battlefield Visitor Centre, Inverness-shire

Address: Culloden Moor, Inverness IV2 5EU
Web: www.nts.org.uk/culloden
Tel: 01463 796090
Hours: daily: Jan–Feb & Nov–Dec 10am–4pm; Mar–May & Sept–Oct 9am–6pm; June–Aug 9am–7pm
Dates: closed 24–26 Dec & 31 Dec–2 Jan
[Con]£9.50 [Fam]£27

The sixteenth of April 1746 was a decisive day in British history – the date of the last battle fought on British soil, when seven thousand Government troops swiftly and bloodily defeated Bonnie Prince Charlie's Jacobites. The Culloden Battlefield centre is a must-do – it's one of the most fascinating attractions in the Highlands and accessible to all.

The centre's natural building materials and sympathetic architecture ensure it blends in with its environment. The well-crafted displays are presented through vocal and tactile description, as well as by traditional glass-case presentation. The staff are very helpful, doling out advice and directions, and some give historical talks in period costume. Hand-held electronic guides (included in ticket price) enhance the experience, particularly while touring the battlefield outside. Don't miss the Cumberland Stone – the giant boulder that’s supposed to mark the spot where the Duke of Cumberland took up his position to direct the battle (although if he did stand here he would have needed binoculars!).

There are thirteen Blue Badge spaces, and it's just a short stroll or push to the entrance of the centre, which has level access throughout. A rooftop viewing area can be accessed by an external ramp, which is not too steep (1:21) but rather long, so some wheelchair users may need assistance. It’s worth the effort of getting up there though – this has the best view of the grounds. On the battlefield itself, hard-surfaced paths are pushable but undulating in places; again, wheelchair users may need help. Accessible toilets are just inside the visitor centre entrance, and wheelchairs and powered scooters are available to borrow; you’re advised to book these in advance.

146 Landmark Forest Adventure Park, Inverness-shire

Address: Carrbridge, Inverness-shire, Scotland PH23 3AJ  Web: www.landmarkpark.co.uk  Tel: 01479 841613; infoline 0800 7313446  Hours: hours and times vary, call or check website for details  Dates: closed 1 Jan & 25 Dec; some attractions close late Oct to late Mar; occasional closures in bad weather, so call to check  Entry: prices change regularly, so check the website; weekly and annual tickets available.  Note: disabled visitors and carers need official documentation to qualify for reduced rate or free entry.

Set in a beautiful pine forest in the Cairngorms National Park, Landmark Forest Adventure Park is a paradise for active kids, who’ll have loads of fun exploring, running, climbing and hurtling around the park’s numerous activities and rides, many of which are surprisingly accessible. Highlights include: Ant City a two-storey climbing-running-sliding structure; the Lost Labyrinth, featuring a maze of confusing paths; Pinnacle, a thirty-foot-high climbing wall; and the Fire Tower, a seventy-foot-high timber structure whose 105 steps can be scaled to reveal breathtaking 360-degree views above the treetops. Adrenaline junkies will make a beeline for Ropeworx, the challenging high-wire adventure course, or the fifty-foot Skydive jump, which uses stuntmen-style descenders – continuing, no doubt, to the thrilling Wild Water Coaster rides or the Runaway Timber Train rollercoaster. Gentler pleasures are on hand on the fully accessible Treetop Trail through the forest canopy, at the Wildlife Feeding Area, where you’ve got a good chance of spotting rare red squirrels and beautiful forest birds, or in the Butterfly House, home to hundreds of brightly coloured butterflies. Finally, mention must be made of the indoor Bamboozleum, whose morphing machines, special effects, holograms and “capture-your-shadow” wall are certain to intrigue and delight. The newest addition to the park is Dinosaur Kingdom, featuring 22 moving, roaring and life-size dinosaurs, including a 6m T-Rex.
Blue Badge holders can park in the disabled bays a few yards from the park entrance. All the trails through the park are wheelchair accessible – though take care not to get your wheels jammed between the boardwalks on the Treetop Trail. The Runaway Timber Train is wheelchair accessible and safe (if you have the upper body strength to hold on through the rollercoaster), and the Lost Labyrinth can be negotiated in a wheelchair. There are a few wheelchairs available to borrow at the main reception. All the toilets in the park include a spacious, fully accessible toilet with grab bars.

FOOD & DRINK

The on-site Foresters’ Restaurant offers a decent choice of locally sourced food, such as cooked breakfasts, fish and chips, homemade soup and kids’ meals. Alternatively, the Pinewood Grill snack bar serves burgers, hot dogs, salads and the like.

147 RSPB Loch Garten Osprey Centre, Highlands

Address: Abernethy National Nature Reserve, Forest Lodge, Nethy Bridge, PH25 3EF; off the B970, 10 miles from Aviemore (follow RSPB Ospreys road signs)
Web: www.rspb.org.uk/lochgarten
Tel: 01479 831476
Hours: daily Apr–Aug 10am–6pm (last entry 5pm); check website for event details
Dates: closed Sept–Mar
Entry: [D]£3 [C]free [A]£5 [under 16s]£2 [Con]£3 [Fam]£10

The RSPB’s Osprey Centre – nestling in mature pine forest, near the spot where these stunning fish-eating birds of prey returned to breed after a period of extinction in the 1950s – is a mecca for nature lovers the world over. Small and well-appointed, it teems with viewing slots and equipment, with some binoculars and telescopes set low for children and wheelchair users. You get great views of the osprey nest through these, as well as opportunities to spot myriad small birds coming to feeders nearby, including siskins, greater spotted woodpeckers and, if you’re lucky, crested tits. Red squirrels are also frequent visitors, as are bank voles and wood mice. While the centre doesn’t have dedicated facilities for those with sensory disabilities, enthusiastic staff are happy to describe the action, and there are numerous audio and video feeds from the osprey nest. Further afield, in the surrounding Abernethy Forest, you may see crossbills, deer, lizards and wood ants.

The centre is extremely well signposted from the A9. There are two disabled parking spaces near the reception and toilet block, and those with limited mobility are permitted to drive the last 330 yards to the door, and park right outside the centre – otherwise visitors can follow a gently undulating and well-compacted path. A gentle ramp takes you inside, where all is on one level and fully wheelchair accessible. The unisex adapted toilet – an eco-friendly composting facility – is at the entrance, around 300m away from the centre. There is one wheelchair available to borrow, which you can reserve in advance. Any other queries can be answered by the staff. The centre was awarded the Visit Scotland Gold Award for Green Tourism in 2013, and it deserves it – the sights, sounds and smells of the wilderness will stay with you long after your visit.

FOOD & DRINK

You can get hot drinks, sandwiches and snacks at the centre shop, but for something more substantial pop to Nethy Bridge or Boat of Garten, where you’ll find village shops and cafés.
Scotland’s northwest Highlands is an untamed land of mountains, glens, lochs, wind-swept islands and unforgettable beauty – nowhere more so than the mesmerising Isle of Skye and neighbouring mainland.

The little ferry port of Armadale, in the south, makes a good introduction to Skye; it’s reached by a half-hour boat trip (0800 0665000, www.calmac.co.uk) from Mallaig. A short distance from the ferry terminal stand the imposing ruins of Armadale Castle (01471 844305, www.armadalecastle.com), a nineteenth-century manor house whose beautiful grounds are the site of the Museum of the Isles. Fully accessible and with a range of facilities (including two powered scooters to borrow; best to book in advance), the museum explores the history of the region from the perspective of the powerful Clan Donald.

From here, head north towards Harrapool then loop south to Elgol fishing village, where you’ll be rewarded with sensational views across Loch Scavaig to the Cullin Ridge. Those who want to get closer can take a boat trip with Misty Isle Boat Trips, whose staff are keen to help anyone on board, but it’s worth noting that the lower the tide, the longer the route to the boat down the slipway (phone in advance on 01471 866288).

From Elgol, retrace your route to Harrapool and take the A87 over the toll-free Skye Bridge to the mainland for stunning views of the Kyle of Lochalsh. Take either of two left-hand turns for a pretty detour to the charming village of Plockton, where you can take a stroll along the shore of Loch Carron and watch picturesque sailing boats bob in the sea. There’s disabled parking and toilets by the harbour, and a good supply of shorefront pubs and restaurants. Otherwise, follow the road east to Eilean Donan Castle. Perched on a small island at the junction of three lochs, this is a truly magical place. Sadly, the castle itself has no disabled access, but the adjacent visitor centre offers two on-screen virtual tours (as well as a coffee shop and accessible toilets). Continue on to Shiel Bridge to end your trip with fabulous views of Loch Duich and the Five Sisters of Kintail.

FOOD & DRINK On the Isle of Skye, try the restaurant at the friendly, accessible Coruisk House (01471 866330, www.coruiskhouse.com) in Elgol. Plockton has great seafood restaurants; the Plockton Inn (01599 544222, www.plocktoninn.co.uk) is a good bet, although, being in a heritage building, it doesn't have an accessible toilet. Take a look at www.visitplockton.com for more ideas.

149 Glenmore Forest Park, Inverness-shire

Address: Glenmore Forest, near Aviemore PH22 1QU
Web: www.forestryandland.gov.scot
Tel: 01479 861220
Hours: visitor centre daily 9am–4.30pm
Dates: closed 1 Jan & 25–26 Dec
Entry: free; pay-and-display car park; free parking for Blue Badge holders

Sitting in the heart of the Cairngorm Mountains, around six miles east of Aviemore, Glenmore Forest Park boasts one of Scotland's few remaining tracts of ancient Caledonian pine forest. It is also the site of the gorgeous Loch Morlich, whose long, golden beach is the highest in Britain.

A good place to start is the visitor centre, where you can pick up trail maps and find out more about the park's landscape, wildlife and history on information panels and by watching a ten-minute film. The park has two accessible trails, both starting from the visitor centre. The shorter one is the mile-long circular Loch Trail, which takes you along the shores of Loch Morlich. The other accessible path is the lower section of the Ryvoan Trail, which leads through a beautiful, steep-sided glen to the stunning Loch Uaine. It’s around two miles in each direction, and is easily managed with a powered scooter or electric wheelchair. Manual wheelchair users, however, will probably need assistance on a couple of the steeper sections.

There are two wide-bay disabled spaces in the car park, close to the visitor centre, which has a step-free entrance. Once inside, the reception desk is high for wheelchair users, but otherwise accessibility is good, with everything on one level – including access to the café – and plenty of space to manoeuvre. The information boards have large print. There’s a spacious, accessible toilet at the visitor centre, fitted with grab-rails.

FOOD & DRINK Fabulous views and tasty hot and cold food (including a kids’ menu) are on offer at the pleasant visitor centre café, which has indoor and outdoor seating.

Run by the Zoological Society of Scotland, the Highland Wildlife Park is a two-hundred-acre safari park and zoo, with drive-through and walk-through sections. Splendidly set in the Cairngorms National Park, it offers stunning mountain and loch views and the chance to see a range of mountain and tundra wildlife – including polar bears.

It takes about half an hour to drive (slowly) around the Main Reserve, where you’ll see many hoofed animals, including elk, deer, reindeer, bison, yak and Mongolian wild horses. Don’t worry if you miss something: you can go round as many times as you like. From the car park, trails lead to more exotic animals such as Amur tigers, snow monkeys, wolves, arctic foxes and the polar bears. Native Scottish wildlife is also represented, with red deer, wildcats and red squirrels, among others, while children will enjoy the excellent Go Wild adventure playground.

Blue Badge parking is available within a few yards of the accessible visitor centre, housing cafés and a shop. Trails through the site are pretty wheelchair-friendly, particularly the wooden walkways to the tigers. Some are surfaced with compressed earth or hard-packed gravel; a few are steep in places, but manageable, though you may need assistance. Rest seats are provided at various points. The shop staff are helpful and can provide a map and advice about trails and surfaces. There are three wheelchairs available to borrow, and three disabled toilets located in blocks by the car park and in the visitor centre. If you don’t have your own vehicle, you can join one of the Land Rover tours that leave the visitor centre at various times throughout the day (book in advance).

FOOD & DRINK

The on-site Antlers café serves hot and cold meals and snacks, and comes with great views of the snow monkeys and beyond to the Spey Valley. There’s also a picnic area next to the playground. Alternatively, the Old Bridge Inn on Dalfaber Road, on the outskirts of Aviemore (01479 811137, www.oldbridgeinn.co.uk), serves excellent food by the banks of the River Spey; from the wildlife park, take the Coylumbridge/Glenmore Road and then the first turning on the left.

151 Nevis Range Mountain Experience (Aonach Mor Gondola), Inverness-shire

Address: Nevis Range, Torlundy, Inverness-shire PH33 6SQ  Web: www.nevisrange.co.uk  Tel: 01397 705825; extension 227 for adaptive ski instruction  Hours: gondola summer daily 10am–5pm (9.30am–late in July and Aug); winter Mon–Fri 9.30am–dusk, Sat & Sun 9am–dusk; see website for details of other activities  Dates: closed mid-Nov to mid-Dec  Entry: [D]£14 [C]free [A]£14 [5–17s]£8 [under 4s]free [Con]£12.50 [Fam]£38–43

Aonach Mor – just two summits away from the peak of Ben Nevis, towering above the Great Glen – is the location of Britain’s only mountain gondola. The wheelchair-accessible gondola is open year-round, and transports visitors up 2150 feet to Scotland’s highest snow-sports area and, of course, dramatic, unbeatable views over the mountains and lochs of Scotland’s west coast. In winter, the slopes are abuzz with skiers and boarders, and offer options for both beginners and experts.

The site is the base for Disability Snowsport UK, so it’s a great place to have a go. An adaptive ski instructor can be booked in advance, and a junior sit-ski suitable for children aged up to fourteen (depending on height) is available. Downhill mountain bike trails are open in summer, but while bike rental is possible, there are no adapted bikes available. At the bottom of the mountain – around the base station – are miles of forest trails, open year-round. Some are passable by the adventurous disabled visitor, including those in wheelchairs, if they’re not too muddy. The Broomstick Blue trail is about four miles long and reasonably level, though wheelchair users may need to turn back halfway, when the route becomes trickier to navigate. The Tree Adventure, featuring a “swoop drop”, zip slide and rope bridges is an exciting addition, but unfortunately, very challenging for disabled children and adults. Blue Badge parking is provided on a tarmac area next to the gondola entrance. The café at the base station and the Snowgoose restaurant at the top both have easy access and accessible toilets. The gondolas are able to accommodate wheelchairs up to 23.6 inches wide, but if yours doesn't fit, transfer onto the gondola seat is quite easy. They also have a narrow chair, which can be wheeled up the ramp, into the gondola by the helpful staff (your own chair can go up with you). The restaurant is accessible by a steep ramp from the outside of the building, just fifty yards from the gondola arrival point, though in winter this may mean a short journey through snow. Its balcony-cum-viewing deck is accessible, too. Beneath the restaurant, the Mountain Discovery Centre has information about the Nevis range’s flora and fauna, but access is via a flight of stairs. The upper chairlifts above the gondola don’t operate in summer, to protect the sensitive vegetation.

FOOD & DRINK

The Snowgoose restaurant is right at the top, with panoramic views. Alternatively, the Pinemarten café and bar at the bottom serves locally sourced hot and cold meals and snacks in a light and airy building. It has step-free access, movable seating and a disabled toilet.

152 Pitlochry Festival Theatre and Explorers Garden, Perthshire

Address: Port-na-Craig, Pitlochry PH16 5DR
Web: www.pitlochryfestivaltheatre.com; www.explorersgarden.com
Tel: 01796 484600; box office 01796 484626
Hours: performance dates & times vary; theatre & box office daily year-round 10am–5pm (in summer box office closes at 8pm & theatre after the evening performance); garden daily 1 Apr–31 Oct 10am–5pm (last entry at 4.15pm)
Entry: tickets vary depending on performance & seat; gallery free; garden [A]£4 [Fam]£9; season tickets and concessions are available, see website

The Pitlochry Festival Theatre presents productions of all kinds, year-round, including musicals, plays, concerts, workshops, talks, festivals and tours. But even if you don’t see a performance, you can spend a few hours here looking around the beautiful Explorers Gardens, visiting the gallery, taking a backstage tour, browsing in the gift shop or simply admiring the beautiful setting from the panoramic lounge.

Adjacent to the theatre, the famous Explorers Garden will delight horticulturalists. On the banks of the River Tummel, the extensive garden and woodlands tell the story of the Scottish plant hunters who travelled the globe in search of new plants and trees. The gardens have a network of tarmac paths, steeply graded in places, but mostly step-free – you can arrange to be dropped at the garden’s entrance pavilion, and meander downhill back to the car park. If you want to learn more about the trees and plants, book ahead to join one of the garden tours (90min); with notice, staff will try to accommodate individual access needs.

The modern theatre is a short walk – just less than a mile – across a suspension footbridge from the attractive centre of Pitlochry town. This is a step-free route, albeit steep in places. If you’d prefer to avoid the hills, it’s better to drive to the theatre, where plenty of accessible parking is available by the entrance – with striking views across the valley. The venue welcomes disabled visitors: there’s good access into the building and four wheelchair spaces in the auditorium, as well as automatic doors. Tours of the backstage area, including the Green Room, are available (though this is not suitable for wheelchair users due to the stairs), and can be conducted as a touch tour that even covers the set. Volunteer audio-describers can be brought in, if booked in advance, and guide dogs are welcome with prior notice; the theatre is also fitted with a hearing loop and IR system. Captioned, relaxed and BSL-interpreted performances are also staged here. The art gallery is mostly accessible, though about a quarter of it is upstairs without lift access.

FOOD & DRINK

The theatre’s Festival Restaurant and Café Bar serves a lunch and evening menu, plus less formal coffee and snacks, all accompanied by glorious views.

153 V&A Dundee

Address: 1 Riverside Esplanade, Dundee DD1 4EZ
Web: www.vam.ac.uk/dundee
Email: access@vanda-dundee.org
Tel: 01382 411611
Hours: daily 10am–5pm
Dates: closed 25–26 Dec
Entry: free; charge for select exhibitions

Dundee is undergoing a dazzling transformation. In the middle of a thirty-year £1-billion redevelopment programme to transform five miles of land along its waterfront, a surge of new bars, restaurants and attractions are breathing new life into the city. V&A Dundee opened in 2018 in a prime location on the banks of the River Tay and is the jewel in Dundee’s crown.

The waterfront V&A Dundee is Scotland’s first design museum. Japanese architect Kengo Kuma drew inspiration from the cliffs along Scotland’s east coast for the building; its curving walls clad in rough stone rise from the Tay to create the impression of a plunging cliff-face. Inside the state-of-the-art building you’ll discover the Scottish Design Galleries (free), showcasing the history of Scottish design from fashion to furniture, architecture to healthcare; highlights include an Alexander Campbell eighteenth-century pistol and a winged tiara encrusted with 2500 diamonds. Other galleries feature the work of emerging designers and artists and compelling temporary exhibitions, while the V&A’s range of workshops, tours, talks and events make for an engaging calendar. The museum also has a learning centre, auditorium, restaurant, café bar, gift shop and an outdoor terrace offering beautiful views of the River Tay.

While there is no dedicated car park at the V&A Dundee, six accessible bays can be found just across from the museum in the public car park. Smooth paths run along the waterfront to the step-free entrance via automatic doors. A lowered wheelchair-accessible information desk (with an induction loop) welcomes you to the museum. You can pick up leaflets, borrow a wheelchair or buy tickets here. There’s lift access to all galleries, where exhibits are spread out with interactive displays and plenty of hands-on learning. These areas can often get crowded, but there’s a quiet room available for some time out. Seating areas are located around the museum, and there’s space outside on the terrace to admire the lovely views. Spacious disabled toilets feature on each level, as well as a Changing Places facility on level 1, with an adult-sized changing bench, ceiling track hoist and plenty of space to manoeuvre; ask staff for an access code. Free, pre-bookable access tours run on the first Monday of each month, and BSL-interpreted and live audio-described tours can also be arranged for visitors with sensory impairments. These tours feature handling objects that visitors can touch and can be booked via email: access@vandadundee.org. Concession tickets are available for disabled visitors and carers receive free admission to paid exhibitions.

FOOD & DRINK

The Living Room café on the ground floor serves quick snacks, cakes and drinks. Choose Tatha Bar and Kitchen for a proper sit-down meal, with a range of locally sourced dishes and a children’s menu. For those who’d rather bring their own, you can eat in the picnic room on level 1 during school holidays and on weekends.

154 St Andrews, Fife

The beautiful little town of St Andrews (www.visitstandrews.com), set on the east coast of Fife, is widely known as the home of golf – though these days it’s just as likely to conjure up thoughts of Prince William and Kate Middleton, who famously met while studying at the town’s university.

Having already celebrated its six-hundredth anniversary, the university is the oldest in Scotland and a major presence in the old town centre. Take a wander into St Mary’s College, on South Street, to admire the stunning sixteenth-century architecture and expansive quad within – there’s level access through the main gate, though the cobbles may be a little bumpy. Another university building worth visiting is St Salvator’s Chapel, on North Street, home to the exquisitely carved medieval tomb of Bishop Kennedy and some striking stained-glass windows. There are steps up to the entrance, but if you call ahead (01334 462866) staff will put a ramp in place.

To many visitors, however, St Andrews is all about golf: as well as being the base of the R&A (the sport’s governing body, and organiser of the Open Championship), the town is home to some world-famous golf courses, including the revered Old Course, on the northwest edge of town. On Sundays, the Old Course is open to the public (unless a big competition is taking place) – it’s quite a sight to see people pushing prams and walking dogs on some of golf’s most hallowed turf. A good place to satisfy your golf interest is the British Golf Museum, on Bruce Embankment (01334 460046, www.britishgolfmuseum.co.uk), which charts the history of the game with a series of engaging exhibits and multimedia displays. The museum is fully accessible, with four disabled spaces in its car park, a ramped entrance, level access inside and an accessible toilet.

A short distance from the museum, glorious West Sands Beach stretches north up the coastline. There’s plenty of free parking along the coast road, and while the beach itself isn’t easily accessed in a wheelchair, the grassy area running alongside it is a great spot for a picnic, sandwiched between the sea dunes and the Old Course. There are a couple of public disabled toilets along here, and a RADAR key-accessible toilet at Bruce Embankment, near the edge of town. There’s also another handy, RADAR-key accessible toilet in the town centre at Church Square. In terms of getting around, St Andrews is fairly flat and straightforward to navigate in a wheelchair – and there’s not too much ground to cover. There’s also a good provision of on-street Blue Badge parking around town.

155 Steamship Sir Walter Scott, Perthshire

Address: Trossachs Pier, Loch Katrine, by Callander FK17 8HZ
Web: www.lochkatrine.com
Tel: 01877 332000 or 376315

Hours: Mar–Nov daily cruises of 1 or 2 hours, departing Trossachs Pier 10.30am, 1pm & 2.30pm, June–Sept also at 4pm; check website for exact timetable and details of Santa and New Year cruises in Dec & Jan

Dates: no cruises Feb
Entry: 2-hour return trip from Trossachs Pier to Stronachlachar
[D]£18.50 [C]50% discount [A]£18.50 [5–16s]£10.50 [Con]£17; 1-hour cruise from Trossachs Pier
[D]£15.50 [C]50% discount [A]£15.50 [5–16s]£9 [Con]£14; [under 5s and dogs]£2 all sailings

Turn the clock back to the days when Victoria was on the throne by boarding this delightful little ship and marvelling at the stunning scenery of Loch Katrine and the surrounding peaks. It’s an opportunity for a short cruise aboard a piece of maritime history – and you can enjoy a glass of something, or a cappuccino, as you drink in some of Scotland’s finest scenery.

Set amid the stunning lochs and mountains of the Trossachs, and only an hour from Glasgow, the SS Sir Walter Scott now carries tourists the five-mile length of Loch Katrine – which has been the source of Glasgow’s drinking water since 1900 – from its home port of Trossachs Pier in the east to Stronachlachar in the west. Built at Dumbarton, and named after the writer Sir Walter Scott (whose poem The Lady of the Lake was set around the loch), the ship was then dismantled and transported overland to the loch – a serious feat of logistics in 1900. Another character intrinsically linked to both Scott and Loch Katrine is Rob Roy MacGregor, born on the shores of the loch and elevated to legendary status by Scott’s writings. If you’re a fan of machinery, check out the engine room, visible from windows on deck level. No longer coal-fired, the ship now runs on bio-diesel, plying the same route today that it has chugged over for more than a century.

There are nine disabled parking spaces by the toilet block, near the booking kiosk and ship and, on the other side, the lift-accessed Steamship Café, which has an accessible toilet, too. Once you’re booked, you’ll find level access all the way to the gangplank, which has a small step on and off. Once on board, the forward lounge and bar are accessible, as is the disabled toilet on the main deck. If you disembark at Stronachlachar, there’s an accessible café and conservatory at the pier with toilet facilities. If you’d like to extend your trip overnight, Loch Katrine Eco Camp has one wheelchair-accessible lodge called Loch Arklet (full details on the loch website).

FOOD & DRINK
Sandwiches, soft drinks and ice cream are available from Katrine Café at the booking kiosk. On board, drinks and light snacks are available. On shore, The Steamship Café has a good range of hot food, plus an outside terrace with great views; it’s accessed by lift and has an accessible toilet.

156 Gliding with Walking on Air, Kinross-shire

Address: Scottish Gliding Centre, Portmoak Airfield, Scotlandwell near Kinross KY13 9JJ
Web: www.walkingonair.org.uk; www.scottishglidingcentre.co.uk
Tel: bookings 01592 840543
Hours: flying day is Fri, other dates possible by prior arrangement
Dates: all year, but most frequently in spring and summer
Entry: £50 for a 15- to 30-minute trial flight, plus 3-months’ trial membership allowing flights in that period for £8 launch and 25p per minute in the air

Walking on Air is a charity set up to allow people with access needs a sense of adventure by soaring the thermals using a modified glider. The club uses the Gliding Centre facilities (operated by the Scottish Gliding Union) at Portmoak Airfield, and the clubhouse has panoramic views of the airfield.

The Chairman of Walking on Air, Dave Tuttle (a wheelchair user himself), is passionate about flying and the opportunities it offers for integration – the club works with BLESMA (a charity supporting ex-service personnel injured in combat) and has a growing membership from all walks of life. Go along for a trial flight and experience the adrenaline rush of the launch and landing, the almost spiritual experience of being up high as you soar quietly above the mountains, and the mesmerising views of the peaks and lochs far below. Gliding seems to make everyone a bit poetic. Even if you’re not sure about flying yourself, you’re welcome to come and meet the enthusiastic members, watch others fly and enjoy a relaxing day out. For flying, they have a two-seater K21 training glider, known as “WA1”, with hand controls fitted front and back. The Scottish Gliding Union has converted one of its gliders, as well, in case WA1 is out of action. The Scottish War Blinded group from Edinburgh visit the venue on a regular basis.

The Scottish Gliding Union supports Walking on Air, with accessible parking adjacent to the clubhouse and ramped access into the clubhouse. Inside, there’s a café, overnight accommodation (accessible though not specifically adapted) and an accessible toilet and shower.

FOOD & DRINK The homemade food at the clubhouse café is great value: the full breakfast should set you up for a flight, and you can calm your nerves at the bar afterwards.

157 Royal Yacht Britannia, Edinburgh

Address: Porta, Ocean Drive, Edinburgh, EH6 6JJ
Web: www.royalyachtbritannia.co.uk
Tel: 0131 5555666
Hours: Nov–Mar 10am–3.30pm; Apr–Oct 9.30am–4.30pm (last admission 2.30pm on 24 Dec & 3pm on 31 Dec)
Dates: closed 25 Dec & 1 Jan

Berthed at the Porta quayside shopping mall, the Royal Yacht Britannia provides an intimate glimpse into how the royal family lived on their floating home. With little off-limits from bow to stern and keel to bridge, it also gives a rare insight into how a naval ship was run and staffed. It’s unlikely that there will be another royal yacht, so Britannia is a unique attraction which naval buffs, ardent monarchists and fans of engineering can all enjoy. Plush but not ostentatious, the interior is filled with one-of-a-kind artefacts and photographs of world leaders – it’s a fascinating snapshot of an interesting period of history. Design students will marvel at how much can be shoe-horned into a small space, while would-be sailors can imagine being in command on the bridge, taking port in the officer’s wardroom or being an engineer down below.

All entrances to the yacht are accessible, with visitors accessing each level of the yacht by onshore lift – this means exiting and re-entering Britannia several times, which sounds tiresome but is well organised and quite seamless. The floor surfaces between the lift and on board vary from vinyl floors to wooden decking, metal ramps, on-board ramps with hard-wearing surfaces and occasional rubberised mats. The tour route is well-signed, and generally accessible independently, although they specify a maximum width of 670mm, so larger electric wheelchairs will struggle in some of the narrower areas. Assistance may be required when boarding or leaving the yacht and on some of the ramped areas, but staff are on hand to help. There’s a spacious, well-maintained accessible toilet with grab rails immediately prior to boarding, plus similar toilets on four levels on board. Some eighty Blue Badge spaces are available on levels E and C and the ground floor of the Porta multi-storey car park; all are adjacent to lifts, with level E (18 spaces) giving level access to the Britannia visitor centre. There’s a hearing loop in the spacious shop, and a large-print guide and tablets that give a BSL video tour of the yacht are available. Staff are looking at improving facilities for visitors on the autism spectrum; in the meantime, as it’s a busy and popular attraction, call to discuss any special needs and check when a quieter time is to visit.

FOOD & DRINK

The Royal Deck Tearoom on the top deck has high glass walls with fantastic views across the Firth of Forth; it serves drinks, cakes and scones baked on board, and light meals, using local produce where possible (wheat- and gluten-free options are available). If you can’t manage the stairs, access is via the original internal lift, and staff can help open the heavy doors.

158 Scottish Seabird Centre, East Lothian

Address: The Harbour, North Berwick EH39 4SS
Web: www.seabird.org
Tel: 01620 890202
Hours: daily from 10am, closing varies between 4pm and 6pm, see website for details; last admission 45 mins before closing
Dates: closed 25 Dec

On the shoreline of ancient North Berwick, the Scottish Seabird Centre offers unrivalled views out to the Firth of Forth and North Sea. The vista is dominated by the Bass Rock – a steep-sided extinct volcanic plug, two and a half miles out to sea, and home (at peak times) to more than 150,000 gannets.

The bright and airy visitor centre commands centre stage on the end of the town’s old harbour wall. The ground floor houses a gift shop and café, but downstairs is where the treasure lies: simultaneously fun and educational, the Discovery Centre allows visitors to get to know the local seabirds and marine wildlife. There are numerous live interactive cameras that are easy to operate, even for children and visitors with all but the most limited hand function. In summer, close-ups of Bass Rock gannetry and puffin colonies on nearby islands are stunning, and in autumn and winter there is the chance to see seal mothers suckling their pups on the shore. The Flyway Tunnel simulator lets you experience the feeling of bird take-off and migration, using sound effects and strong fans to imitate the buffeting of the wind. However, the incline, which helps to give the impression of lift, may be too steep for some wheelchair users. The Turtle and Ray Zone features stunning photos of each species, and fascinating facts about their connections to Scotland’s seas. Did you know, for example, that the largest of all turtles, the leatherback, has been spotted in the Firth of Forth, and fifteen different species of rays and skates can be found in Scottish waters?

Ideas >> Birds

Abbotsbury Swannery (Dorset DT3 4JG; www.abbotsbury-tourism.co.uk) A great visit all year round, but the fluffy cygnets you’re likely to see in May and June are a real treat. There are two accessible, packed-gravel paths around the site.

RSPB Ribble Discovery Centre (Lancashire FY8 1BD; www.rspb.org.uk) Less than seven miles from Blackpool, this is an oasis of calm on the Fylde Peninsula, and the most important estuary site in England. A hard-surfaced path around the lake and an accessible boat trip make visiting a treat.
This is an excellent and fully accessible place to visit. Indeed, its very popularity can create the only barriers to a visit, as it can get crowded with visitors. At peak times, the five Blue Badge parking bays at the front of the entrance fill up quickly. The helpful staff have experience with those on the autism spectrum and, if you call ahead, they can advise on quieter times to visit. The visitor centre has a push-button automatic door and in the Discovery Centre displays are low-set to suit wheelchair users. A 55-seat catamaran offers boat trips from the centre, but cannot accommodate wheelchair users.

FOOD & DRINK

The glass-fronted café serves fish and chips, pasta and baked spuds at reasonable prices – check the specials board too. The children’s menu features all the usual suspects: nuggets, sausages, chips, etc.

The shadow of the long extinct volcano of Arthur’s Seat is an apt setting for a venue offering a potted history of the planet. At Dynamic Earth in Edinburgh, complex and varied scientific subjects are explained with ease and enthusiasm.

With clever use of video and sound, the descent in the “time machine” (in reality, a highly accessible lift) transports visitors backwards from the present day, through the history of time, to the formation of the universe. At the end of the short journey, the doors of the time machine open onto the bridge of a spaceship where huge screens display Hubble Telescope images of the Big Bang. And from that point – going forward through time – the story of the creation of our Earth and continents is told via a series of spectacular 3D, 4D and tactile exhibits. In Restless Earth, the floor shudders with the colossal force of an earthquake and the icebergs in Polar Extremes are authentically chilly to touch. On the incredible 4DVENTURE expedition, you’ll be guided by a CGI pilot on a flight from the Arctic to the tropical rainforest – it is such a realistic experience that you’ll even feel G-force and sense your tummy roll during turbulence.

Dynamic Earth’s glass-fronted, marquee-style, Millennium Dome-inspired construction stands out from the Old Town buildings nearby and contrasts with the futuristic Scottish Parliament building – it’s well signposted and easy to find. The underground car park has numerous disabled bays and lift access to the entrance. Wheelchair users and their friends and family can stay together throughout – seeing and touching the exhibits from the same angles. Ear defenders are available and pre-booked tickets get priority entry; there’s a sensory map and access details on the website. This is an inclusive, multi-sensory, seamless experience – a triumph of accessibility.

FOOD & DRINK

The bright, clean and spacious Food Chain Café serves a decent selection of meals at different times of the day, from excellent coffees and muffins to meatballs and chips; daily specials and meal deals are available in the café section.
160 Scottish National Gallery and Scottish National Portrait Gallery, Edinburgh

Address: SNG, 1 The Mound EH2 2EL; SNPG, 1 Queen Street EH2 1JD
Web: www.nationalgalleries.org
Tel: 0131 6246200
Hours: both daily 10am–5pm, plus SNPG Thu to 7pm
Dates: closed 25–26 Dec
Entry: free, except for some major exhibitions (see website)

Right in the heart of Edinburgh, just off Princes Street, lies the Scottish National Gallery complex, whose three interconnected buildings house the Royal Scottish Academy, the Weston Link (a shopping and eating centre) and, most notably, the Scottish National Gallery. The gallery is home to the national collection of fine art, which, for its size, equals any other gallery in the world.

Masterpieces from Raphael, Titian, El Greco, Velázquez, Rembrandt and Rubens vie for attention with Impressionist works by the likes of Monet, Cézanne and Degas, and Post-Impressionists including van Gogh and Gauguin – all superbly displayed in an impressive Neoclassical building. The gallery also houses Antonio Canova’s stunning sculpture The Three Graces, although this work splits its time between here and the V&A. And above all, there’s a comprehensive display of Scottish painting, with works by all the major names, including Allan Ramsay, David Wilkie and William McTaggart. Perhaps the best-known painting is Sir Henry Raeburn's The...

Parking can be tricky in the city centre, but there’s a handful of Blue Badge bays in a pedestrianised area right outside the gallery (just off The Mound). These bays are currently suspended because of construction work that may last until late 2020; if you are visiting before then, call ahead for advice. There is also an accessible gallery bus – if you park at Modern One, you can take the bus to both galleries. The Scottish National Gallery complex is fully accessible over all levels. Tours catering for a range of disabilities can be arranged by contacting the education department in advance.

Just a few streets away, on Queen Street, is the excellent Scottish National Portrait Gallery. Fully accessible throughout, the gallery houses an outstanding chronology of portraiture from the Reformation through to the present day, taking in subjects as diverse as Robert Burns, Robbie Coltrane and Sir Alex Ferguson. The gallery’s cathedral-like vaulted ceilings and Gothic windows provide a stunning backdrop to the collection, particularly in the Main Hall, the site of an extraordinary frieze depicting famous figures of Scottish history. The Portrait Gallery has two rooms that can be used as chill-out spaces for those on the autism spectrum if they are not already in use for another reason – call ahead and ask to speak to the education department before your visit. The closest Blue Badge parking is currently on the south side of St Andrew’s Square and George Street.

FOOD & DRINK

The Scottish National Gallery’s Scottish Café & Restaurant serves delicious snacks, full meals and afternoon teas sourced from Scottish suppliers, with indoor and outdoor seating overlooking Princes Street Gardens. There is also a new café, Espresso, at the entrance to the Scottish National Gallery. Over in the Scottish National Portrait Gallery, there’s a fully accessible café on the ground floor.

161 Scottish Parliament Buildings, Edinburgh

Address: The Royal Mile, Edinburgh EH99 1SP  Web: www.parliament.scot  Tel: visitor services 0131 3485200 or freephone 0800 0927600  Hours: Mon–Sat 10am–5pm, last entry 4.30pm  Dates: closed 24 Dec–8 Jan  Entry: free

Opening in 2004, the new Scottish Parliament building, at the bottom of the Royal Mile, has become a fixture on the Edinburgh tourist list partly due to its award-winning design by architect Enric Miralles, who died before its completion, and the political and financial drama that surrounded its creation. These controversies – selecting a Spanish architect, swollen project costs (it went ten times over budget) and polarising design – did nothing to dampen the spirit of the Scottish Parliament, which creates legislation in devolved matters from this building.

There are a range of exhibitions and events on offer here, including a number of well-executed tours on themes from architecture to art and photography. Committee hearings and debates can also be attended as part of a visit. Friendly and knowledgeable staff are on hand throughout the building, which was constructed with inclusion in mind. One of the themes of the original design was transparency: there is a lot of natural light and stunning views from the many windows. When parliament is sitting it can get very busy; people with sensory or hidden disabilities who find crowds and noise a challenge may want to avoid these periods.

There is no dedicated accessible parking for the Scottish Parliament, but there are Blue Badge spaces in Horse Wynd; Blue Badge holders can also park on the single yellows on the surrounding streets. There’s an accessible entrance, and once inside the building, everyone must go through the airport-style security check (an online video shows what this involves). During busy periods there may be queues to get in, but staff, who receive ASC training, are there to help; call visitor services before your trip to get the most directed support. If you choose to go on a tour (which can be pre-arranged with a BSL interpreter), there’s quite a lot of distance to cover, but there’s ample seating throughout, and wheelchairs can be reserved in advance. It pays to remember that this is a working building; bells and Tannoy announcements occur throughout the day, although there’s a quiet area for people with sensory or hidden disabilities in need of some time out. Because this is a secure building, visitors are given a pass and escorted by a member of staff for the tour, taking the pressure off carers, who won’t need to worry about choosing routes, locating lifts and so on. Each committee room has space for a wheelchair in the public gallery, as does the parliamentary chamber. Hearing loops are found in key visitor areas and videos in the exhibition have subtitles and BSL interpretation, while all main signs have Braille. Assistance dogs are welcome, too. Accessible toilets are found throughout the building, and there’s a Changing Places toilet on the ground floor with a hoist, changing bed and plenty of space to move around.

FOOD & DRINK The accessible on-site café serves a selection of sandwiches and hot dishes, but you’ll find more atmospheric options by venturing into Edinburgh.

For all its appeal as an attractive capital, Edinburgh is perhaps best known for its incredible annual festival, which takes place each August and transforms the city into an overwhelming mass of cultural activity. “Edinburgh Festival” is an umbrella term that encompasses several different festivals, but the principal events are the Edinburgh International Festival and the much larger Edinburgh Festival Fringe. With thousands of performances – including dance, opera, music and theatre – the majority of the International Festival takes place in permanent traditional theatre-style settings, while the Fringe transforms the city streets into a stage for live acts. From chess to ballet, pole-dancing acrobatics to children’s comedy, both festivals offer unbelievable shows from around the world.

The sheer volume of the Festival’s output can be bewildering, and choosing what to see can feel like the biggest challenge. If you enjoy the dynamism of a festival (and are comfortable with crowds), you can catch some of the Fringe street performances, busking and live statues. Dates, venues, names, star acts, happening bars and burning issues change from one year to the next – this unpredictability is one of the Festival’s greatest charms. Another is that many of the performances take place against the backdrop of Edinburgh’s medieval streets, reformation-era and eighteenth- and nineteenth-century buildings. Visitors who want something quieter, away from the hustle and bustle of the Fringe, can opt for the calmer events of Edinburgh Art Festival and Edinburgh International Book Festival, also gracing the city in August.

Both Edinburgh International Festival and Edinburgh Festival Fringe have made significant strides towards becoming more inclusive in recent years. Inevitably, the city swells in August and the streets around the Festival venues become crowded. While it is high energy and atmospheric, the Fringe itself is chaotic, unpredictable and risks causing a sensory information overload. To make the experience easier, the Fringe has prepared a downloadable Social Story, with a video about street events, and sensory backpacks can be borrowed from various points around the city (holding a fidget toy, stress reliever, water bottle and ear defenders). Signed, audio-described and captioned performances are available, too; see the Fringe Festival website for accessible performance listings. A Disabled Access Day is run ahead of the Fringe in July for people wanting to familiarise themselves with the surroundings.
Edinburgh is a historic city, and the crowds, hills and cobbles can be hard to navigate for those with reduced mobility – your best bet is a powered wheelchair. Accessibility varies from venue to venue, so careful planning is essential. The International Festival provides a useful Access Guide (available in Braille, large print and downloadable audio file/CD format), detailing the main access points for each venue, and puts on additional access events as part of their programme. With a range of permanent and established venues, the International Festival can feel more predictable than the Fringe, and all theatres have accessible toilets. Touch Tours, audio-described, relaxed and BSL-interpreted performances are all available, as well as access discounts and a free carer ticket. The International Festival also runs its own Deaf Theatre Club, a deaf-led initiative aimed at offering deaf audiences a more inclusive experience. Staff working across both festivals receive basic disability-awareness and attitude training, and are clear and considerate communicators.

FOOD & DRINK

There is a level-access, outside café located at The Hub on the Royal Mile serving beverages and small meals. It’s a great place to people watch and take in other festivalgoers. There’s a quieter indoor café, too.

163 Riverside Museum, Glasgow

Address: 100 Pointhouse Place G3 8RS Web: www.glasgowlife.org.uk/museums Tel: 0141 2872729
Hours: daily 10am–5pm, except Fri & Sun 11am–5pm Dates: closed 1–2 Jan & 24–26 Dec Entry: free; parking free for Blue Badge holders

Housed in a contemporary, landmark building on the banks of the River Clyde, the Riverside Museum – subtitled “Scotland’s Museum of Transport and Travel” – is a vibrant celebration of Glasgow’s importance as a transport innovator.
Inside, you’ll find a vast and glorious collection of vintage and modern vehicles, including trams, buses, locomotives, subway carriages, taxis, cars and motorbikes, as well as numerous models of Clyde-built ships such as the Queen Mary and QE2. There’s an emphasis on social history, too, with atmospheric re-creations such as a Victorian subway station, complete with rolling stock and a 1900s street where you can visit various shops, including an Edwardian photography studio and a 1930s café.

Much thought has been given to access. There are a total of eighteen designated disabled car-parking spaces, and there’s also a disabled drop-off point at the entrance. With a front door you could drive a bus through, there’s no problem getting inside. The reception desk has a lowered section and – like all customer service points – is fitted with a hearing loop. There are two accessible lifts in the exhibits, one in the Caledonian 123 and one in the South African locomotive, and virtually the whole attraction is barrier-free. Many of the exhibits have accompanying audio or video displays, with subtitles on all video displays, while the ones with green information screens have BSL interpretation. Many of the exhibits are there to be touched, to help enhance the experience. There are three fully accessible toilets on the ground floor and one on the first floor. There are a couple of autism-friendly kits, containing ear defenders and gadgets to help engage children on the autism spectrum. With these families in mind, the museum does not have any background music playing.

FOOD & DRINK

An upstairs coffee bar gives great views of the river and serves very fine coffee. Downstairs, hot food is served in the spacious café, which has table service.

Legendary Scottish architect and artist Charles Rennie Mackintosh drew up plans for the House for an Art Lover in 1901, but it wasn’t built until the 1990s; consequently, this elegant house boasts all the hallmarks of a Mackintosh creation with the accessibility of a modern building.

The architects charged with its construction worked closely from the original designs. Mackintosh pioneered the Art Nouveau movement in the UK, and the building is emblematic of his desire to make the functional beautiful. Inside, all his signature designs are present – the high-backed chairs with their robust right angles, the softly tinted stained glass and, of course, the iconic Mackintosh rose. The grand Main Hall was designed for entertaining, and all the other main rooms radiate from it. The rose motif is evident throughout the intimate Dining Room, but it’s the bright Music Room that really dazzles – bathed in natural light from the huge windows that lead onto the terrace, and featuring an ornate baby grand piano, the room is breathtaking. The souvenir shop is a great place to pick up gifts – you can buy Mackintosh-styled jewellery, as well as prints of his original work.
Only two levels of the four-storey building are open to the public – outside there's a ramp up to the house and one down to the café, as well as a lift between floors inside. To save the effort of going uphill, enter via the café and leave from the upper floor. There are four disabled parking spaces available in the staff car-parking area, and accessible toilets on the ground floor. The house has been designed with access in mind – some rooms are less spacious than others, but all surfaces are smooth. Staff are available if you need assistance. The excellent multilingual audio sets are induction-loop compatible. Carers go free but paperwork must be provided. Only yards away from the house are the tranquil Victorian Walled Gardens – particularly worth a look in high summer when the sweet peas are in bloom.

FOOD & DRINK The ground-floor Art Lover’s Café has a lovely, accessible terrace, and serves coffee, cakes and three-course lunches – the food is truly sublime.

165 Abbotsford, Roxburghshire

Address: Abbotsford, Melrose, Roxburghshire, TD6 9BQ
Web: www.scottsabbotsford.com
Tel: 01896 752043
Hours: daily: house, chapel & gardens Mar & Nov 10am–4pm, Apr–Oct 10am–5pm; visitor centre & café Apr–Oct 10am–5pm, Nov–Mar 10am–4pm (Jan & Feb only open Wed–Sun)
Dates: house, chapel & gardens closed Dec–Feb; visitor centre & café closed 25–26 Dec & 1–2 Jan
Entry: check website for prices; [C]free

The home of world-renowned author Sir Walter Scott, Abbotsford is where much of his best-known work was written. Situated by the banks of the Tweed in the Scottish Borders, this Baronial pile is essentially unchanged since Scott lived here, some two hundred years ago. You can visit the rooms where the author, poet and judge created world-famous literature, view artefacts and works belonging to him, and take in the views of the river and the Eildon hills beyond. This atmospheric building is as impressive inside as its imposing facade, from the dark entrance hall, lined with arms and militaria, to the study housing Scott's writing desk, the library, the well-preserved Chinese drawing room and the dining room, where, crippled by debt and poor health, Scott breathed his last.

There's step-free level access into the ultra-modern, accessible visitor centre, with a spacious foyer, shop and exhibition area. Here, audio-visual displays recount the house’s history. There's also a 3D tactile model of the house and gardens, and an outline map of the site with a raised key that shows the phases of Abbotsford's development. A hearing loop and large-print guides are available, but there's no BSL provision. There are spacious, spotless accessible toilets on the ground and upper floors of the visitor centre. If the lift in the visitor centre can't be used, there's alternative level access outside to the upper floor. The house itself is some 300 metres from the visitor centre, along a wide tarmac path that slopes gently downhill. There's step-free level access through a heavy glass door (assistance may be needed) into the dark entrance hall, which has low lighting to protect the unique artefacts within. Guides offer tours (pre-booking required), or audio tours with a small handset that you point at sensors in each room to get the commentary. Most rooms have level access, except one step in the private chapel, and there's respite seating around the house. After the house tour, you can explore the walled garden and extensive grounds, along smooth paths, though some woodland paths have a loose, hardcore surface that may require assistance. Six Blue Badge spaces are available in the car park, roughly 100 metres from the visitor centre via a tarmac path sloping gently upwards. If getting between the centre and the house is problematic, direct vehicle access to the house car park can be arranged (it’s best to book this in advance). Staff don't have specific autism training but are helpful and can advise about the quietest times to visit.

FOOD & DRINK

Upstairs at the visitor centre, the spacious, bright and airy Ochiltree's café serves drinks, great home-baking, snacks and meals, using local produce where possible; mains £8–12, sandwiches £7.50–9, cakes and pastries around £3. A take-away service is offered in the summer season.

166 Robert Burns Birthplace Museum, Ayrshire

Address: Murdoch’s Lone, Alloway, Ayr KA7 4PQ Web: www.burnsmuseum.org.uk Tel: 01292 443700

Occupying a striking stone, glass and timber structure surrounded by stunning gardens, the Robert Burns Birthplace Museum exuberantly celebrates the life and prodigious talent of Scotland’s most cherished poet.

The main museum – a modern, spacious and barrier-free building – houses the world’s largest collection of Burns’ manuscripts, along with many of the poet’s personal possessions, from his desk, chair and writing set through to his pistols and waistcoat.
buttons. Listening posts play evocative recordings of his most popular works, and there’s even a jukebox where you can select Burns’ songs, categorised by styles such as “punk”, “tear-jerkers” and “power ballads”. Displays also give a flavour of Burns’ colourful private life – a glance at his family tree reveals he’d fathered thirteen children by five different women by the time he died, aged 37. Outside, wheelchair users can easily navigate Poet’s Path through the lovely grounds to reach the modest Burns Cottage (open 11am–4.30pm), where Burns was born in 1759. However, some of the neighbouring sites – which feature in the poet’s work – are less accessible, such as the Auld Kirk (which has a few steps) and Brig o’ Doon, which is cobbled.

Access to the main museum, however, is good, starting with the six accessible parking spaces near the front door, which is opened by a touch-pad control. Inside, the large reception desk is a good height for wheelchair users and is fitted with an induction loop. There’s a large and spotless disabled toilet in the foyer, with another one at Burns Cottage. There are two wheelchairs available to borrow, and the museum is on one level throughout. The main exhibition area is quite dimly lit – necessary to preserve the manuscripts – which may be an issue for some sight-impaired visitors. On the first Tuesday of each month (3–5pm), the museum and cottage hold accessible sessions, when the sounds are reduced, lights turned up and interactive displays switched off for those with visual, hearing and sensory conditions; see website for details.

FOOD & DRINK The on-site café/restaurant has a great choice of cakes, pastries and sandwiches made to order, as well as a good selection of hot food, all locally sourced where possible – a delightful space to enjoy lunch.

RSPB Conwy Nature Reserve is the perfect place to get back to nature. The estuary is home to many varieties of birds; the star species to tick off here are black-tailed godwits, shelducks and, with a bit more difficulty, water rails poking about furtively in the reeds. It is a fascinating place to visit, even for ornithological novices.

At Conwy you’ll find an impressive mix of untamed nature – including serious winds across the estuary – and decent access for all, which is a difficult trick to pull off. The boardwalk is superb, taking you straight into the reeds on a level wooden track. The main tracks are firm and hard, with only slight gradients, and because they are well drained, puddles are rarely an issue. The looser-surfaced, more distant trails can be difficult in poor weather though, and the boardwalk can get slippery when wet. The Grey Heron Trail, which leads around the perimeter of the reserve, returns to the visitor centre via the entrance driveway and main car park. In rain, it’s sensible to visit using a powered scooter, although updates are posted on the notice board when conditions get particularly challenging. The hides and screens are solidly constructed with hard floors, all adapted for the comfort of wheelchair users, with wide doorways, plenty of turning space and viewing points at various heights. A recreated village square, called Y Maes, includes an accessible landscaped area providing elevated views of the reserve and the Conwy valley, a play area, graffiti tunnel and picnic area.

The staff here are enthusiastically trying to improve accessibility at all times and are helpful without being fussy. The visitor centre has a welcoming reception area (with low counter and knee recess) and a well laid-out shop with spacious aisles and low displays. There are seven designated disabled parking spaces.

FOOD & DRINK The reserve’s wheelchair-accessible Waterside Coffee Shop is a wonderful place to enjoy a hot drink and bite to eat. With huge picture windows looking over the lagoon and to the Carneddau mountains, it’s a picturesque place for a cuppa.

A good place to take in the scenery is the accessible riverside promenade, which incorporates a park with a children’s play area and plenty of seating. From here, you can often see the atmospheric trails of steam coming from the Llangollen Railway (01978 860979, www.llangollen-railway.co.uk), which operates from a handsome old station across the river. Shining locomotives pull beautifully restored coaches through the Dee Valley, with access using a ramp up to the guard’s van for wheelchair users (it’s recommended to pre-book this carriage). The station has accessible toilets and wheelchair access to all platforms, plus two disabled parking spaces (not bookable) and possibilities for passenger drop-off if these are full; indeed, all the stations along the route have disabled access, except Berwyn. More nostalgic transport is on offer at Llangollen Wharf, up a steep hillside overlooking the town, where a horse-drawn narrowboat runs along a pretty canal (see p.214 for details).

Mention should also be made of the Llangollen Eisteddfod (www.international-eisteddfod.co.uk), a weeklong international music and folk dance festival held here every July. The festival has been going strong for more than seventy years, and regularly attracts the biggest names in the music world – previous participants have included Luciano Pavarotti, José Carreras and Nigel Kennedy, among others. It’s held in the town’s Royal International Pavilion, which has limited Blue Badge parking and wheelchair spaces (both best booked in advance with the box office, who can offer advice for visitors with specific requirements) and a hearing loop in the auditorium. Essential carers get a free ticket, although documentation must be supplied.

There’s no easy way to get to Llangollen on public transport – unless you’re coming by bus from a nearby town, such as Wrexham – so most visitors end up driving here. There are several Blue Badge spaces in the central car park on Market Street (you need to pay to park here), which also has an accessible toilet. The compact town centre is fairly flat, and getting around is pretty straightforward; though some of the pavements are rather narrow, most now have regular drop kerbs. As well as the attractions mentioned above, there’s lots of fun to be had just pottering around, exploring the shops and enjoying the views. There are also some terrific places to visit a short drive away, including the breathtaking Horseshoe Pass, high in the mountains, and the Pontcysyllte Aqueduct (see below), a UNESCO World Heritage Site. Visit the Tourist Information Centre on Castle Street (01978 860828) for more information.

The Llangollen Canal offers an alluring combination of tranquillity and superb Welsh scenery. In 2009, an eleven-mile stretch of it was declared a UNESCO World Heritage Site, together with the two-hundred-year-old Pontcysyllte Aqueduct, which carries the canal high over the River Dee.

it – the footpath, protected on one side by a metal railing, is just about wide enough for a wheelchair, but note that there’s no barrier between the path and the narrow canal trough running alongside it. A less daunting prospect is to take a boat across the aqueduct: the Vale of Llangollen Canal Boat Trust runs trips for up to twelve disabled passengers (up to four wheelchairs) in a specially adapted narrowboat with a hydraulic wheelchair lift, a disabled toilet and low windows providing exhilarating views.

Half-day trips follow the canal to Llangollen Wharf, five miles west, while full-day trips go all the way into the English county of Shropshire. All trips depart from Trevor Basin, adjacent to the aqueduct; there’s a drop-off point near the mooring, and a small car park about twenty yards away (with a RADAR key-accessible toilet). You book the whole boat for your party, and should arrange it well in advance; a donation of £85 is requested per trip.

Over at Llangollen Wharf, the Horse Drawn Boat Centre offers delightful 45-minute narrowboat trips, pulled by a horse plodding gently along the towpath. It’s a supremely leisurely affair, without even the sound of an engine to disturb the peace. The boats have ramped access for wheelchair users, who can sit in the open air or under cover – book ahead to be sure of a space. There’s no parking at the wharf, but visitors with restricted mobility can be set down at a drop-off point while a companion parks elsewhere; staff will advise you of the nearest parking spots. There’s a small disabled toilet at the wharf.

FOOD & DRINK

At Trevor Basin, the wheelchair accessible Telford Inn (01978 820469) serves decent food on the opposite side of the canal from the boat moorings – the Canal Boat Trust can drop you off on that side after your trip. Over in Llangollen Wharf, there’s a tearoom near the horse-drawn boat ticket office, with ramped access and a tempting array of homemade scones, cakes, soups and light meals.

170 Centre for Alternative Technology, Powys

After the oil crisis of 1974, a once-derelict slate quarry was turned into the Centre for Alternative Technology (CAT). Only a stone's throw from Machynlleth in the hills of Powys, the centre explores a more sustainable way of living, with much of the on-site technology developed and built here.

Getting to the centre is an experience in itself: CAT’s 60m, water-balanced and wheelchair-accessible cliff railway whisks visitors 200ft up from the car park to the beautiful main site, sensitively landscaped using local slate and wood. At the top, the atmosphere is calm, and most of the exhibits are outside. The seven acres of land are laden with display gardens, organic vegetables and an array of activities on offer; guided tours are led at noon and 2pm daily. A range of working demonstrations explore different sustainable systems, covering everything from wind, solar and water power to organic growing and recycling. The hands-on displays are perfect for children, though those with visual or mobility impairments might need assistance with some. The shop sells everything from information books to eco-friendly bath and shower products. It’s a truly unique day out, equipping visitors with new ideas on how to lead a more sustainable life and reduce their day-to-day impact on the planet.

There are two car parks at CAT; both have accessible bays, and the second is located at the top of the site (avoiding the cliff railway). The trails around the centre have been widened and levelled as far as possible, but due to the nature of the site there are still some steep, rough and shallow paths – especially around the polytunnel and garden beds. Information videos accompany some displays and a hearing loop is available, although the print on the information boards is small. Staff are on hand and happy to help. There are four accessible toilets located around the site. Entrance is free for carers.

FOOD & DRINK

The accessible on-site vegetarian café sells a selection of delicious hot food (served between noon and 3pm), snacks and drinks. The menu includes several gluten-free options.

Entry: [D]free [C]free [A]£13.50 [5–17]£6.75 [under 5s]free [Fam]£20.25 (1 adult, 3 children); group savings available; Links Pass Card and Essential Companion Card both valid

In a land of ruined castles, the scale and beauty of Powis Castle is quite staggering. Majestically located high in the Welsh hills, the medieval fortress houses an impressive collection of artefacts amassed over 400 years by the Herbert family, while the formal garden, dating back 300 years, is a riot of colour with Edwardian, Dutch, French and Italian influences.

Powis Castle is alive with history. On the site of an earlier Norman fort, the Castle was started in the reign of Edward I by the Gwenwynwyn family; in 1587, Sir Edward Herbert bought it and began to transform it into the Elizabethan palace that survives today. Wander through the beautiful rooms, filled with treasures from all over the world accumulated by successive owners. The Clive Room houses a remarkable collection of items from India and the Far East, the largest of its type in the UK, with diaries, notes, letters, paintings, tapestries, weapons and jewels. The gardens, designed by Welsh architect William Winde, are spectacular. Dropping down from the castle in four huge, stepped terraces, the design has barely changed since the seventeenth century, with a charming orangery and trim topiary. Pause to breathe in the glorious views across the surrounding countryside. Seasonal themed events include the Powis Pumpkin Trail at Halloween and Illuminated Gardens in the run-up to Christmas.

There’s an accessible car park about one hundred metres from the castle entrance, but the National Trust also provides vehicles (which can take wheelchairs) that service pick-up and drop-off points around the site, leaving from the main car park. Due to the historic nature of the building, some areas are more accessible than others, and there are thirteen steps to the castle entrance. Where access around the site is difficult, much thought and creativity has been put into putting alternatives in place. Although there is disabled access to the ground floor of the castle only, staff can provide a tablet showing a virtual tour of the upper rooms. Rest seats are provided in every room, and a Braille guide and information in large print is available. The castle also runs touch tours of the house and sensory tours of the garden, while BSL interpreters and hearing loops are due to be installed in 2020. The gardens are mostly accessible, and the sense of peace is palpable. The scent of flowers, birdsong and delightful vistas are guaranteed mood enhancers. Wheelchairs can be loaned from the Old Stables (booking advisable), and there are two accessible toilets. Carers and visitors with disabilities are admitted free of charge.

FOOD & DRINK

The spacious, airy café serves light snacks; for something more substantial, head to the restaurant. Both are accessible, with helpful and friendly staff.

172 Snowdonia Scenic Drive

Driving distance: 107 miles Approx driving time without stops: 3 hours 20 minutes

This meandering loop starting in Machynlleth and heading north to Beddgelert is one of the most scenic in Wales. Taking in valleys, mountains, majestic coastal scenery and Coed y Benin Forest Park, there are plenty of beautiful places to stop, stretch and enjoy the fresh air.

From Machynlleth – a handsome little town in the Dyfi Valley – take the A487 towards Dolgellau. Five miles up the road, past the beautiful beechwoods of the Tan y Coed forest reserve, you’ll pass the fascinating Centre for Alternative Technology (see page 215) and the signed turn-off for the Corris Craft Centre (www.corriscraftcentre.co.uk), worth a stop to browse through the jewellery, ceramics, glassware and other items sold here (there’s also an on-site accessible café, RADAR-key accessible Changing Places facility and a disabled toilet). Continuing north, look left for some impressive close-up views of Cadair Idris, southern Snowdonia’s most famous peak; you’ll also pass through the Mach Loop, an RAF training zone, so watch your head for low-flying fighter jets.

Keep driving north as the road merges into the A470. Pass Dolgellau and continue on the tree-lined A470 to reach the excellent Coed y Brenin Forest Park. Here, as well as admirable access facilities (disabled parking, lift access in the visitor centre, a hearing loop and accessible toilets), an all-ability walking trail leads through lush forest scenery. Visitors with accessibility needs can rent an adapted bicycle for a spot of mountain biking. There are picnic benches dotted around; alternatively, drop into the café for a locally sourced venison burger.

Take the A487, then the B4410, A4085 and A498 into Beddgelert. This pretty little village has an accessible information centre, a RADAR key-accessible public toilet and an accessible riverside walk, while nearby is a monument to the legend of Gelert. From here, retrace your route to the A4085, then follow the road through Penrhynneudraeth, over the River Dwyryd and onto the A496 towards Harlech. Harlech’s stunning thirteenth-century castle looms dramatically over the sea, visible for miles around, but sadly there is no wheelchair access. Continue down the coast to Barmouth, where accessible boardwalks lead along the beach. Stay on the A496 and follow a sign in the village of Pen-y-Bryn to the A493, which leads across the Penmaenpool toll bridge over the Mawddach Estuary. Trails for all abilities loop around the estuary (see www.mawddachestuary.co.uk), and there are spectacular views. Continue along the coast road – looking out for the knitted ogre at Llwyngwril – past Aberdyfi (with an accessible toilet) and back to Machynlleth. You can shorten the route by finishing your drive in Beddgelert (43.5 miles). For more details on disabled facilities in Snowdonia, visit www.snowdonia.gov.wales.

173 Bwlch Nant yr Arian, Ceredigion

Address: Ponterwyd, Aberystwyth SY23 3AB Tel: 01970 890453 Hours: visitor centre: daily 10am–5pm; kite feeding: daily 3pm summer, 2pm winter; shop: daily 11am–4.30pm; café: daily 10am–5pm, hot food 10am–3pm Dates: closed 25–26 Dec & 1 Jan Entry: free
At the head of a remote valley, nine miles inland from the busy coastal town of Aberystwyth, Bwlch Nant yr Arian is one of the main red kite feeding centres in Wales. The site offers visitors the rare opportunity to observe more than one hundred red kites at close quarters during the daily feedings, and also fosters a variety of graded forest walking, running and cycling routes to inspire all abilities and ages, including a popular accessible lakeside trail. The latter offers the best vantage points from which to watch these majestic birds of prey in the freedom of their open, upland environment.

Each afternoon, red kites fill the skies above the centre, gliding gracefully overhead before swooping down to feed. Their impressive numbers are testament to the collective conservation efforts which saved them from near extinction. They can be viewed at a distance from the visitor centre, or in closest proximity from the spacious, covered bird hide on the accessible Barcud Trail, with room for wheelchairs and scooters. This delightful route (0.6 miles) follows a level, circular path around the lake – with wooden seats and covered resting places along the way. It is shared by an optional audio trail of Welsh myths and folklore and a wooden animal-puzzle trail for younger visitors. With plenty of outdoor seating space, children’s play areas and adapted picnic tables, the visitor centre is the starting point for all the waymarked forest paths on site. While it can be busy during the holidays, the site is exceptionally well designed to accommodate a broad range of visitors, enabling everyone to enjoy the rugged isolation and beauty of the Cambrian mountains in all seasons, at their own pace.

There are three disabled bays on the ground level of the car park, some 20 metres from the visitor centre along a tarmac path. Inside, access is good, though some areas can get busy (including the café and the car park). There’s a hearing loop in the café and high visibility strips on doors, doorframes and steps. Access to the walking and bike trails, play area and bird hide is all out in the open in a relaxed, natural environment. While some visitors might feel anxious about the sheer numbers, speed and unpredictable flight of the wild birds, many find observing them so closely in their natural habitat an uplifting and inspiring experience. Staff all have disability training and can assist with individual needs. A large accessible toilet with plenty of space, grabrails, a lowered handbasin and a disabled shower facility is located in the main visitor centre. There’s a second accessible toilet outdoors.

FOOD & DRINK

The on-site café has tall glass viewing windows and a Makaton-style menu with signs and symbols developed with the help of a Local Health Board speech and language therapist. It offers a range of locally sourced hot and cold food and drink (£3–8) with good vegetarian options. Plenty of extra outdoor picnic tables line a new, decked area with views across the lake.

174 Gigrin Farm, Powys

Gigrin Farm in Powys became the Red Kite Feeding Station in 1993, following a request from the RSPB. The daily feeding of the birds – often hundreds of pairs – is an extraordinary sight and an increasingly popular attraction.

The site is a working farm, so unsurprisingly access isn’t perfect, but significant measures have been taken, and it is worth the effort to see this natural spectacle. Visitors can head to several kite-viewing hides just before feeding time, and watch as a quarter of a tonne of beef is distributed to the waiting birds that have flown in from the surrounding countryside. What follows is a riot of colour and noise as the kites – resplendent-looking raptors in chestnut, white and black plumage – vie with other birds for the food that has been scattered, and perform natural aerobatics that have become an entertaining feature of the visit. If you're lucky, you may also see buzzards, which often land to feed on the ground. The well-stocked shop is worth visiting, but the information and display area is in a separate two-storey building; the ground floor is split level, but has two separate entrances that allow access to the whole of the lower floor. Although steps to the upper floor leave some displays out of bounds to wheelchair users, they present no deterrent to the main event – seeing the kites being fed.

Gigrin Farm is accessed by a single-track tarmac road. There are no accessible bays – in fact, there's no formal parking area at all – and the space available is on a gentle gradient. The main area between the buildings has been tarred and there are no access problems across it or into any of the buildings, all of which have level access. If you need to, you can ask the staff for permission to park in one of the four spaces adjacent to the ramped entrance to the viewing hides. The accessible hides have designated low viewing points for wheelchair users, while a special wheelchair-accessible hide, designed for keen photographers with large cameras, can be reserved online (www.gigrin.co.uk/hide).

FOOD & DRINK

When it's your feeding time, try the wheelchair-accessible Old Swan Tea Rooms (01597 811060) on West Street in Rhayader. Alternatively, on summer afternoons an on-site café sells sandwiches, cakes and hot and cold drinks. A new, undercover wheelchair-accessible seating area is available just a few yards away.

175 Newport Parrog Coastal Trail, Pembrokeshire

Address: The Parrog, Newport SA42 0RW
Web: www.pembrokeshirecoast.wales
Tel: 01646 624800
(Pembrokeshire Coast National Park Authority)
Hours: year-round, daylight hours only
Dates: may close during adverse weather
Entry: free; parking free for Blue Badge holders

This short but very pretty half-mile stretch of the Pembrokeshire Coast Path is wheelchair accessible, giving disabled visitors a taste of the spectacular scenery offered by one of Britain’s most popular long-distance walking trails: www.pembrokeshirecoast.org.uk/website/AppAccess4All/newport_parrog.pdf shows a map of the walk.

Starting from the Parrog (old harbour) car park in Newport, the purpose-built trail heads east, skirting the estuary of the River Nevern and offering splendid, ever-changing views out to sea and upriver to the mountains. The gently undulating route takes you past reed beds, through trees, over streams and finally to the Iron Bridge – a particularly good place to spot wildlife – just over half a mile from the starting point. Bring your binoculars, and keep a look out for wigeon, teal, oystercatchers and kingfishers. The bridge marks the end of the accessible section of the path, and wheelchair users will have to turn and retrace their route. Allow half an hour or so each way – stopping here and there to appreciate the sense of tranquillity and open space.
Back at the car park, by the boathouse, a ramp leads onto the sand and a sheltered viewing area offers views of both the estuary and the sea. The car park has four Blue Badge spaces and a toilet block with a RADAR key-accessible toilet (note that the lights inside are movement-sensitive – if it goes dark, move!). From here, it’s about fifty yards to the start of the path, which has a well-maintained, dry compressed stone surface (though occasional potholes can become puddles in wet weather), and benches set back from the path at regular intervals.

FOOD & DRINK Near the car park, the Morawelon Restaurant (01239 820565) offers delicious local meats and fish in a fully accessible dining room with a disabled toilet.

176 Celtic Quest Coasteering, Pembrokeshire

Address: Abereiddy Bay, Berea, St Davids, Pembrokeshire, SA62 6DT
Web: www.celticquestcoasteering.com
Tel: 01348 837337
Hours: Mar–Oct daily 9am–9pm; call for details of hours Nov–Feb
Dates: Closed 1–18 Dec
Entry: the fee for everyone is £44 (minimum age is 8 years); discounts available for larger groups

An adventurous alternative to swimming for adrenaline junkies, coasteering turns the sea into a playground. Jump off cliffs, slip into the water, slither along slides and currents that nature has created, explore caves, go rock hopping and get lost in the infamous “washing machine” – if you dare!

Coasteering is a unique activity that takes swimming to the next level and uses the sea as a gym – it’s not often that you find rock slides that will plunge you into the water below, or can jump from a diving board made of natural rock. The “washing machine” and the “surfing platform” will both make you feel the true strength of the sea’s current. What’s more, Cleopatra Browne and her charming team at Celtic Quest ensure that you can be both daring and safe. The essence of this activity is adventure. Being able to swim is not essential, but a willingness to “have a go” is, as it’s a physically tough activity.

On arrival at Abereiddy Beach, there is plenty of space to park, but no specific accessible spaces. Parking is just a few steps from the beach, so you can get your wetsuit on and plunge straight in. The surface of the car park is hard and, although pebbly in places, much better for wheelchair users than sand. Those with impaired mobility will need assistance to get into the water, but Cleo and her team of strong helpers will be on hand and have you in giggles in an instant. The terrain around the water is often uneven, with a few ledges to rest on if needed. There are no steps, no queues and no leaflets to carry around – just the water straight in front of you.

When swimming out to sea, you can hold onto a float connected to one of the trip leaders, so you save your energy for the exciting bits and get a guided tour. Being able to walk is not essential as the group leaders will lift and support you, should diving off a twenty-foot cliff be your thing. Not everyone will be able to do this, but Cleo and her team push themselves to the limits in order to make it possible for as many people as they can. The sea is a huge sensory playground, with sights, smells and sounds that can’t be found elsewhere. The team are very keen to facilitate adventures for everyone, and excel at working with people with hidden disabilities. Due to the physical and sometimes risky nature of coasteering, the deaf or hard of hearing are recommended to bring along a hearing companion. If you’re visually impaired, be prepared to take a hands-on approach to coasteering and those taking you through it. There are no accessible toilets on site – the nearest one is a short drive away at The Shed bistro at Porthgain.

FOOD & DRINK
There’s a refreshment van on site, while the homely and reasonably priced Cambrian Inn in Solva, a fifteen-minute drive away, serves a mean burger – perfect after a water workout.

177 Brecon Canal Walk, Powys

Address: Monmouthshire and Brecon Canal, Canal Wharf, Brecon LD3 7EW
Web: www.breconbeacons.org/monmouthshire-brecon-canal
Tel: 01874 622485
Hours: daily dawn–dusk
Entry: free

Built between 1796 and 1812, the Monmouthshire and Brecon Canal linked landlocked Brecon with Newport and the Severn Estuary. No longer a route for transporting stone and processed lime, it is now affectionately known as the Mon & Brec, and is one of the most picturesque canals in the UK.

The complete towpath covers just over thirty miles between Brecon and Cwmbran and all along the way there are stunning views of mountains, river valleys, farmland and woodland, making this the perfect place for a peaceful stroll. A two-mile accessible section of the trail starts from Brecon Wharf and follows the canal as far as Brynich Lock and back. As well as stunning scenery, the trail passes interpretation boards, community art projects and two picnic areas with wheelchair-accessible tables – here, on a short track, is a reconstruction of one of the horse-drawn Hay Railway trams that once worked the length of the canal. A little further along there is a resting point with views over the River Usk – for a short while while the river flows alongside the canal. A brightly coloured canal boat called the Dragonfly (www.dragonfly-cruises.co.uk) is in operation sporadically – for those lucky enough to be present at the same time, it offers an alternative, fun and wheelchair-accessible way to reach the lock.

A small car park is located at Brecon, where there is a ramp onto the towpath. The start of the trail is narrow and uneven in places, but soon broadens out to become a wide and hard-surfaced cycle path, only restricted at bridges where headroom is also reduced. On wet days, deep puddles can form, so wheelchair users, mobility-impaired walkers and visitors with toddlers and pushchairs are advised to visit on sunny days – when the scenery and views are at their best anyway. Deaf and hearing-impaired visitors should be aware that this is a busy cycle route and while signs request that priority is given to pedestrians, many cyclists speed along, ringing their bells as the only sign of their presence. On return to the Brecon car park, avoid a push back up the ramp by using the road on the left of the bridge, just before the wharf. There are other barrier-free access points to the towpath at Talybont-on-Usk, Llangynidr to Llangattock, Gilwern and Govilon, but some of these have steep inclines.

FOOD & DRINK

The Waterfront Café & Bar (www.brycheiniog.co.uk/en/food-drink) is run by the Theatr Brycheiniog and open seven days a week.

178 Garwnant Forest Visitor Centre, Merthyr Tydfil

Address: Garwnant Visitor Centre, Cwmtaf CF48 2HU Web: www.naturalresources.wales, then search Garwnant Tel: 01685 722481 Hours: site open daily 10am–4pm, extended to 5pm in summer; check the website for latest opening hours Dates: closed 1 Jan & 25–26 Dec Entry: free; car park £2, minibus £5

Garwnant Visitor Centre makes an excellent launchpad for enjoying the forest, streams, waterfalls and fabulous views of this corner of the Brecon Beacons National Park.

Of particular interest to visitors with access needs is the waymarked all-ability trail, which is accessed from just outside the visitor centre (or from the car park), taking you on a short but very pretty woodland walk. Along the way, you’ll pass a pond with an accessible dipping platform, where you can investigate the underwater pondlife – always a big hit with children. Look out, too, for several striking animal sculptures, including a life-size stag. The path follows a fast-flowing river, which it crosses in several places, and takes in many beautiful trees, including a lovely willow tunnel. The trail is about half a mile long and takes about forty minutes to complete. Also on offer here is a kids’ mountain bike park and adventure playground, and a couple of longer trails, suitable for visitors with good mobility.

There are three Blue Badge bays in front of the on-site restaurant, with a couple of additional bays across the road from here. The visitor centre, restaurant and toilet block are arranged around a courtyard, and all offer level, easy access. There are separate male and female accessible toilets, and there’s also a RADAR key-accessible Changing Places toilet, with a ceiling hoist, full-sized changing bed and space for several carers. The all-ability trail is mostly hard-surfaced and has seating at regular intervals; note, however, that it includes some steep inclines – manual wheelchair users will require assistance from a fit companion, and people with limited walking ability may find it challenging. Those with an all-terrain powered chair or scooter will have no problem.

FOOD & DRINK The spacious restaurant offers snacks and meals, with a family-oriented menu. There’s also a wheelchair-accessible picnic table in the main car park.

Folly Farm is an award-winning attraction combining a farm, several adventure play areas, a vintage funfair and a zoo on a two-hundred-acre site near the Pembrokeshire Coast National Park.

With so much on offer, it can be hard to know where to begin. One of the first areas you come to is the popular Jolly Barn, where you get to meet a host of farmyard animals – and can even try milking a goat. Moving on, you’ll come to the fair, full of classically restored rides, including a beautiful “Golden Gallopers” carousel. Beyond the fair lies the zoo area, home to more than one hundred species of animal, from giraffes, lions and penguins to rhinos, sloths, meerkats and squirrel monkeys. Dotted throughout the site are a number of indoor and outdoor adventure play areas, including a go-kart track, Black Bart’s Pirate Cove and a big wheel, not to mention the Land Train tractor ride, which takes visitors around the paddocks to see unusual breeds and red deer – there’s ramped access to the first carriage and the driver will help you up.
Access at Folly Farm is generally good. On arrival, head for the disabled car park, which is located close to the entrance. Inside, there are spacious, disabled toilets, plus a Changing Places facility with a bed and hoist. They also have several standard wheelchairs that are free to borrow (£10 refundable deposit required). All the paths around the site are level: some have a tarmac surface, while others are of compressed gravel. Most should present no problems for wheelchair users, though the ones around the zoo area can get muddy during wet weather. In addition, when it’s been wet, wheelchair users should take extra care on the ramps to and from the underpass beneath the road, and also on some of the ramps at the enclosures. The big wheel and Land Train both have accessible carriages and step-free access; you are advised to wait for the driver’s assistance before boarding the Land Train. Rides in the vintage funfair all have at least one or two steps but staff are always on hand to offer assistance. An induction loop is fitted in the theatre, and assistance dogs are welcome throughout the whole site, including the zoo and farm.

FOOD & DRINK There are plenty of places to eat, including a table-service restaurant, The Hungry Farmer, with a menu that lists plenty of gluten-free, vegetarian and vegan options. There’s also a Burger Bar restaurant, the Cwtch Coffee Café serving cakes and cream teas, and the Carousel Woods Café with ice cream and candyfloss. Some outlets only open seasonally. Picnics are allowed if you prefer to take your own.

180 WWT Llanelli Wetland Centre, Carmarthenshire

Covering 450 acres and taking in various habitats, WWT Llanelli Wetlands is home to tens of thousands of migratory birds, as well as abundant plant and animal life. Visitors are encouraged to explore the wetlands, delight in the environment and participate in the centre’s exciting roster of organised activities – from pond dipping and duck feeding to canoe safaris.

The site takes in a collection of lakes, scrapes, pools, streams and lagoons, flanked by the salt marshes and shore of the pretty Burry inlet. Meandering wetland paths lead through a jungle of reeds; look out for water voles, herons, dragonflies and the centre’s flock of Caribbean flamingoes. Going about their daily business, other resident animals include otters, ducks, geese and a host of migratory birds. A 360-degree viewing tower affords brilliant views across the site, while the interactive Water Lab gives valuable insight into the workings of Llanelli’s sustainable drainage systems. To cover more ground, hire a bike to peddle or a canoe to paddle around (extra charge).

Parking is free at Llanelli, and there are designated disabled bays close to the centre’s entrance. Inside access is wheelchair friendly, and – as this is a new building – all disabilities have been considered and catered for. The centre is light and open, with stunning views across the wetlands. There are two easily accessible toilet blocks with all the necessary aids to ensure wheelchair users have a comfortable, stress-free experience. Outside, the attraction is organised around flat, paved pathways. Wheelchair users and most people with impaired mobility will be able to move around independently, getting fresh air and exercise in a quiet and reflective environment – a positive experience for those with mental-health challenges, too, as well as those living with dementia. The only inaccessible area is the viewing tower which has narrow, steep steps; gates, required for animal safekeeping, must also be negotiated. Seating areas and accessible bird-watching hides are peppered throughout the site, and information is clearly signposted. A map is available in large print on request. Carers are admitted for free.

FOOD & DRINK

The spacious, accessible and modern café overlooks the pond, where you can watch happy children and parents feeding the ducks and geese. Reasonably priced hot and cold food is available; cooked meals (noon–2.30pm) include vegetarian and vegan options.

181 National Waterfront Museum, Swansea

Address: Oystermouth Road SA1 3RD
Web: www.museum.wales/swansea
Telephone: 029 20573600

Hours: daily 10am–5pm
Dates: closed 1 Jan & 24–26 Dec
Entry: free

The National Waterfront Museum tells the proud story of industry and innovation in Wales, through the changing lives of the people involved. Stressing the international importance of Wales as “the world’s first industrial nation”, the museum links the past to the present using fabulous interactive technology.

The museum building is impressive – a massive brick former warehouse on the dockside, enhanced by a modern slate and glass wing. The exhibits are arranged into fifteen categories, including energy, people, communities, land, coal and metals, and each area has its own soundscape, evoking the theme. The connection between culture and history is brought home by examining how lives and work have been linked to Wales’ changing industrial heritage. If you plan to visit, be sure to check the website for the packed events schedule, which includes activities such as hands-on workshops, historical talks, science activities and many seasonal events.

The museum makes a big effort to be inclusive. There are five disabled bays on Burrows Place, plus more disabled spaces in St David’s car park opposite (sat nav SA1 3NG) – parking here is free on Sundays. Mobility scooters are welcome at the museum; however, only a limited number are permitted at any one time – call 029 20573600 in advance to check. Most entrances and interconnecting doors are operated by large push buttons, and there are plenty of places to sit, accessible toilets – including a Changing Places room – baby-changing facilities and a children’s play area in the café. All areas and some of the displays have interactive touch-screens, complete with audio description, and real-time BSL interpretation. There’s a chill-out area with relaxed lighting and comfortable seating available for those who may need some quiet time, and some of the staff have additional autism-spectrum and dementia training. The museum has a quiet hour once a month for those with additional needs who prefer it less crowded and noisy – more information is available on the website.

FOOD & DRINK

You can picnic in the GRAFT community garden and on the balcony overlooking the marina, or eat in the museum café, but if you explore along the waterfront and in the city centre, you’ll find plenty more eating and drinking options.

182 Wales Millennium Centre, Cardiff

Address: Bute Place, Cardiff Bay CF10 5AL

Web: www.wmc.org.uk

Hours:
- Box office open daily 10am–6pm, later on performance days
- Dates: closed 25 Dec
- Entry: building free; performance prices vary, but [C]free

The award-winning Wales Millennium Centre has a commitment to engaging with the disabled community that is as impressive as the building’s iconic design. Since opening in the early 2000s, the centre has become a world-renowned venue for the arts, but it is also an inclusive meeting place for the local community, a rehearsal space for theatre groups, a venue for talks and workshops, and home to its own youth-led radio station. The magnificent large-scale auditorium hosts arts events ranging from hip-hop to ballet, opera to musicals, and contemporary dance to stand-up comedy. You can also see performances by the BBC National Orchestra of Wales and enjoy the annual Festival of Voice (www.festivalofvoice.wales). There are regular backstage tours available for groups, and (at the weekend) for individuals, plus pre-show touch tours providing opportunities for the visually impaired to explore the stage, sets and costumes. Audio-described, captioned and BSL-interpreted dates are available for nearly all the shows in the Donald Gordon Theatre. A new season in the Weston Studio, “Performances for the Curious”, has created further accessible works with “pay what you feel” dates.

Theatres can be tricky places for disabled people, but here every effort has been made to make the venue as welcoming, navigable and accessible as possible. The centre has sixteen Blue Badge disabled parking bays, all under cover, and bookable in advance (a booking fee applies in some cases). There are automatic doors at all the main entrances, two lifts and level access to all areas. Accessible toilets are dotted throughout the centre, with a Changing Places toilet on the ground floor. The theatres have accessible seating and wheelchair access on every level. There are induction loops in all venues and ticket counters. Signage and directions around the building are given in large clear type and raised text – in both Welsh and English.

Braille. Assistance dogs are welcome in all areas of the Wales Millennium Centre. If you would like your dog to remain with you during the performance, ask ticket staff for suggested seating. Alternatively you can leave your dog with a member of the front of house staff during the performance. Quiet spaces are available for those on the autism spectrum – the centre works with the National Autistic Society (NAS) and has been granted the Autism Friendly award. There is also an app designed to help those who need it to navigate their way through the building. Carers go free as part of the Hynt scheme (www.hynt.co.uk).

FOOD & DRINK

This is a truly public building, where people can come to meet each other, have something to eat and enjoy themselves. Others work from here, or just enjoy the view with a coffee and cake in one of the cafés. The lounge bar and restaurant ffresh serves full pre-show meals, using the finest Welsh ingredients – the dishes are all one hundred percent gluten free, and half of the choices are vegan or vegetarian.

183 Principality Stadium Tours, Cardiff

Address: Westgate Street CF10 1NS  Web: www.principalitystadium.wales/tours  Tel: 029 20822432
Hours: Mon–Sat 10am–5pm, Sun & bank hols 10.15am–4pm; tour times are subject to change, so book ahead
Dates: tours do not run on 1 Jan, 25–26 Dec & on event days
Entry: [D]£12.50 [C]free [A]£12.50 [5–15s]£9 [under 5s]free [Con]£10 [Fam]£38; for group discounts, contact customercare@wru.wales
Cardiff’s state-of-the-art Principality Stadium (previously known as the Millennium Stadium) features a fully retractable roof and is the home of the Welsh Rugby Union (WRU). Described by the WRU as “the best rugby venue in the world”, it can be visited on a behind-the-scenes tour that leaves you with a keen sense of the huge scale and national standing of this most impressive site.

Tours explore all levels of the stadium, from the Ray Gravell press room, deep in the bowels of the terraces, to the heights of the President’s Box overlooking the verdant turf below. There are plenty of great photo opportunities along the way, such as standing by your favourite team member’s shirt or raising a trophy in a victorious pose. For many, the highlight is visiting the atmospheric “Dragon’s Lair” home-side changing rooms. The tour guides are knowledgeable and entertaining, and even those visitors not passionate about sport will be caught up in the spirit of Welsh patriotism that the stadium evokes.

On-site disabled parking spaces can be booked in advance. Access from the parking area to the tour’s starting point in the WRU shop is via a long ramp. Step-free access to the stadium section of the tour is back along this ramp (which manual wheelchair users may need assistance to ascend) and via lifts. Although most areas visited have level access, a few small sections are not wheelchair accessible, though this doesn’t detract from the enjoyment of the visit. It’s worth noting that tours proceed at a fairly speedy pace, with much walking or wheeling and little opportunity to rest. An accessible lift takes you to the WRU shop floor. There are many disabled toilets available, all operated by RADAR key, and assistance dogs are welcome by prior arrangement.

FOOD & DRINK As the Principality Stadium is situated in the heart of Cardiff city centre, there’s no shortage of restaurants to suit all pockets within a hundred yards.

184 Giant’s Causeway, County Antrim

The Giant’s Causeway is Northern Ireland’s only UNESCO World Heritage Site, and for sheer otherworldliness, the Causeway can’t be beaten. Made up of a collection of 40,000 interlinked basalt columns running for six kilometres along the northeastern Irish coast between Benbane and Causeway heads, the site is the result of a subterranean explosion some sixty million years ago. A huge mass of molten basalt was spewed out on to the surface, which, on cooling, solidified into what are, essentially, crystals. Folklore, meanwhile, dictates that the Causeway was built by giant Ulster warrior Fionn Mac Cumhail.

Many of the formations have names (“the Giant’s Boot”, “the Camel” and “the Granny”), and the local myths relating to how they came about are explored at the Giant’s Causeway Visitor Centre – the Boot is reputed to be a staggering shoe size 93.5. Sunken into the ground and made from locally quarried basalt, the visitor centre blends into the landscape with indigenous grasses on the roof providing a habitat for wildlife. Inside, exhibition panels and 3D and hands-on displays provide detail on the geological and scientific nature of the area, while you get to meet the various characters that have shaped the landscape hereabouts. There’s an excellent topographic model of the Causeway, with different textures to give the sight-impaired an idea of the ruggedness of what’s outside.
The car park is located a couple of hundred metres from the visitor centre. Inside, wide aisles and throughways make access a breeze; steps are hazard-marked and handrailed, and ramps to the upper levels are easy to navigate and not too steep. Flooring is smooth, and there is an accessible toilet with a fully equipped changing area. You can request a portable induction loop, or a general audio guide for those with visual impairments.

It’s worth pointing out that you only have to pay if you’re parking at the site or accessing the stones via the visitor centre – otherwise follow the signposted path that starts near (but bypasses) the visitor centre. From the visitor centre, it’s a fifteen-minute walk down to the stones. The pathway isn’t particularly steep, but it is unrelenting and narrow – if you’re on wheels, your best bet is the accessible shuttlebus (£1 each way), which takes wheelchairs and scooters by the driver-operated ramp at the front door. Mobility-impaired visitors will not be able to walk on the Causeway itself, which is rough, cold and rugged, but the view of the stones is still spectacular. Be mindful that it can get very busy in the summer months, so we’d recommend a visit as early (or as late) in the day as possible.

FOOD & DRINK
The café area is flat and accessible, and staff are friendly and helpful. Try the cake, which is top notch.

185 Portstewart Strand, County Derry

Address: National Trust Portstewart Strand Visitor Centre, 118 Strand Road, Portstewart BT55 7PG
Web: www.nationaltrust.org.uk/portstewart-strand
Tel: 028 70836396
Hours: daily: Apr 10am–5pm; May & Sept 10am–6pm; June–Aug 10am–7pm; toilets at the beach open 10am–5pm, but may stay open later in summer; the barrier to the beach closes two hours after the rest of facilities
Dates: beach open all year, visitor centre closed 28 Sept–10 Apr
Entry: free for pedestrians, car £6.50, minibus £13, coach £19; no motorcycles allowed on the beach

Stretching from the seaside town of Portstewart to the mouth of the River Bann, Portstewart Strand is a glorious two-mile ribbon of golden sands and towering, pristine dunes. Owned by the National Trust, it’s a Blue Flag beach and an Area of Special Scientific Interest.

Beaches don’t get more accessible than this: visitors are allowed to drive their cars right onto the sand – an old tradition that the Trust inherited, and allowed to continue, when it bought this stretch of coast in 1980. Bring a picnic and take in the spectacular scenery as you listen to the surf crashing in from the Atlantic. Depending on the time of year, you may spot butterflies, wild orchids, pansies and thyme flourishing among the dunes, plus seals in the sea. The western end of the Strand, by the river estuary, is home to abundant birdlife, which you can view from a wheelchair-accessible hide.

From Portstewart, brown signs point the way to the Strand, where there are two designated accessible parking spaces available close to the entrance. Beach access is usually simple for wheelchairs, as the sand is hard and compacted. That said, anyone who plans to go far up the Strand should feel confident about navigating the beach in all weathers, as conditions can change very quickly. The paths through the dunes are not suitable for wheelchair users or those with restricted mobility. If you want to visit the bird hide, you’ll need to drive ten miles west to the other side of the river: it’s at the end of Barmouth Road, off the A2, towards Castlerock. From the car park, the path to the bird hide is level.

FOOD & DRINK By far the best option is to bring a picnic or dine at the award-winning Harry’s Shack (028 70831783; opening hours vary depending on the day and time of year; booking recommended). There are also numerous cafés and wine bars in nearby Portstewart town.

186 Derry, County Derry

Set against the backdrop of the hills of Donegal, Derry, or Londonderry (www.visitderry.com), is a walled city with a thriving arts scene and a lively atmosphere. It also boasts some outstanding historical attractions, including its old city walls – the last to be built in Europe and among the finest in the continent.

Completed in 1618, Derry’s walls have never been breached and remain perfectly intact. There’s ramped wheelchair access to the top from the Grand Parade, Magazine Street and Bank Place. Once up, you’ll be rewarded with some great views over the city’s landmarks, including St Columb’s Cathedral, with its tall, pointed spire, and the Millennium Forum, Derry’s main theatre and concert venue. Beyond, you can also see the dramatic lines and curves of the stunning new Peace Bridge across the River Foyle, as well as the old double-decker Craigavon Bridge, further south.

Tucked into the northernmost corner of the walls, near Magazine Gate, the excellent Tower Museum (028 71372411, www.derrystrabane.com/museums) is fully accessible and has induction loops and many touch exhibits. The highlight here is the museum’s “Story of Derry” exhibition, which gives an absorbing overview of the city’s history, from its origins as a monastic settlement in the sixth century right up to the present day – taking in the Troubles of the 1960s and 1970s.

You can explore this theme in more detail at the Museum of Free Derry (028 71360880, www.museumoffreederry.org), a short distance west of the city walls in the Bogside area, a majority-Catholic neighbourhood that played a key role in the conflict. Nearby, several large murals vividly depict some of the events of the conflict, while a few yards away the Bloody Sunday Memorial commemorates the victims of the infamous shootings that took place here in 1972. On Society Street in the old city, the Siege Museum (www.thesiegemuseum.org) tells the story of the Siege of Londonderry in 1688/89 and the history of the Apprentice Boys of Derry.

Inside the city walls, your best bet for parking is the Bishop Street car park, near the cathedral, which has five disabled spaces. Just outside the walls, the Foylebridge Shopping Centre has 35 accessible bays in its car park; the centre is also the location of Derry’s Shopmobility scheme (028 71368623, mary@shopmobilityfoyle.com), which can provide copies of the Derry Free Access map showing accessible toilets and parking spaces, and recommended routes for wheelchair users. There are a number of accessible toilets dotted around, including those at the Tourist Information Centre on Foyle Street; at the Foylebridge Shopping Centre; at the Richmond Shopping Centre, within the walls; at the Tower Museum; and a Changing Places facility in Ebrington Square. Note that the city centre has a few steep gradients, so manual wheelchair users may need assistance.
Spread over a hillside looking out to the Irish Sea on the beautiful North Antrim coast, Carnfunnock Country Park occupies a former country estate that’s been turned into a public park, complete with walking trails, formal gardens, a maze and numerous family-friendly activities.

On arrival at the wheelchair-accessible visitor centre, pick up a map of the park, which clearly marks steep slopes and steps. A good place to start exploring is the exquisite walled garden, featuring a butterfly garden, sun dials, a scented walkway and plenty of exotic plants. Close by, the maze – designed in the shape of Northern Ireland – will delight children, as will the excellent adventure playground (which includes accessible play equipment), face-painting and various activities within the activity centre. If that’s not enough, head to the privately run Family Fun Zone, with a miniature railway, mini golf, bungee run, trampolines and remote-controlled model boats and trucks, all at a small charge. There’s also a golf-driving range where you can perfect your swing.

The walking trails threading through the park are not all suitable for wheelchairs, but the Biodiversity Trail (just over half a mile) is fully accessible, and offers fine views of Carnfunnock Bay. Signs along the way tell you exactly what flora and fauna to look out for. Various events are held (Mar–Oct), such as Sunday band concerts in the Walled Garden (June–Aug); check website for full listings, and phone ahead as some activities are weather dependent.

Parking is straightforward in one of the five dedicated Blue Badge spaces about twenty yards from the visitor centre, with two extra spaces in the separate activity centre car park. Alternatively, the main lower and upper car parks, situated 130 yards and 230 yards respectively from the visitor centre, are both linked to the centre by hard-surfaced, wheelchair-accessible paths. All the walkways linking the park’s main, lower areas are fully accessible, and wheelchair users will have no problem accessing the walled garden and maze. The higher way-marked walking trails are not suitable for wheelchairs, though many can be accessed on powered scooters. In wet weather, however, even these may not be suitable. A Shopmobility scooter can be booked in advance by holders of a Shopmobility Membership Card for Northern Ireland or a Scooter Driving Licence issued by the Disabled Ramblers Northern Ireland. There are dedicated disabled toilets at the visitor centre and activity centre, with Braille signs at the toilet entrances.

Parklands Café in the visitor centre offers sweeping views from its terrace and a good range of breakfasts, inexpensive snacks (such as paninis, baked potatoes and burgers), a kids’ menu and delicious cakes. There’s a Snack Stop by the adventure playground plus picnic sites around the park, many fitted with grills where you can... use disposable barbecues. Mobile barbecues and covered barbecue areas can be rented by prior arrangement.

188 Seamus Heaney HomePlace, County Derry

Address: 45 Main Street, Bellaghy BT45 8HT Web: www.seamusheaneyhome.com Tel: 028 79387444

Honouring the life and work of the area’s most famous son, poet and Nobel Laureate Seamus Heaney, the Seamus Heaney HomePlace encompasses an interactive exhibition, split across two floors, and the impressive Helicon performance space that hosts a diverse cultural and arts programme throughout the year. As the name “HomePlace” suggests, the Heaney family moved to the quiet rural village of Bellaghy in 1953, when Seamus was still a teenager. Since its opening in 2016, tourists and Heaney enthusiasts alike have passed through the doors of this brilliant attraction.

Once through the spacious reception area and equipped with individual listening devices, visitors enter the calming and endlessly inspiring environment of the Seamus Heaney exhibition. Heaney’s family, rural upbringing and the characters and experiences that shaped him are firmly in the spotlight. The walls are adorned with examples of his more renowned and relevant work, illuminating the graceful and – at times – emotional word play that Heaney built his career and legacy upon. Extracts can also be heard through the listening devices as visitors trace the evolution of Heaney from farmer’s son to Nobel prize-winner. Both poetry and history are tastefully and interestingly presented throughout, with some interactive features along the way. The Creative Zone is an impressive and conscientious attempt to engage the younger generation and challenge perceptions of the traditional exhibition experience, allowing children (and adults) to hone and explore their artistic impulses. All this can be followed by a contemplative stroll around the Sensory Garden outside.

The car park includes four accessible bays a short distance from the main entrance. Seamus Heaney HomePlace is a modern, accessible building, with a lift from the ground floor to the first floor and ramps throughout. Accessibility for visitors with a range of disabilities has clearly been considered. At the entrance, two automatic doors lead into the reception area, which has a lowered counter section, and there’s seating here and in the exhibition. It’s an open and spacious setting with a relaxed atmosphere, and staff are friendly, approachable and accommodating; employees are trained on the “JAM Card” initiative which aids communication for people with a learning difficulty, Asperger’s, or on the autism spectrum. Exhibition numbers are limited to twenty people and quiet rooms can be made available, while the outdoor Sensory Garden is a peaceful spot with Braille signage. The exhibition’s individual listening devices allow visitors to hear Seamus Heaney reading select pieces aloud, and most videos have subtitles. Written information provided at reception can also be printed off in large format, and a hearing-loop system is in place in the Helicon Space. Family Movie Days are arranged regularly in this auditorium by a local organisation, Empower, which provides support for children under twelve with dyslexia, dyspraxia and on the autism spectrum; events have reduced lighting and sound, a dedicated quiet space and sensory equipment, and children have the freedom to leave their seats during the show. There are accessible toilets on both floors of the HomePlace, with grab rails and wide doors. A manual wheelchair is available to borrow and entry for carers is free.

FOOD & DRINK The HomePlace Café provides a selection of hot and cold food, signature salads, baked goods and beverages. It’s spacious and chairs are free standing.

189 Sperrin Mountain Drive, County Tyrone/Derry

Driving distance: 38 miles
Approx driving time without stops: 1 hour 20 minutes

Heading right through the heart of the Sperrin Mountains, this 38-mile drive rewards you with fabulous views and the chance to enjoy some nature along the way.

Six miles north of Omagh, on the B48, the Gortin Glen Forest Park (www.nidirect.gov.uk/gortin-glen-forest-park) is the western gateway to the Sperrin Mountains and marks the start of our scenic drive. Enter the park and you’ll come to a car park with accessible bays, a spacious adapted toilet and some accessible picnic tables nearby. Several trails lead through the forest from here, though none are wheelchair accessible. You can, however, enjoy the scenery from your car by following the park’s five-mile Forest Drive, which passes several panoramic viewpoints where you can soak up the mountain vistas. As you drive along, look out for the wild Sika deer that inhabit the park and for buzzards circling overhead.

Back on the B48, continue north through the mountains. You’ll soon pass the pretty village of Gortin, nestled in the Owenkillew river valley, and, four miles beyond, Plumbridge, by the Glenelly River, whose banks make a good picnic spot. From here, branch east along the B47 through the idyllic, steep-sided Glenelly Valley, carved through the mountains by ancient glacial flows. It’s a stunning road, offering awesome views of Mount Sawel, the highest peak in the Sperrin range at 2225 feet. Twenty miles east of Plumbridge, having left the high mountains behind, you’ll find plenty of places to stop for lunch in the lively village of Draperstown, famous locally as the site of a weekly sheep market on Fridays.

From Draperstown, it’s another twelve miles to the small village of Ballyronan, on the shore of Lough Neagh, the biggest lake in the British Isles. Head to the marina, where you can admire the fine views from an accessible boardwalk. There are picnic areas and paths through the woodland nearby.

FOOD & DRINK

Corner House Bar (028 79629855), on St Patrick’s Street in Draperstown, is a good old-fashioned pub serving tasty, down-to-earth food at reasonable prices. It also has a fully accessible toilet.

190 Ulster Folk and Transport Museum, Belfast

Address: Holywood, BT18 0EU  Web: www.nmni.com  Tel: 028 90428428  Hours: Tues–Sat 10am–5pm  Dates: closed 24–26 Dec  Entry: prices for admission to both museums: [D]free [C]free [A]£11 [5–17]£6 [under 5s]free [senior & student]£8.50 [Fam]£22 (1 adult, 3 children), £29 (2 adults, 3 children or 2 adults, 2 children); group discounts available; free parking

The Ulster Folk and Transport Museum is a stalwart of Northern Irish tourism. Comprising two separate and distinct museums located in very close proximity, this stellar double act gives a comprehensive overview of Northern Ireland’s cultural and industrial history.
The Transport Museum is a largely indoor attraction, boasting one of Europe’s most extensive transport collections, with trains, horse-drawn carriages, vintage motorbikes and cars. The excellent Titanic exhibition is both informative and interactive, taking a considered look at the world’s most famous ship and her beginnings in Belfast. The Folk Museum – mostly outside – depicts both urban and rural life more than a century ago, containing reconstructed houses, churches, farms, schools and more besides. Live demonstrations by costumed staff take place throughout the day, ranging from baking and linen weaving to blacksmithing and basket making, giving a unique insight into how our ancestors lived and worked in days gone by.

There’s accessible parking at both museums, and manual and powered wheelchairs can be borrowed from either entrance. There are a number of spacious accessible toilets provided throughout both sites, which have grab rails and low-level sinks. Inside the Transport Museum, the Rail and Road Galleries are spread over three floors with ramped access and plenty of seating throughout. There’s a hearing loop at reception and videos are subtitled. Look out for the gaps between platforms and trains (“Mind the Gap” signs are in place); in addition, boarding the train carriages will not be possible for wheelchair users. The Land, Sea & Sky Galleries, in a separate building, are accessed via a moderately steep outdoor walkway. The Folk Museum, meanwhile, is a largely outdoor venue. It lends itself to leisurely strolls through trees and flowerbeds, which make it peaceful, relaxing and enjoyable. That said, given the museum depicts Ireland more than one hundred years ago and demands historic authenticity, there are some limitations to access, particularly for visitors with physical disabilities. Walking distances between buildings are lengthy, there’s some hilly terrain, a few gravel paths, a cobbled street and steps into some buildings. Staff will help wherever possible, and an audio guide is available on request. A number of employees at both museums have autism-awareness and dementia-friendly training, as well as being able to tailor tours for blind and visually impaired people, while carers go free.
Both museums have cafés offering a range of baked goods, hot and cold dishes and individual lunchboxes for children. These have freestanding chairs and tables.

191 Belfast Zoo

Address: Antrim Road, Belfast BT36 7NP  Web: www.belfastzoo.co.uk  Tel: 028 90776277  Hours: daily: Apr–Sept 10am–6pm (last entry 5pm, zoovenir shop and cafés close 6pm); 0ct–March 10am–4pm (last entry 2.30pm, animal houses close 3.30pm, zoovenir shop and cafés close 4pm)  Dates: closed 25–26 Dec  Entry: [D]£13 [C]free [A]£13 [4–16s]£6.50 [under 4s]free [Con]£6.50 [Fam]£36.40 (2 adults, 3 children); group discounts available online

Belfast Zoo is home to some 120 species of animal – the exotic, the rare and the endangered. Hear the lions roar and see the flamingoes dance as you make your way around this beautifully located zoo, with stunning hilltop views over Belfast.

Opened back in 1934, the zoo has long been known for its conservation work. It is currently involved in more than sixty global and collaborative breeding programmes as well as native-species projects which help to protect local wildlife. Animals are housed in spacious enclosures across the Cavehill site. Particular highlights include feeding time for the penguins, Californian sea lions and the Asian elephants. Zookeepers give regular talks to visitors and a host of experiences can be pre-booked; children will love getting up close to some of their favourite animals, including lemurs, giraffes and penguins. The ultimate zoo fan can even sign up to be a “Zookeeper for a Day”.

Being outside and interacting with animals both have proven positive impacts on mental health; Belfast Zoo is a relaxed, outdoor environment, so everyone will benefit from the fresh air and panoramic views over Belfast. There are fifteen accessible parking bays located just a few metres from the main entrance, which has level access, automatic doors and a lowered section on the reception desk. All staff are trained in disability awareness and the JAM card posters at reception signal the zoo is part of the JAM scheme, an initiative helping people with learning disabilities, Asperger’s, and on the autism spectrum. Free audio tours are available, and a SignVideo is also offered at reception as part of a 12-month pilot, allowing BSL users to communicate with zoo staff using an interpreter in real time. A fast-track queue system is available for disabled visitors, too.

While it is clear that accessibility is high on the agenda here, the hilltop site dictates that there are some steep, hilly areas and significant distances between enclosures. Seats are dotted around the zoo, signs inform visitors of gradients and a Zoo-mobile (available to book in advance on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays in June, July and August) can provide a drop-off service to the top of the hill or whisk mobility-impaired visitors on an inclusive tour. There are a number of accessible toilets located around the zoo, and manual wheelchairs can be borrowed for free. Special events such as sensory days and quiet hours cater to those on the autism spectrum and animal lovers with other sensory requirements. Carers receive free entry.

FOOD & DRINK

The Lion’s Den restaurant is open year-round and serves a selection of hot food and snacks as well as a selection of baked goods. It’s roomy, with freestanding tables and chairs. The Treetop Tearooms is open in the spring and summer months.

192 Titanic Belfast

Address: 1 Olympic Way, Queen’s Road, Titanic Quarter, Belfast BT3 9EP  Web: www.titanicbelfast.com
Tel: 028 90766386; accessibility line 028 90766399
Hours: Jan–Mar & Nov–Dec daily 10am–5pm; Apr–May daily 9am–6pm; June daily 8.30am–7pm; July–Aug Sun–Thur 8.30am–7pm, Fri–Sat 8.30am–8pm; Sept daily 8.30am–6pm; Oct Mon–Fri 10am–5pm, Sat–Sun 9am–6pm; last admission 1hr 40min before closing; Late Saver tickets are available 1hr before closing but exclude the cable-car ride
Dates: closed 24–26 Dec

Step back to eighteenth-century Belfast and learn about its proud tradition of shipbuilding at the world-famous Harland and Wolff shipyard – the birthplace of RMS Titanic. With nine galleries of interactive exhibition space housed inside a building clad with three thousand sheets of silver-anodised aluminium, the iconic Titanic Belfast sits as the centrepiece of Belfast’s Titanic Quarter.

Inside the massive complex (around 150,700 square feet), you can learn about the story behind the infamous maritime disaster, through reading authentic historical accounts about the luxurious ocean liner that sank during its maiden voyage in 1912, claiming the lives of more than 1500 passengers and crew. There are also exhibits such as a dark ride, an underwater exploration theatre and recreations of the ship's cabins. Everything is presented in an interesting style using a mixture of holograms, virtual reality and historic artefacts. There is also a cable-car ride, which takes visitors around in carriages to view the various different processes in the ship’s construction. Electric wheelchairs cannot be taken on the ride, but there’s a car that can accommodate one manual wheelchair. Help is also available for those who choose to leave their chairs behind.

The building itself is inviting and suitable for those with access needs. Disabled parking is available on two levels of the underground car park and is conveniently located next to the lift that takes you to the gallery and ticket area. All the entrances and exits to the museum have automatic doors and there’s a hearing-loop system plus a BSL audio-visual guide. There’s also an audio-described guide for blind and visually impaired visitors. Manual wheelchairs and mobility scooters are available free on request. Several staff members have disability, autism, sign-language and dementia training, and “VIP” wristbands can be worn so that staff can identify those who may need extra assistance, such as fast-tracking through queues. Essential carers go free; where possible, bring supporting documentation.

FOOD & DRINK

Bistro 401 serves a wide selection of food, with the waiting staff dressed in the style of the crew onboard Titanic, while The Galley Café offers drinks, sandwiches and pastries. Afternoon tea is available on Sundays in the Titanic Suite. Hickson’s Point, a pub-like setting, serves up traditional food and drink and live music.

193 W5, Belfast

Address: 2 Queen’s Quay BT3 9QO  Web: www.w5online.co.uk  Tel: 028 90467700  Hours: Mon–Fri 10am–5pm, Sat 10am–6pm, Sun noon–6pm; check website for seasonal variations  Dates: closed 24–26 Dec

You don't have to wait very long to get a rainy day in Belfast, and when you do, it’s a perfect time to visit the city’s “Millennium Project”, the Odyssey Complex – where the highlight for families is W5, a science and discovery centre with more than 250 interactive exhibits.

The attraction invites you to explore five very important questions: Who, What, Where, When and Why? If your kids want to know where electricity comes from, or how to beat a lie detector, then they’ll love this place, and it will entertain them for hours. Adults will be happy too – making soaring rings of steam and trying to unlock the secrets of the ever-turning marble ball. The majority of exhibits are hands-on so you can push buttons, pull levers, turn cogs and swing on ropes as you explore the five floors – there’s even an exhibit teaching children how to read Braille. In designated demonstration zones, Team W5 present experiments at allocated times throughout the day and there’s an area designed specifically for younger children. Additional seasonal events and exhibitions take place, including at Easter, Halloween and Christmas and during the summer holidays.

The sixty car-parking spaces closest to the Odyssey Complex are reserved for Blue Badge holders, available on a first-come, first-served basis. All the designated bays... are within fifty yards of the entrance, with just one crossing and no steps to negotiate. Inside the Odyssey Complex, there is lift access to the upper levels, and level access throughout the ground-floor area where W5 is located. W5 is an accessible and friendly attraction, where most of the exhibits are multi-sensory and interactive. Accessible toilets are available on all floors in the complex, and there's a hearing-loop system at the ticket desk and in the lecture theatre.

FOOD & DRINK Visitors are encouraged to bring their own food and drink, and there are designated picnic areas. There's a small coffee shop serving Costa Coffee as well as several bars, cafés and restaurants in the Odyssey Pavilion, including a branch of Pizza Hut on the ground floor, which offers quick and tasty pizzas in an accessible venue.

First opened in 1895, the Grand Opera House is one of Belfast's oldest and best-loved venues. It presents a year-round programme of West End and locally produced musicals and drama as well as ballet, opera, comedy and family shows; this is also the home of pantomime in Northern Ireland.

The Main Auditorium is a magnificent example of Victorian architecture: the original decor has been well maintained, and the atmosphere is intimate and relaxed. In 2013, the theatre was awarded the Disability Equality Charter Award in recognition of its ongoing commitment to ensuring accessibility for everyone. All levels of the theatre, except The Gods, are wheelchair accessible, and there are bars over two levels of the theatre which are wheelchair accessible with sections of lowered counters. Disabled parking is available on-street and in the Great Northern multi-storey car park in Hope Street. The Europa bus centre and Great Victoria Street train station are adjacent to the theatre, making it easily accessible via public transport. The main entrance is level with a lift that takes you to all other floors. Accessible toilets with grab-rails and low-level mirrors are on every level, except in The Gods. Make sure you state when booking if you’re planning to visit in a powered scooter. Colour contrast is excellent throughout and visitors with assistance dogs can be reassured the acoustics are not too intrusive. Audio-described, signed and captioned performances are available for most productions, and there’s a relaxed performance of the pantomime each year with extra staff on hand to help and a chill-out space for those on the autism spectrum or with other sensory conditions. Brochures are available in different formats on request. Customers wishing to gain a free companion ticket should register with the theatre’s Access for All scheme.

FOOD & DRINK
The foyer bar serves pastries before and during performances. Opposite, The Crown Liquor Saloon (www.nicholsonspubs.co.uk), Belfast’s most famous pub, serves various meals and drinks.

Ideas
Heritage
Fountains Abbey (North Yorkshire HG4 3DY; www.fountainsabbey.org.uk) The centrepiece of Studley Royal Estate and Park, the abbey is Britain’s most complete Cistercian foundation. Smooth, hard paths and a recommended wheelchair route make exploring easy.

Churchill Museum and Cabinet War Rooms (London SW1A 2AQ; www.iwm.org.uk/visits/churchill-war-rooms) This underground complex beneath Whitehall housed Cabinet meetings, intelligence, communications and map rooms as well as Churchill’s domestic quarters. Parking is tricky but access is excellent – a lift down from street level is a great boon – though some passageways are rather narrow.

Blickling Estate (Norwich NR11 6NF; www.nationaltrust.org.uk/blickling-estate) A fully accessible restaurant and shop, plus the availability of a lift to make most of the house accessible, gives any visitor the opportunity to enjoy this beautiful and imposing estate to its fullest. A circular wheelchair route around the park and an optional sensory experience make this a very accessible day out.
Oxford Island is one of Northern Ireland’s prime conservation areas. On a peninsula jutting into Lough Neagh – the largest lake in the British Isles – this national nature reserve is a tranquil retreat, far away from the hustle and bustle of daily family life.

It is busy with wildlife though – especially as a sanctuary for wintering wildfowl. Guided trails lead around the reserve, passing along the shore and through woodland that was planted around fifty years ago. On the route you’ll pass by meadows that are home to Irish breeds of cattle. You’ll also come across picnic areas, play parks and ponds with plenty of ducks and swans splashing around and hoping to be fed. There are two bird-watching hides (Croaghan and Kinnego) and an open-topped viewing area overlooking Lough Neagh and Kinnego Bay – spend time in these to see how many of the wildfowl and songbirds you can identify. Kinnego Marina is in the reserve and is also the largest marina on Lough Neagh – from here, for a charge, visitors, including wheelchair users, can enjoy a pre-booked relaxing trip on the lake in the Master McGra vessel.

The Discovery Centre is the main building in the reserve, with a reception desk, café, shop and tourist-information desk. From time to time, exhibitions are run in the centre too. The centre has accessible parking, and is a good place to start an exploration of the island. There are several car parks in the reserve, so if you have trouble covering long distances then it makes sense to drive from car park to car park and explore the surrounding area of each one. The marina has two car parks, with plenty of designated disabled spaces. Two Shopmobility powered scooters and a wheelchair are available from the Discovery Centre. Most of the paths in the reserve are either tarmac or compact gravel and easily accessible for wheelchair users. Unfortunately, there are few routes that have rest seats, although there are numerous picnic areas to stop at. Many of the play areas are fenced and the Discovery Centre and Kinnego Marina have safety flooring. Croaghan and Kinnego hides are both wheelchair accessible. Croaghan Hide is easily reached from the car parks at the Discovery Centre. The closest car park to Kinnego Hide is at Artscape (a facility on the island for community arts), where there is one accessible parking space – the car park is a four-minute walk or push away from the hide. The accessible toilet at the marina requires a RADAR key.

FOOD & DRINK

The Loughside Café in the modern Discovery Centre serves breakfast, lunch and afternoon snacks. The soups, sandwiches, cakes and hot dish of the day are all reasonably priced.

196 Belleek Pottery Visitor Centre, County Fermanagh

Address: 3 Main Street, Belleek BT93 3FY
Web: www.belleekpottery.ie
Tel: 028 68659300 or 028 68658501

Hours: Jan & Feb Mon–Fri 9am–5.30pm; Mar–June Mon–Fri 9am–5.30pm, Sat 10am–5.30pm, Sun 2–5.30pm; July–Sept Mon–Fri 9am–6pm, Sat 10am–6pm, Sun noon–5.30pm; Oct–Dec Mon–Fri 9am–5.30pm, Sat 10am–5.30pm, Sun 2–5pm (visitors are advised to call ahead to check opening hours and tour times; there are no tours on Sundays; tours run on Saturdays but only between June and Sept)
Dates: closed over Christmas & New Year
Entry: [D]£4 [C]free [A]£6 [over 12s]£4 [under 12s]free [Con]£4 [Fam]£10

Originally set up by a landowner to provide employment for locals suffering the after-effects of the potato famine, the Belleek factory has been producing pottery for more than 160 years – longer than anywhere else in Ireland. Its products are exceptionally popular, particularly in the US, which imports around two-thirds of Belleek’s output.

The Belleek International Collector’s Society has 7500 loyal members worldwide and many own hundreds of pieces of the trademark porcelain. You don’t have to be an avid fan to enjoy the visitor centre, however – anyone can appreciate the craftsmanship on show. If you’re keen to get collecting, you can make a start in the spacious showroom, which has some exclusive pieces on sale, but visit the museum first to brush up on the history of the products and admire the beautifully crafted pieces on display. In addition, fascinating half-hour tours take visitors around the production area: you’ll witness working moulds being made and liquid slip being poured; watch the designers painstakingly shape the intricate floral designs; feel the heat in the kiln firing area; and finally admire the work of the artists as they delicately paint the porcelain. You can chat to some of the craftspeople, and you might even have the chance to get your hands dirty.

There are seven Blue Badge spaces directly in front of the visitor centre, and the accessible toilets are roomy. The tour route is completely level, with plenty of space for wheelchairs. The guides are keen for everyone to get the best possible view, and chairs are provided for visitors on foot to rest at many of the stop points. Wheelchairs are available, but they can be rather hard-seated – take a cushion along for comfort. Visitors with visual impairments are able to touch and feel some of the products made in the factory, ideally by prior arrangement.

FOOD & DRINK The Belleek Tearoom serves good-quality lunches and afternoon tea on fine Belleek crockery. It’s split-level, but you can specify that ground-floor seating is required. If you prefer to bring your own food, use one of the tables on the grassy area outside.

Northern Ireland’s treasure house of the past and present, the Ulster Museum is home to rich collections of art, history and the natural sciences, spanning everything from ancient relics to modern masterpieces.

Modern glass and steel walkways lead visitors into the art, history and science galleries, which tell the story of the evolution of Ireland, from Jurassic times through to recent political history. But it isn’t just Irish history that’s covered – must-see exhibits include the gleaming collection of gold coins and jewellery rescued from the Spanish Armada fleet shipwrecked on the Giant’s Causeway; Takabuti, an Egyptian mummy brought to the museum in 1835 (along with a skilful reproduction of the head); seven galleries packed with spectacular art; and the ever-popular Peter the Polar Bear, whose home is the impressive Window on our World gallery. The interactive Discovery Zones – nature, art and history – are particularly popular with children, and include a number of touch exhibits, such as a fossilised dinosaur egg, snake skin and shark teeth.

Visitors with accessibility needs can move round the museum with ease (though, as parts of the building are listed, a few areas remain difficult to access without help, such as the “Deep in Time” gallery). There are five Blue Badge parking spaces, and ramps lead through the automatic doors into the stunning entrance hall, where you’ll find a low-level desk and cloakroom with lockers, and the two main lifts. Elsewhere there are three additional lifts, which provide alternatives to the staircases in the old part of the building. Ramps inside the building have handrails and level rest points. Most exhibits have low display panels and there are rest seats dotted around, with portable chairs available too. A few wheelchairs are available to borrow, and there are plenty of disabled toilets on site. Visitors with sensory disabilities can call ahead to organise free personal guided tours. Quiet rooms and child-sized ear defenders are available – just ask a member of staff.

FOOD & DRINK The spacious museum restaurant overlooks the lovely Botanic Gardens next door, or you can eat your own packed lunch in the picnic room on the ground floor if the weather keeps you from venturing outside.
198 Armagh Observatory and Planetarium, County Armagh

Address: College Hill, Armagh BT61 9DB  Web: www.armagh.ac.uk  Tel: 028 37523689  Hours: Mon–Sat 10am–5pm; check website for seasonal variations  Dates: check website for dates  Entry: pre-booking is essential for shows [D]£7 [C]£7 [A]£8 [child]£5.75 [Con]£7 [Fam]£25 (2 adults, 3 children)

Lean back and take a visual journey across the night sky then step outside and repeat your voyage through space on foot – at Ireland’s leading astronomical education centre, you can do both and learn a great deal about our solar system in the process.

The domed ceiling of the planetarium is illuminated by a state-of-the-art digital-projection system and plays host to a changing programme of family-friendly shows (pre-booking advised), from close-up tours of the Red Planet to learning how to identify those constellations visible with the naked eye. Aside from the planetarium itself, there’s an engrossing exhibition area featuring, among other displays, a 4.5-billion-year-old meteorite. Both the planetarium and the nearby Armagh Observatory are located in the fourteen-acre Astropark, whose rolling green landscape reveals all sorts of educational models that complement the starry scenes you’ll have seen inside. Wandering round the impressive scale model of the Universe, for example, gives you an immediate grasp of the relative sizes of the eight planets, the distances between them and the supremacy of the Sun.
The planetarium complex is straightforward to navigate, with ramped walkways approaching the main entrance and all areas of the ground floor, and two Blue Badge spaces nearby. A lift provides access to the first floor and there are designated viewing areas for up to eleven wheelchair users in the theatre itself. There’s an accessible toilet on each floor. Signage in the main areas and the lift are given in Braille, and assistance dogs are welcome – bear in mind, though, that the special effects used in the theatre could be unsettling for dogs, and the revolving images overhead can take a little getting used to for human visitors too! Both the reception and the theatre have an induction loop. Lastly, paved walkways weave around the Astropark and there are plenty of places to sit down en route. Separate screenings can be organised for those on the autism spectrum, or the complex can open early to allow quiet access; email reception@armaghplanet.com in advance and they can advise you of quieter times to visit and help with any special needs.

FOOD & DRINK
The on-site café serves a good range of hot and cold drinks and snacks (open Sat & Sun and school hols). In Armagh city, the snack bar and restaurant in the Market Place Theatre (www.marketplacearmagh.com) are recommended, as is the Charlemont Arms (www.charlemontarmshotel.com) on English Street.

199 Navan Centre and Fort, County Armagh

Address: 81 Killylea Road BT60 4LD Web: www.navan.com Tel: 028 37529644; textphone 18001 3752 9644 Hours: check website for opening times Entry: check website for admission charges

Known in Old Irish as Emain Macha, the Navan Fort is celebrated as the ancient royal seat of the Kings and Queens of Ulster. It is a significant site that’s fascinating for archaeologists but provides a stimulating step back in time for any visitor.

Here, children can learn about their ancestry and the history of Ireland, with Celtic costumes for them to dress up in. Outside the centre is a replica dwelling, showing how our Iron Age and early Christian-period ancestors lived (open April–Sept). Celtic characters bring all this to life – explaining and demonstrating the different aspects of day-to-day life, from farming to weaving. There are models of the weapons the inhabitants would have used, and it is even possible to taste the food they would have eaten. Indeed, this is a multi-sensory experience, with not only authentic sights and sounds, but smells too. The fort itself – a circular hill, thought to have been used for pagan rituals and ceremonies at one time – is a ten-minute walk away. Visitors are permitted to climb the hill – at the top, the views across the beautiful, green countryside are spectacular. There are daily, guided tours of the fort; times vary by season. Signs located around the perimeter of the fort give a brief history of the site.

There’s accessible parking by the visitor centre, with one manual wheelchair available to borrow; book in advance in the busy summer months. To access the fort, there is a narrow gate to negotiate. The indoor exhibition areas are completely flat and accessible, with space for up to fifteen wheelchairs. While the surfaces are less smooth in the reconstructed dwelling, it is accessed via a gentle slope.
from the centre, and has an entrance and exit suitable for wheelchair users. To mount the fort, a steep climb and steps can’t be avoided, so access isn’t possible for everyone. There is, however, parking and a great vantage point at the bottom of the hill, limited to three cars at any time. The centre is a relaxed environment and its layout allows visitors to wander around at their own pace. Staff have detailed autism-awareness training, and offer a full range of adaptive services for visitors with autism-spectrum disorders, including a pop-up tent and sensory bags. Staff also have training in accepting JAM cards, which allow people with a learning difficulty, autism or a communication barrier to tell others they need “Just A Minute” discreetly and easily. The website has detailed information about what visitors will experience during their trip.

FOOD & DRINK

There is a coffee shop on site serving a range of meals, sandwiches and scones. For eating al fresco, there is a picnic area with tables and chairs outside the centre, and also plenty of grassy areas dotted around to relax on.

Dates: no closures

![Accessibility Icons]

The Silent Valley Nature Trail is a gorgeous, very accessible, loop of about a mile through the Kilkeel River Valley, amid the Mourne Mountains’ spectacular scenery.

It begins at the car park a short distance south of the Silent Valley Reservoir, which was built in the 1920s to provide Belfast with a new water supply; part of the trail follows the old railway line that brought supplies and materials to the construction site. Gently undulating, with no steps, the route passes through heathland and woodland, and over the Kilkeel River on an accessible wooden bridge. Look out for the numerous dragonflies and damselflies by the riverside – you might be able to spot trout or salmon in the water too. In spring and summer there are lots of butterflies, as well as a good covering of wildflowers, including bluebells, dog violets and foxgloves. You can extend your journey to take in the reservoir itself, an impressive sight against a stunning backdrop of rippling hills. There’s also a children’s play park, picnic area and other walking trails, with podcasts for walkers to download as they head into the wild.

The nature trail is part of Silent Valley Mountain Park, which has a fully accessible visitor centre operated by Northern Ireland Water. There is a car park with four accessible spaces close to the start of the trail, and there are two additional Blue Badge spaces near the café and the visitor centre. There’s one fully accessible toilet in the car park and another at the visitor centre. The visitor centre at the beginning of the trail has social stories, photos and descriptions of what visitors can expect to see and do when they arrive here. The trail itself is level and constructed of light gravel and cinder; in theory it’s an all-weather surface, but it can sometimes get muddy.
in wet weather. There are plenty of rest benches along the route. To round it all off, spending time outside in green space among nature has proven benefits to mental health.

FOOD & DRINK There’s a beautifully sited picnic area by the river, on the trail, with wheelchair-accessible tables. A café next to the visitor centre serves cakes, sandwiches and drinks.
Useful contacts

This chapter features Rough Guides’ pick of the specialist organisations and independent companies that provide advice, assistance and services to help disabled people with holidays and day trips in Britain. Getting around has the lowdown on practical services for your day-to-day travel needs. Travel advice and listings flags up disability charities and organisations that provide travel and leisure advice and aid, plus specialist providers of accessible travel and holiday information. Accommodation booking includes companies that can book accessible accommodation, while The arts highlights useful arts-related organisations. Finally, British tourism details the national tourist boards and keepers of national heritage whose access information and advice stands out.

Getting around

Bus pass scheme, England Everyone who is of state pension age plus disabled people are eligible for free off-peak travel on English local buses. Passes are available from the local council. Carers may be able to travel for free or pay a reduced fare if travelling with someone who holds a Disabled Person’s Bus Pass. Further information is available at www.gov.uk/apply-for-disabled-bus-pass.

Bus pass schemes, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland run independent bus pass schemes. In Wales, contact your local council for a pass, which allows disabled travellers to get around for free. A similar scheme is run by Transport Scotland at www.transport.gov.scot and requires a National Entitlement card. In Northern Ireland, over 60s and disabled travellers are eligible for free or half-price travel: check www.nidirect.gov.uk/articles/free-and-concessionary-bus-and-rail-travel for details.

Carers UK www.carersuk.org Carers UK provides expert information and advice as well as running carers’ groups. The organisation champions the rights of carers and works with local authorities to improve carer services throughout the UK.

Discover Northern Ireland www.discovernorthernireland.com The Discover Northern Ireland website has suggestions for days out and itineraries, plus lists of events and festivals in the various different regions – plus, of course, links to accommodation and activities.

English Heritage www.english-heritage.org.uk; 0370 3331181 Owners of more than 400 historic properties, English Heritage operates an Access for All policy. Access details for many of the properties are available on the website: click on “visit”, then “places” and search for properties. You can filter for wheelchair accessibility, too.

Experience Community CIC www.experiencecommunity.co.uk Not-for-profit organisation that provides video guides, photos and information about walks and leisure activities in Yorkshire for people with disabilities and the wider community. They also organise rambles and training sessions using specialist equipment.

National Parks www.nationalparks.uk/visiting/outdoor-activities/accessforall The Access for All area on this website covers trails, Tramper hire, parking and other facilities in fifteen national parks.

National Trust www.nationaltrust.org.uk; 0344 8001895; enquiries@nationaltrust.org.uk Carers of disabled visitors get free entry to National Trust properties, with an annual Essential Companion card. There is an Access Guide with detailed information for disabled visitors, and the website has an increasing level of detail about each property, with more and more attractions providing downloadable access statements. Predictably with heritage sites, certain properties have some inaccessible areas, but the dedicated Access for All team is working to make improvements. For particular needs provision, call the site ahead of your visit.

The National Trust for Scotland www.nts.org.uk; 0131 4580200 The largest conservation charity in Scotland looks after myriad places to visit, from castles to coastlines. All their attractions have a basic level of access information on the website.

Visit Britain www.visitbritain.com Under the Practical Information drop-down on the main menu of the website, there’s an option for “Accessible Britain” in the “Getting around Britain” sub-section, where you’ll find an overview of useful links. One takes you to a more detailed online Guide to Britain for Disabled Travellers.

Visit England www.visitengland.com The English tourist board runs an Access for All scheme on their website (go to “Plan your visit”) which includes mini-guides to short breaks across the country and practical information. Their National Accessible Scheme rates the accessibility of accommodation in England. It also helps tourism businesses make improvements in access and the level of information available to visitors.

Visit Scotland www.visitscotland.com; info@visitscotland.com The Scottish Tourism Board runs a quality-assurance scheme for disabled access. The accommodation section of the website has an “Accessible accommodation” page, where you can filter searches with an impressive list of access options.

Visit Wales www.visitwales.com; 0333 0063001; info@visitwales.com The website of the Welsh tourist board links through to a wide variety of accommodation and activities. Although you can’t filter the listings by provision for disabled visitors, there are accessibility guides for each region. These list places to visit, things to do, places to stay and helpful links.

WHAT DO OTHER TRAVELLERS THINK ABOUT ROUGH GUIDES TRIPS?

This Spain tour company did a fantastic job to make our dream trip perfect. We gave them our travel budget, told them where we would like to go, and they did all of the planning. Our drivers and tour guides were always on time and very knowledgeable. The hotel accommodations were better than we would have found on our own. Only one time did we end up in a location that we had not intended to be in. We called the 24 hour phone number, and they immediately fixed the situation.

Don A, USA

Our trip was fantastic! Transportation, accommodations, guides - all were well chosen! The hotels were well situated, well appointed and had helpful, friendly staff. All of the guides we had were very knowledgeable, patient, and flexible with our varied interests in the different sites. We particularly enjoyed the side trip to Tangier! Well done! The itinerary you arranged for us allowed maximum coverage of the country with time in each city for seeing the important places.

Sharon, USA
